PERISHED IN WAVE.

Five Hundred Dead in Tumaco.

William E. Bruce Witnessed the Tidal Catastrophe on Colombian Coast.

Two Earthquakes Followed by Wall of Ocean Water That Swept Streets.

Tidings from the South Seas. Hurricane and Eruption. Villages Destroyed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Authentic information of the tidal wave and series of earthquakes that swept the west coast of Colombia, January 31 and following days, were obtained from William E. Bruce, mining manager of the Certidue Mining and Dredging Company, today. He was in Tumaco at the time.

Meager reports of the great damage and loss of life caused by the tidal wave were not received for two weeks after it occurred, owing to the breaks in the cable, which parted in ten places below Buena Ventura.

Bruce asserts that the reports were exaggerated, and that instead of the loss of two or three thousand lives, probably the total would be under five hundred. Tumaco, he said, is a town of 2500 people, all but fifteen or twenty being of Spanish extraction. It is situated on a small flat island, and is so low that, at high tide, the sea is level with the streets.

THE FIRST SHOCK.

The first shock of an earthquake was felt at 9:45 o'clock in the morning of January 31. This lasted about two minutes, and was followed at 10:20 o'clock by a second and more severe shock, lasting ten minutes, accompanied by the tidal wave, about twenty feet high. [illegible] continued, "otherwise the whole town would have washed away. As it was, the waves simply poured into the streets, and continued on to the mainland, where, because of the many little rivers and bays and the low land, great loss of life resulted. Only two deaths are said to have occurred on the island of Tumaco. Several persons were injured by falling buildings.

INTENSELY HOT.

"It was intensely hot, and to add to the discomfort, rain began to fall, and continued steadily for several days. During this time few of the inhabitants occupied their houses, as the shock continued at an average of one each day for more than a week.

"While the principal earthquake was in progress, walking was exceedingly precarious, the earth resembling the movement of a ship during a storm. In many places, the ground cracked, and I noticed one rift about fifteen inches [illegible]

[illegible]D INTO WATER.

"From the fact that the shock and wave came at the same time, we got the impression that the island was sinking out of sight. Many people jumped into the water, rather than sink with the land.

"Tumaco got the worst of the disturbances being near the center of the scope of the wave, which devastated the shores of Colombia for a distance of more than three hundred miles."

SOUTH SEA HURRICANE.

HAVOC IN QUEENSLAND.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

VICTORIA (B. C.) March 17.—The steamer Miowera which arrived today from Australia and South Sea ports brought no further news of the disastrous hurricane at Tahiti and neighboring islands, but news was received of the hurricane's havoc elsewhere.

It was severely felt in Northern Queensland, 80 per cent. of the bannana plantations being destroyed. Instead of the usual monthly shipments of 50,000 bunches, not more than 5000 will be available for some months.

STEAMER SCOT MISSING.

The steamer Scot is supposed to have foundered during the typhoon. The steamer sailed from Japan for Ocean Island and Australia under charter to the Pacific Phosphate Company, and is long overdue. The steamer Promise has been sent to Ocean Island in her place.

ERUPTION AT TOFUA.

The volcanic eruption ta Tofua, one of the outlying islands of the Friendly group, is assuming greater proportions than that of Savaii in Samoa, but as it is located in a basin 1800 feet deep, instead of on a mountain, as is Savaii, no damage was caused.

NATIVE VILLAGES DESTROYED.

An Auckland dispatch to Sydney newspapers, received by the Miowera, says several native villages have been destroyed by the Savaii, causing some loss of life.

TONGA POLITICS.

From Tonga, news was received that the King has offered to abdicate in favor of any other chief the British High Commissioner desires to appoint. The offer was formally made to the British Consul. No reason was given, but the action is regarded as a protest of both the King and people of Tonga against threatening tactics adopted by the Consul.

JAPS WITH SECRET PLANS.

Sydney newspapers report that complete plans of the defenses and fortifications of Sydney Harbor were found in the baggage of two Japanese searched at Thursday Island on the arrival of a Yokohama-bound steamer from Sydney. Military officers denied the truth of the report, and stated that the papers found were plans and notes of Sydney Harbor and commercial enterprises, and that the two Japanese were not detained, as was reported, but had gone ashore at Thursday Island and had missed the steamer accidentally. Government officials say there is nothing in the circumstances to class the two Japanese as spies.

AUSTRALIAN CANNIBALISM.

Starvation has forced the blacks in the Northeastern Australian gold fields into cannibalism. Arthur Harris, a half-caste, has arrived at Perth, and reports that parents are killing and eating their children. The government has been requested to send relief to the district where the natives are starving.

Plague is prevalent at Nouema French New Caledonia. A number of deaths have occurred.

HUNDREDS KILLED.

EARTHQUAKE IN FORMOSA.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

TOKIO, March 17.—A severe earthquake occurred at Kagi, Formosa, today. Hundreds of buildings were destroyed and many hundreds of people were killed.

LANDSLIDE IN BRAZIL.

SCORES OF DEAD AND HURT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 17.—A storm, Friday, caused landslides and floods. Twenty persons were killed or injured here, and landslides at Petropolis, capital of the State of Rio de Janeiro, killed fifty persons and injured many more.

BOYS PROTECT THEIR MOTHER.

DESPERATE FIGHT WITH BURGLARS IN BOWERS HOME.

Widow Ill in Bed With Pneumonia Awakened at Midnight by Three Men—Two Sons Come to Her Aid and Bullets Tear Walls and Ceilings—Fight in the Dark.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With bullets flying thick and fast over her bed, Mrs. M. E. Bowers, ill with pneumonia, at midnight, last night, witnessed a desperate battle between her two sons and three burglars. [illegible] widow. Her sons, Samuel, [illegible] years of age, and Edward, [illegible] years, were sleeping in an adjoining room when the burglars entered the mother's bedroom from the veranda. She screamed, and the boys rushed into the room.

A terrific pistol volleying followed. Bullets tore the walls and ceiling, and ruined the furniture. The lamp was shot to pieces by one of the robbers and the struggle was continued in the dark.

Samuel finally was rendered unconscious by a bullet and Edward was felled by a blow from a chair.

The robbers then fled. Edward, recovering, picked up a gun and kept up a running fire until they disappeared.

The mother's bed was untouched by the bullets, but the shock has rendered her condition desperate.

GOOD ROADS IN CHIHUAHUA.

EL PASO (Tex.) March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Chihuahua government has entered upon an extensive good-roads movement. Following the example set by Col. W. C. Greene, the mining magnate, in building a long road to Concheno, the government will promote more railroad building. The first road built by the government will run from Bacoynia to the famous Lluviato Oro mines, near Urique.

TORPEDO BOATS IN JAMAICA.

KINGSTON (Jamaica) March 17.—The second United States torpedo boat flotilla, consisting of the Hopkins, Truxton, Worden, MacDonough and Stewart and commanded by Lieut.-Commander Montgomery M. Taylor, arrived here today, one day from Guantanamo. The flotilla will remain here two days.

DOCKED FOR GOOD DEED.

Letter Carrier Works Overtime on Christmas Gifts and Loses Days' Pay.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

MINNEAPOLIS, March 17.—When the holiday rush was at its height last Christmas, John W. Higby, a Minneapolis letter carrier, found himself near the end of his route with several packages undelivered.

It was time to return to the office and quit for the day, but Higby thought of the people who were awaiting presents, and decided to work a little while longer without pay, rather than disappoint them.

As a result he was notified yesterday that he will lose one day's pay, $2.78 for violating the eight-hour law. The fine was imposed by the department at Washington.

Higby never received a reprimand in the eight years he has been a carrier and local officers will try to have the fine order rescinded.

DOOM PRONOUNCED ON CZAR AND KAISER.

Gigantic Plot of Anarchists Unearthed at Koenigsberg, Germany.

Police Stumble Upon Meeting of Russian Revolutionists—Thousands of Dynamite Bombs Found—Hundreds of Guns and Cases of Ammunition—Pile of Letters Contain Murderous Offers from America.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, March 17.—[Exclusive Disptach.] A gigantic plot of anarchists to kill both the Kaiser and the Czar has been unearthed. The scene of the conspiracy is the seaport of Koenigsberg, near the Russian frontier.

The plot was discovered by the merest accident. While the Koenigsberg police were searching for a petty criminal last night they stumbled on an unannounced meeting of Russian revolutionists with whom the seaport abounds.

The Russians fled at the approach of the police. When the officers searched the house in which the meeting had been held, they found thousands of dynamite bombs, hundreds of guns and cases of ammunition, and a carefully-worked-out plan, in manuscript, to murder both Emperor William and Emperor Nicholas.

LETTERS FROM AMERICA.

In a cavity under the floor of the building, the searchers came across a pile of letters, many of them postmarked from American cities, which had evidently contained money sent to help along the anarchistic cause. A number of these were from Paterson, N. J., and two from Barre, Vt.

One of these missives declared that the Kaiser was a far greater foe to human liberty than was the Czar, and that if no revolutionist could be found in Europe who was willing to kill him, the American anarchists would send over one of their number to do the job, just as they had furnished Bresci to put King Humbert of Italy out of the way.

OVER A SCORE ARRESTED.

Over a score of suspects have been arrested in connection with the plot.

BLOODY RIOT CELEBRATION.

As if to show that they have not lost any of their old-time defiance, the [illegible] leaders have decided to [illegible] sary of the bloody riots which took place in the streets of Berlin in 1848, when the grandfather of the present Kaiser was forced to flee from the city.

No less than 104 mass-meetings are scheduled to take place in Berlin tomorrow, at which all the Socialist members of the Reichstag will make speeches.

It is planned to make a monster demonstration at the graves of those who fell before the bullets of the soldiers in those bloody days, but this, at least, the Kaiser will not allow.

ALL TROOPS UNDER ARMS.

All troops are held under arms, and have received orders to shoot to kill, if their services in crushing a revolutionary outbreak should be required.

The anarchists will be allowed to hold orderly meetings, but should they attempt to enter the cemetery, they will be driven back by soldiers and police.

In anticipation of disturbances, Berlin tonight is full of troops. Nearly all the regiments garrisoned at Charlottenburg and Potsdam have been called to this city.

SOCIALISTS RESENTFUL.

The greatest resentment is expressed by Socialist leaders here because of the preparations which have been made by the authorities, as they say, to interfere with the meetings arranged to be held tomorrow to commemorate the anniversary of the Berlin revolution.

On the plea that it may be necessary to use force to prevent the anarchists from indulging in revolutionary demonstrations, the authorities have arranged to have all meetings closely watched by the police detachments, and the entire Berlin garrison is being held under arms. The Socialists deny that there will be any need for such preparations, and they insist that these arrangements have not been made by the government merely as a safeguard, but to intimidate.

WILL HOLD MEETINGS.

Some of these meetings have been abandoned because of the measures taken by the government, but the leaders say most of them will be held. They will not allow the knowledge that troops are being held in readiness to crush them at a moment's notice to interfere with the programme of speeches as originally planned.

If disorders occur the anarchists claim the responsibility will rest upon the authorities for arousing their followers by the preparations made to subdue them by force of arms.

WILL SHOOT TO KILL.

If it becomes necessary for the soldiers to fire on the people, they will shoot to kill. The authorities are determined that the anarchists shall not assemble in the city, and that there shall be no demonstration beneath the windows of the Kaiser's palace, as it is stated has been planned.

REFUGEES MAKING TROUBLE.

Altogether, the situation is extremely dangerous, and it is impossible to tell what a day may bring forth. The city is full of Russian refugees, and they are stirring up their German revolutionary brethren by inflammatory speeches. The Russians are allowed to hold meeting provided they get a permit from the chief of police, but in such cases an officer is sent to report the meeting.

The government organs have endeavored as much as possible to suppress the news of the plot discovered at Koenigsberg, but the facts have leaked out, and have become quite generally known among the revolutionary element in the city.

THE AMERICAN FEATURE.

The fact that their [illegible] has been [illegible] known among the leaders of the revolutionary movement here that the discovery of the Koenigsberg letters caused no surprise or comment.

A Socialist leader, who is in intimate touch with the revolutionist party in Berlin, declared laughingly today that if it were not for the need of anarchistic literature in Europe, many printing presses in the United States would find little to employ them.

ELLEN TERRY'S JUBILEE.

Anglo-American Celebration to Be Arranged and All London Managers and Actors Join in.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] As Miss Ellen Terry reaches her stage jubilee April 28 next, the Tribune has taken the lead in an endeavor to organize an Anglo-American celebration, for the reason that "she has been invaluably helpful in the two most famous theatrical enterprises of the last half century, the Bancroft management in the old Prince of Wales and the Irving management at the Lyceum. She must therefore remain a great figure in theatrical history."

The only American representative on the Executive Committee, up to the present time, is Charles Frohman, who gladly joined the movement when he was informed of it, while all the London managers and leading actors have joined, with the purpose of forming a large and representative general committee.

BOSTON AUTO SHOW CLOSES.

BOSTON, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Boston auto show closed tonight in a blaze of glory, winding up with a grand parade about Exhibition Hall by band, officials and exhibitors. Thirteen cars were reported sold yesterday. The total sales for the week probably will be announced next week, when all returns are in.

MORO REBELS SCORN ALL PEACE OFFERINGS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

MANILA, March 18.—Further investigation develops that many women and children were saved in the attack against Moro outlaws on Mt. Dajo recently. Those killed were shot at long range by rifle and shell fire.

The attack was delayed six months while Gov. Scott was endeavoring to persuade the outlaws to surrender. All overtures were scorned, and the defiant attitude of the leaders of the outlaws and the Arab priests persuaded their followers that the government would be unable to dislodge them from their fortresses in two years.

Leading Moros, in their desire for the extermination of the outlaws, aided the troops in the fight. Two hundred Moros under the direction of leading Dattos, formed columns and carried water to the troops. The reports of company and troop commanders to Maj.-Gen. Wood show that every effort was made to save women and children. After the fight was over Gen. Wood ordered supplies and assistance sent to the women and children remaining alive in the crater.

The Sultan and principal Dattos are still congratulating Gen. Wood as the killing of the outlaws had made possible the tilling of the fields.

FILIPINOS ELECT AMERICAN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the distinction of being the first American elected to a high office in any of the Philippine provinces, Capt. Charles A. Reynolds, a former Pittsburgh newspaper man, now reigns supreme over province Albay, P. I. By a vote of the natives he was chosen Governor of the province.

In selecting incumbents for such offices it has been customary for the Filipinos to choose one of their own people.

Capt. Reynolds, at the outbreak of the Philippine war, left his desk to serve in the Fourteenth Infantry. When mustered out, he decided to remain in the islands, and located in Albay, and soon after was chosen treasurer. He organized an efficient constabulary, at the head of which he succeeded in repelling all inroads of the savage Moros, and drove robber bands back to their mountain fastnesses. He was first honored for his service by the naming of one of the city's principal thoroughfares "Reynolds avenue."

REPEAL OF "RIPPER."

Mayor of Philadelphia Hereafter to Have Power of Removal in Important Departments.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

HARRISBURG (Pa.) March 17.—The Philadelphia "Ripper Repeal" Bill, passed at the recent extra session of the Legislature, becomes a law at midnight, but it cannot be announced or made a matter of record until Monday. Gov. Pennypacker failed to act upon the bill, which becomes a law by default.

"The Ripper' took from the Mayor of Philadelphia the power of appointment of the Director of Public Safety and the Director of Public Works. The bill, as originally passed, also took from the Mayor the power of appointing the directors of Public Health and Charity and the Director of Supplies.

Gov. Pennypacker vetoed the sections of the law which disturbed the latter two offices, but approved the sections which related to the departments of Public Safety and Works. He gave as a reason for signing the original bill that the people could voice their sentiments at the polls.

After the recent November election, at which the Republicans were defeated in city and State, Gov. Pennypacker called a special session of the Legislature to pass reform measures. Included among these were the "Ripper" bills. The Governor, however, refused to reverse himself, and the repeal of the "Ripper" became a law.

GRIDIRON FOR THE SPEAKER.

"UNCLE JOE" CANNON ENTERTAINS FAMOUS CLUB.

Washington Correspondents and a Distinguished Company Pass a Lively Evening—President and Vice-President Attend—Presentation of the Insignia of Friendship.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Speaker Cannon tonight gave a dinner to the Gridiron Club, the famous organization of Washington correspondents, whose guest he has been on many occasions during the past twenty-two years. A distinguished company was invited to meet the club, and nearly 225 guests assembled in the beautifully decorated dining-room of the New Willard Hotel at the invitation of the Speaker.

It was not a "Gridiron dinner," although [illegible] are never published, were invoked, while skits and songs by the club entertained the Speaker's guests. A number of very good speeches were made.

The club presented to Speaker Cannon a large gridiron, appropriately decorated, and informed him that while no one could be made an honorary member of the club, the gridiron which he received meant that he is its best friend.

Among the guests were the President, Vice-President Fairbanks, Secretaries Root, Shaw, Taft and Wilson; Associate Justice Harlan, Sir Mortimer Durand, the British Ambassador; Baron Rosen, the Russian Ambassador; Cardinal Gibbons, former Vice-President Levi P. Morton, Edmund J. James, president of Illinois University; Theodore P. Shonts, chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission; E. H. Corey, president of the United States Steel Corporation; Paul Morton, president of the Equitable Life Insurance Society; Robert Mather of the Rock Island, Stuyvesant Fish of the Illinois Central, E. H. Harriman of the Southern Pacific, James Speyer of New York, Oscar S. Strauss of New York, Charles S. Buchard, George R. Peck of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, John S. Runnels of the Pullman Company, and twenty newspaper editors, publishers and writers; twenty United States Senators and nearly sixty prominent members of the House of Representatives.

CHINESE CREW MUTINIES.

Italian Police Are Called Aboard British Ship Epsom at Naples and Free Fight Follows.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NAPLES, March 17.—On the British steamship Epsom, in this port, the Chinese crew became mutinous, yesterday, for the second time seeking to leave the vessel in disobedience of the captain's orders. Italian police were called aboard, and a free fight ensued.

An English sailor was attacked by the Chinese, and killed one of the latter in defending himself.

Twenty Chinese were put in irons, and six were arrested by the police and taken ashore.

MONTANA BOND ISSUES.

United States Supreme Court to Pass on Status of Funds for Educational Institutes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HELENA (Mont.) March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Clerk of the United States Court Sproule today issued a writ of error which had been granted by the State Supreme Court in the matter generally known as the "bond case." The issuance of this writ means that the bond case will be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States for final determination.

The Supreme Court of the State held that the State Normal School bond issue is invalid, thus sustaining the original stand of Atty.-Gen. Albert J. Galen, that the entire series of State educational-institution bond issues was invalid and illegal because they contravented the Constitution of the State as well as the enabling act. The total issue amounts to $55,000.

EXPELLED FROM ARCANUM.

ROME, (N. Y.) March 17.—Frank Z. Wilcox, a member of the Royal Arcanum, and the leader of the opposition to the increase of rates by the supreme council, has been found guilty on charges of alleged improper conduct and expelled from the order.

DUPLICITY CHARGED.

Scale Committee in Scaly Doings.

Miner Delegate Intimates That Mitchell Gave Secret Instructions.

National Officers Wish It to Appear That Demands Are Receded from.

Resolution Requiring Contracts to Contain "Substantial Increase."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Five thousand dollars, "and as much more as may be necessary" today was voted by the United Mine Workers' convention to aid in the defense of President Moyer and other officers of the Western Federation of Miners, who are now under arrest charged with the assassination of ex-Gov. Steunenberg of Idaho.

The motion for an appropriation of $5000 was made by Frank Hay, an Illinois Socialist, and when President Mitchell declared that had he made the motion he would have included "as much more as may be necessary," the suggestion was taken up and incorporated in the resolution.

Mitchell declared from the platform that he believed the accused men innocent, and that it was the duty of miners to assist in their defense. The Socialists in the convention look upon the appropriation as a personal triumph for them, as it originated in their camp, and was heartily seconded by the convention.

QUESTION OF WAGES.

In strong contrast with the action of the convention at its January meeting was its attitude today toward the question of wages. In the former convention the sentiment was overwhelmingly in favor of 12½ per cent. increase in wages, a run-of-mine scale in the [illegible] the mines. So intense was the feeling and so confident were the miners of enforcing these demands that the Ryan resolution followed easily and naturally, and the conservative spirit was completely subordinated.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE.

Today, however, when a resolution was offered to the effect that no contract be entered into unless it contained a "substantial increase" in wages, it was referred to the Scale Committee without being adopted. This action was in accord with the policy of President Mitchell, who expects the committee to do the best it can, but is leaving it free to come to terms with operators, even if the increase is not up to the miners' ideas of the "substantial."

ENTIRE SUSPENSION DOUBTFUL.

Two members of the Scale Committee have said that Mitchell and the other national officers agree that the miners could not successfully bring about a complete suspension of coal-mining industry, and the only hope of carrying on a strike is to have at least the major part of the organization at work in the mines. Those members have construed the statement to mean that every possible effort must be made to secure a bituminous scale, and that, in the absence of anything better, the miners will accept the restoration of 5.5 per cent. reduction made two years ago and be satisfied with it.

SECRET INSTRUCTIONS.

A delegate, today, when the resolution for a "substantial increase" was referred to the Scale Committee, instead of being considered by the convention, wanted to know what the instructions to the committee were and intimated that secret instructions had been given. Mitchell said there had been no action withdrawing the original demands, and the impression was made upon the delegates that the Scale Committee would go into the joint conference bound by the action of convention of two weeks ago. Under the action, today, however, the committee has large discretionary powers, and, though giving what amounts to secret instructions to the contrary, the national officers wish it to appear that the committee recedes from its demands when it reports an agreement with the operators.

OPENLY CHARGED.

Delegates acquainted with the facts, openly charge that the committee understands that it must insist only on the restoration of the scale of 1903.

"If we are going to fight in the East, we must be at work in the West," said a member of the Scale Committee today.

OPERATORS ARRIVING.

Operators from the four States in the competitive district and from the Southeastern States began to arrive, today, for the joint conference which will convene Monday. As a rule, they say that there has been no change in the situation since they adjourned without a scale agreement and that the coal trade is precisely what it was when they declared that business conditions did not justify an increase in the coal-mining rate. Some of them went so far as to say that they were opposed to anything more than signing the present scale, and they owuld not care to do that for a longer period than one year. They are expecting the miners to meet them in a more conciliatory spirit, but say that they have no reason to believe that an agreement will be reached.

INDEPENDENT DISTRICTS.

It was reported this afternoon that the report of the Scale Committee would be regarded as virtually repealing the Ryan resolution, which will be allowed to quietly fade into oblivion, and no effort will be made to revive it. This course would permit of each district signing a wage scale independent of the others.

Robbins and other operators who favor signing by districts, even if an advance in wages is given, are greatly pleased over the position taken by the leaders of the Mine Workers.

COAL IS HELD BACK.

SURPRISE AT PITTSBURGH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The River coal combine today held back 15,000,000 bushels of bituminous coal which, earlier in the season, it had intended to ship to Southern ports. This action caused intense astonishment and disappointment to river men, for the Ohio River is at what is known as "coalbarge stage," and many boats lie here expecting heavy shipments.

In explanation of its act, the combine declared all the coal now in Pittsburgh Harbor would not last thirty days, in the event of a strike, and could be used by one great steel plant alone. As a matter of fact, everybody knows that if a strike comes, the combine will be immensely benefited financially by keeping its coal here. The railroads are taking no chances, but both the Pennsylvania and the Baltimore and Ohio are confiscating coal wherever they can handily do so along their lines.

IRWIN WEAK SPOT.

In the event of a strike in the Western Pennsylvania bituminous fields, the weap spot is the great Irwin district, with the 15,000 unorganized miners. John Mitchell today sent to Henry O'Neil, a national organizer here, a call for a convention in the Irwin field, to organize the miners. The action is peculiarly significant at this moment. A strike is now on at one of the mines in the Irwin district, but when the strikers recently sent for Mitchell to come and help them, he replied that he could do nothing until after the Indianapolis convention.

STRIKE EXPECTED.

Now that the miners' national body has endorsed the strike in the Irwin field, and Mitchell has issued a call to organize it, the conviction prevails here that he regards a strike as inevitable, and is preparing to strengthen the danger point in the Pittsburgh district.

In his instructions to O'Neill, Mitchell uses this strong language: "In the meanwhile, you and all organizers in that district devote your time to visiting the various mining camps, creating sentiment in favor of sending delegates to the convention. You have authority to say to the miners that the international organization will remove to some favorable point at which he can secure work any person discharged or victimized because of his attendance at the convention."

OFFIALS AFTER COREY.

Pittsburgh Coal Company officials are after William E. Corey, and it is openly asserted here that he will retire from the head of the United States Steel Corporation at the April meeting. His recent demand upon the coal company for the fulfillment of its contract to supply coal to the steel company, no matter what the result of the Indianapolis conference might be, is said to be the moving force.

It was always supposed the coal company held a contract for supplying not less than 8,000,000 tons of coal a year to the steel company on a sliding-scale price, based on the cost of mining. This is said to be an error. The price is a fixed one. F. L. Robbins of the coal company had things framed up with the miners' leaders by which the present scale would most likely have been accepted for the coming year. Corey's demands upset this arrangement.

THE STRIKE INDORSED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PITTSBURGH, March 17.—The strike at the Penn coal mine in the Irwin field and the movement for a demand for a general advance in wages throughout that district has been indorsed by the executive board of the United Mine Workers.

INDICTMENT NOT QUASHED.

CALDWELL SENSATION ENDS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CALDWELL (Idaho) March 17.—The sensational allegations made against A. B. Moss, foreman of the grand jury which indicted Charles H. Moyer, William D. Haywood and George A. Pettibone, were not sustained when testimony in the matter was taken today before District Judge Frank Smith.

The motion of the defense to quash the indictment was denied. The questions raised by the defense on demurrer were argued at length, and were taken under advisement by Judge Smith until Tuesday morning.

A telegram has been received from Oakley, Idaho, stating that J. L. Simpkins, member of the Executive Committee of the Western Federation of Miners, had been arrested near that place. An officer will be sent to Oakley to identify and bring the prisoner back. Simpkins is wanted in connection with the assassination of ex-Gov. Steunenberg.

SHIP SUBSIDY NOT INDORSED.

ELECTION AT KANSAS CITY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

KANSAS CITY, (Mo.) March 17.—The Consolidated Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Shipbuilders of Omaha, at their annual convention in Kansas City, Kan., today declined to endorse the Ship Subsidy Bill, now in Congress.

George F. Dunn of Indianapolis was elected grand president, and Ed Grand of Sparks, Nev., was elected vice-president of the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast district.

CONCESSION AT PITTSBURGH.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PITTSBURGH, March 17.—An advance in wages of 1 cent per hour has been granted the employés of the Pittsburgh Railway Company, operating all the traction lines in Pittsburgh and the Allegheny. Recently the men made a demand for an increase of 3 cents an hour, and the action of the company is regarded as a compromise.

DIFFICULT ENGINEERING FEAT.

EL PASO (Tex.) March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One of the most difficult engineering feats attempted to aid in marketing the rich ores of Mexico is about to be attempted by the San Toy Mining Company, of Chihuahua, Mex. A concession has just been given to build an aerial tramway four kilometers long from the mines to Santa Rosalia. It will traverse a mountainous district, and the construction will be attended by hazards.

BITS OF BURNT FLESH AND PILES OF BONES.

Only the Enginemen's Corpses Found Whole in Portland Wreckage—Twenty-two Dead and as Many Injured Is Now the Estimate.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PUEBLO (Colo.) March 17.—Twenty-two dead and twenty-two injured is the very best estimate of the casualties in the wreck of the two Denver and Rio Grande passenger trains which collided on a curve at a point twenty-five miles west of this city, early Friday morning. Only seven of the dead can be identified, and only one of these corpses retains sufficient outline of the features to be readily recognizable. The remainder are known, owing to the fact that the places where the charred bodies were found were the places where they naturally would have been when the collision happened.

While the exact number of lives lost will never be known, it will undoubtedly take rank among the great disasters in the history of railroading. In other wrecks there has been greater loss of life, but none has been productive of greater horrors.

Seventeen charred, mangled and utterly unrecognizable bodies lie in the Pueblo morgue, two others are in the morgue at Florence, several other persons are known to be dead, and possibly others were burned to ashes.

There was not a single entire body recovered from the wreckage, with the exception of the engineman who although horribly mangled, had not been reached by the fierce flames which swept through the wrecked cars.

Bits of burned flesh and piles of bones were all that indicated that a holocaust had occurred, but trained eyes picked out the pelvic bones from the charred masses.

OPERATORS DISCHARGED.

Two telegraph operators are held in the public mind to be responsible for the awful disaster, although no formal indictment has gone out against them. Both have been ordered discharged from the service of the road. A coroner's jury has been empanneled, and will begin investigation the cause of the accident Monday next at Cañon City. In addition to this, the railroad company has directed its officials to locate the blame through an examination of trainmen and operators who will be asked to come together in the near future and tell what they know of the deplorable affair.

STRIKING INCIDENTS.

It develops that R. G. Whitney, who was being escorted to the penitentiary by Deputy Sheriff Baird, had been chained to his seat, and when the fire broke out in the wreckage he had no chance whatever to escape. By the hand of fate his guard perished with him. The laws of Colorado have a provision making it a crime to fasten prisoners in transportation to the car seat.

As time goes on, incidents, thrilling and pathetic, come to light. The experience of G. C. Clark, a passenger on the west-bound train, is enough to excite the interest of the most phlegmatic. Clark was standing on the platform of one of the cars that was destroyed by fire. He was talking with the negro porter when the crash came. The explosion of the gas tanks followed the collision closely, and the force of the blast picked up Clark and hurled him through the roof. The man sailed through the air clear of the wreckage and landed on the hillside, from which he picked himself up practically unhurt, having sustained only a few bruises and contusions. The porter fell down into the wreckage, and has not been seen since.

A MOTHER'S EFFORT.

A heart-rending story of mother love and self-sacrifice is told by Conductor Kroeger, who had charge of the Pullmans on the west-bound train.

"I saw one mother," he said, "with a little babe in her arms. She knew that it was almost an impossibility to be saved herself, but her only thought was of her child. One hand was pinioned beneath the débris, but her head and other arm were free. She was trying to keep her head from the flames, and with her free hand was holding the infant as high in the air as she could. Just as we were about to reach her she gave a gasp and fell back into the flames with her babe."

BODY UNDER COALPILE.

Late this afternoon word was received from the scene of the wreck that the head and upper portion of a human body had been found under a pile of coal dumped out of the tender of the engine of No. 16. The lower part of the body had been burned away. Both of the enginemen of No. 16 were killed, and enough of their bodies had been found, it was thought, to identify them. Just who could have been the victim who was crushed under the coal pile, and perhaps instantly killed, is a puzzle. Some believe that one of the passengers must have been thrown to the spot indicated by the impact of the collision, or breaking up of the cars, and a miracle of escape was swiftly changed to certain death by the overturning of the engine tender, piling the coal upon the prostrate form.

VAN DEUZEN'S LAY-OFF.

It now transpires that there were two regular operators at Swallows Station, the point at which No. 3, the west-bound train, should have received running orders. P. F. Lively was the day man, and William Van Deuzen was employed at night. Both men were experienced in their line of work, and had been in the employ of the road for some time. Without notifying their superiors, Van Deuzen, according to semi-official information, made an arrangement with Lively to work for him Thursday, and did not himself report for duty. Where he went or where he was at the time of the collision has not been learned.

Lively assumed the duties of Van Deuzen, and was at the station and received the order concerning the west-bound train. He had been asleep, it is reliably reported, and the ticking of the telegraph instrument awoke him. The order was transmitted, and Lively checked it back. He did not know that No. 3 had already passed Swallows, and received the order entirely unconscious that the train was already rushing toward the station beyond. In a few moments the headlight of a train coming from Pueblo was seen approaching Swallows.

LIVELY'S HORROR.

Lively stepped out to deliver the order controlling No. 3, when, to his horror, he discovered that the oncoming train was No. 15, running behind No. 2. The full realization of his negligence then burst upon him, and he ran frantically into the station, grasped the key and called Florence. Too late, however, for No. 16 had passed that station, east bound, and there remained no recourse that could be resorted to to stop the trains now speeding on to destruction.

Both Lively and Van Deuzen have been discharged. Railroad men say that this result would have followed the knowledge of their laxity reaching their superiors, whether a wreck had resulted or not.

CORONER'S JURY'S VISIT.

Coroner H. W. Stevenson of Fremont county yesterday empanelled a jury of six men, and they visited the scene of the wreck. They gathered all available facts, and will meet at Cañon City at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, for the purpose of fixing the responsibility for the wreck.

GENERAL MANAGER'S REPORT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—President E. T. Jeffery of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company today received the following statement from Ridgeway, general manager of the company:

"Dr. O'Connor, our chief surgeon, reports to me that eighteen bodies were recovered from the wreck. He thinks there is a possibility the number of fatalities will reach twenty. Six were injured seriously. Others injured slightly. All of the injured will get well.

"No. 3, leaving Pueblo, had orders to meet No. 16 at Adobe. The dispatcher had 'O.K.' from Florence and Swallows, the operator at Swallows stating that No. 3 had not gone by. He had been asleep beyond question, and did not hear No. 3 go by, and 'O.K.'d' his order, and is the sole author of the collision.

"This was the day operator, and he was doing duty for the night man, as the night man had gone to Pueblo to cash pay checks without asking permission from Pueblo office. Our standing rule is that day operators are not to relieve night operators and work overtime, unless permission is asked and granted by the chief dispatcher."

CLAIM AGENT'S DEATH LIST.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PUEBLO, March 17.—Claim Agent Charles Mitchell of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad today approved a list of the dead from the collision near Adobe, Colo., yesterday morning. Mitchell thinks it is as nearly accurate as can be made at this time. The list follows:

WILLIAM HOLLIS, engineer, Pueblo.

WALTER COSSLETT, engineer, Pueblo.

H. D. SUDDETH, fireman, Pueblo.

E. E. BAIRD, deputy sheriff, Denver.

R. G. WHITNEY, convict, Denver.

UNKNOWN VICTIMS' EPITAPH.

"Missing after the Adobe wreck," will be the only epitaph of the remaining victims.

OPERATOR AND AGENT.

P. F. Lively, the operator whose failure to deliver a train order to the west-bound train resulted in the disastrous collision, had been acting as station agent at Swallows about ten days. He is said to have been an experienced man, and to have seen considerable service at other times on the Rio Grande system. It is alleged that Lively, who is twenty-five years old, worked excessively for several days past, and had been deprived of a great deal of his natural sleep.

Sitting at his key, in the hours following midnight, listening to the roar of a fierce snowstorm, it is thought that for a moment he dozed, and while he slept the train passed his station unchecked. Whether this be true or not, the fact remains that the train did not receive the orders which would have averted the catastrophe, and the management of the road, and the Coroner as well, will make a searching inquiry in order that the responsibility for the disaster may be accurately fixed.

Operator Lively has not yet been arrested, and probably no action against him will be begun until after the inquest on the wreck victims has been concluded. His explanation of his failure to deliver the order which would have averted the collision is comprised in the few words: "I was asleep. That's all." Further than this he declined to be interviewed.

All the injured in the hospitals here are improving rapidly and most of them will be able to leave in a few days.

The roadbed at the scene of the wreck is gradually being cleared, and trains will be running on schedule time, tonight, if the belief of the railroad officials materializes.

As yet the railroad officials have not publicly placed the blame for the disaster and until they do the public must await developments.

LOSES WATER FRANCHISE.

Old Company at Kansas City, Kan., Is Superseded by Two Individuals.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) March 17.—After a session of the City Council of Kansas City, Kan., lasting ten hours, an ordinance granting a thirty years' water franchise to L. M. Miller and K. L. Browne was passed today.

Mayor Rose fought for delay until after the spring elections, at which he wished to give the people a chance to choose between granting the franchise or attempting municipal ownership.

The present company was unable to secure a renewal of its franchise.

The franchise granted today provides that the new company shall build a new plant. The city is given the right to purchase the plant after ten years, the price to be fixed by commissioners to be appointed by the grantees, the city and the District Court. The city also is given the right to regulate the water rates charged by the company.

British Admiralty Insures Risk Incurred by Inclusion of Merchantmen in Naval Maneuvers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Admiralty has decided to take out the largest policy for marine insurance ever issued. It is for $50,000,000, and is intended to cover the risk incurred by the inclusion of merchantmen in the naval maneuvers, which will be held between Gibraltar and the English Channel in June and July.

It was recognized that, as the maneuvers will be carried out under conditions approximating those of war, as far as possible, steaming without lights will be the rule.

PRESIDENT'S UNCLE ILL.

Suggests, However, the Erection of an Immense Statue of Henry Hudson.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—Robert B. Roosevelt, uncle of the President, is ill at his home here.

Mr. Roosevelt's condition became known yesterday when members of the Hudson-Fulton commission of which Gen. Stewart L. Woodford is president, met formally at Mr. Roosevelt's invitation to discuss plans for the celebration on September 12, 1909, of the anniversaries of the discovery of the Hudson River in 1609, and of Robert Fulton's exploits with the steamboat Claremont, in 1809.

It was said that Mr. Roosevelt was seized yesterday with some rheumatic complaint in the legs, the exact nature of which physicians did not immediately determine. They say that the outcome of his illness is uncertain as Mr. Roosevelt is 78 years old and has not much strength.

Mr. Roosevelt was admitted to the bar in 1851, but retired from practice twenty years later. He was a member of Congress during 1873-5, and United States Minister to the Netherlands in 1888-90. He is the author of several works on fish and game.

At yesterday's meeting of the commission James Grant Wilson, for Mr. Roosevelt, offered a project as incident to the proposed celebration for the erection at the battery of a 650-foot column and statue of Henry Hudson. Mr. Roosevelt's idea is to provide 200 rooms in the pillar of the statue to be occupied by city employés as offices. Owing to the informal character of the meeting no action was taken.

CONFLICT OVER BUFFALO BILL.

Genoa Authorities at Loggerheads Regarding Stabling of "Wild West" Horses.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

GENOA, March 17.—A conflict between the board of health and the municipal authorities has arisen over an order by the former prohibiting the encampment of Buffalo Bill's Wild West show because of an alleged infectious disease among the horses.

The municipal authorities, local associations and tradesmen are opposed to this prohibition, saying that it is contrary to the interests of the city.

The member of the Chamber of Deputies, representing Genoa, is being urged to have the government interfere in the matter and bring the question before Parliament if necessary.

Enca Davis, a member of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Company, was arrested at Genoa Friday in connection with the death of a sailor belonging to the British battleship Bulwark, who was stabbed during a quarrel, in a bar-room with several foreigners, including members of the Wild West show. Davis showed that the crime was committed by an Italian.

WRECKED IN VIGO HARBOR.

VIGO (Spain) March 17.—The German steamer Capt. Rigo, from Buenos Ayres for Hamburg, was wrecked on entering the harbor here tonight. In endeavoring to avoid an outgoing boat the steamer ran into the sea wall. The crew was saved.

MAYOR ROSE A TARGET.

Mayor David S. Rose of Milwaukee, who is in the midst of a hot Mayoralty fight, is made the target of an attack directed at him through a divorce bill filed in the Circuit Court today, by Francis J. Hickey, a salesman, who charges his wife, Laverne Hickey, with desertion. After the bill was filed Hickey's attorney declared supplementary proceedings would be entered which would bring Mayor Rose into the case. An affidavit by Hickey, sworn to and witnessed before a notary, was produced, setting forth that Mrs. Hickey had been intimately associated with Mayor Rose, and that their children, David S., aged 6, and Dorothy, aged 4, had received a monthly allowance from the Mayor. The affidavit enters into details of Mrs. Hickey's alleged conduct before and after her marriage, and details the circumstances of several alleged meetings with Mayor Rose.

POLICE DISAPPOINT REDS.

The activity of the police resulted tonight in the disappointment of 100 anarchists and Socialists who gathered at Uhlich's Hall, expecting to listen to a "call to arms." SEATTLE FIRM ON WARPATH.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) March 17.—Cook & Co., of this city, who will operate the steamers Tampico and Eureka in the Nome trade during the coming season, announced today that they had withdrawn from the so-called combination of Seattle steamship men to maintain an established rate of $15 per ton on all freight shipped to Nome from Seattle this year. Cook & Co., believe that to stand by the rate, would give San Francisco a chance to cut into Seattle trade with the northern country.

It is not known as yet what the attitude of the other steamship men of this city engaged in the Nome trade will be. The rate established during a recent meeting of local steamship men caused an unfriendly feeling on the part of Nome shippers and merchants.

SAN JOSE'S FLOWER DAY.

MANY VISITORS ARE PRESENT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN JOSE, March 17.—More than a thousand visitors from San Francisco, Oakland and other bay cities and eastern tourists, today attended the annual blossom festival at Saratoga. The sky was overcast and scattered patches of snow showed white against the deep blue of the Santa Cruz Mountains, but there was no rain, and occasionally the sun shone through the clouds, lighting up the many miles of snowy prune blossoms, stretching across the valley and far up the foothills. Addresses, exercises, free rides for the guests to and from the best points of vantage for witnessing the ocean of blooms, and an open air lunch were the features of a very satisfying and successful event.

Masked Men Steal Girl.

TUCSON (Ariz.) March 17.—A special from Morenci states that last night at a ball given by the Azurites, a prominent social organization, three masked men entered the ballroom and kidnaped a young lady, shooting promiscuously in the hall. When pursued by a posse the men dropped the young lady and escaped into the hills.

No Epidemic at Merced.

Celebrate at San Jose.

SAN JOSE, March 17.—The local divisions of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in this city and throughout the county assembled at Mountain View this morning and celebrated St. Patrick's Day. They there listened to a sermon by Rev. Father Foley of Alameda, and to addresses by T. E. Lahan of this city, State president, and others. A barbecue was held at noon.

Levee Breaks Near Kingston.

LATON, March 17.—The flood situation here is not serious. The town is on high land and has not suffered. A few miles east of here about 2000 acres are under water, but no further damage has been done. The levee south of Kings River has broken and the country about Kingston and Hardwick has been flooded. The water in the river is rapidly subsiding.

"SOUTH OF THE TEHACHEPI."

NEWS SUMMARY OF THE SOUTHERN COUNTIES.

There is a mystery of a man reported missing near Lamanda Park. A man who gave his name as Thomas Harrington reported in Pasadena yesterday that on Sunday night he was camping close by the wash with a chance companion who gave his name as Nash and said that he had been working on a ranch near Banning. During the heavy rain in the night Nash disappeared and left his horse and outfit. Harrington searched for him but could find no trace.

Harry Paine was arrested at San Bernardino yesterday charged with assaulting and holding up J. R. Gilbert a borax miner, in that city. Paine is described as "a notorious youth," and his victim is now in the hospital with a severe gash over his right eye.

Judge L. V. Root of Needles yesterday, at San Bernardino, confirmed the report that $600,000 had been offered to Riverside men for a group of claims north of Blake. He also states that the Gold Roads people were offered $3,000,000 by a French syndicate for their group of property east of Needles, on the Colorado River.

One of the members of the Italian band at Long Beach hung his coat over an electric light bulb ate the auditorium Friday evening and started a merry blaze. Companions flew to his aid and averted what might have been a serious fire.

Searching parties at Catalina Island have yet been unable to locate Capt. Holbrook, who, in company with a man from Avalon, was on Friday seized with an attack of heart trouble while in the mountains. When his companion returned from having gone in search of help, he had disappeared. It is feared that in the subsequent storms the man lost his life.

Judge Frank F. Oster of Santa Ana has decided in the case of F. L. STRANGE FACTS.

It seems strange that sometimes your stomach or bowels won't digest your food, no matter what you eat.

It may be the weather, or it may be just the state of your general health, but in any case, there is only one certain, safe and positive method of cure, and that is the proper use of that universal remedy for all forms of dyspeptic trouble or digestive weakness, whether in stomach, liver, kidneys or bowels—Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Strange, it is, that in such little tablets, to be taken a few times a day, may lie such wondrous potential possibilities, that by their use the course of a man's whole life—yes, of the world—may be changed!

Yet, who would not appreciate the fact that if Napoleon had not been suffering from cancer of the stomach he would have won instead of lost—at Waterloo?

And Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets would have cured his stomach trouble had they then been invented, as they have cured thousands of others in the past ten years, who have suffered just as Napoleon did.

So you can readily appreciate that today, by curing all these people, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is helping to get the world's work done, by people who would do worse work if they were sick, so they must be having a great influence, in a quiet way, on the world's progress.

They may, therefore, be classed as one of the triumphs of science, among other discoveries, in medicine, mechanics, transportation, etc.

Let this, then, remain in your memory, a fact upon which to act when occasion requires:

When any organ in your vast digestive machinery gets out of order, you have at your command one of the great inventions of the age, in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, to put your machinery in order again.

By so doing you will save much useless friction, add to the energy and working possibilities of your bodily machine, and relieve yourself from suffering, disease, weakness, premature old age and death.

All this is strictly in accordance with the most modern teachings of the best scientific schools of health, hygiene and medicine, and it will be to your advantage to lay these facts to heart.

Don't hesitate. Try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets today.

TOOTHSOME SALADS

Promote Health and Please Palate

A lover of good living writes from Chicago:

"The favorite salads in my family," he says, "are prepared with Grape-Nuts, according to your recipe. We regard them as unapproachable. We are also fond of Grape-Nuts with cream as a breakfast food, and use it daily.

"I was a great sufferer for years," he continues, "from stomach trouble, which gave rise to painful headaches, and I was at last completely prostrated and bedridden with ulceration of the stomach and bowels. I suffered untold agonies while the doctors were trying to cure my ailment with medicines.

"I could retain nothing on my stomach but an occasional sip of cold water, or a teaspoonful of olive oil, and at last even these could not be kept down. The doctors then gave me up—said there was no hope for me.

"In this strait my good angel induced me to try Grape-Nuts food, and it may sould ludicrous to say of the initial experiment that the sensation was simply 'heavenly' but nothing milder than that will express it.

"My recovery was rapid and in a very few days I was up and about, and in a few weeks was a perfectly well man again. And it was all the work of the Grape-Nuts food, for, as I have said, the doctors had ceased to give me medicine, considering my case hopeless.

"Since then Grape-Nuts has been, and always shall be a staple article of diet with us." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in package.

WASHINGTON.

CLOVER LEAF CALLS SHONTS.

Chairman of the Canal Commission to Resign.

John F. Stevens the Choice for His Successor.

Protection Against Hold-up on the Sacramento.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Information from trustworthy sources make it practically assured that Theodore Shonts, chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission, intends soon to send his resignation to the President.

It is unquestionably the intention of the President to nominate John F. Stevens, the chief engineer of the Isthmian Canal Commission, to succeed Shonts. Stevens will combine the duties of the two offices.

Pressure from his associates on the Clover Leaf Railroad, with which Shonts is connected, has been strong for some time to bring about his return to the railroad work, and his resignation from the canal board; also there has been no secret that the relations between Secretary Taft and Chairman Shonts have been strained.

TAFT'S VIEWS DIFFER.

Mr. Taft has his own views about the Panama Canal work, and these views are not in thorough accord with those of Shonts. When the Secretary of War leaves his office for the Supreme Court, if he does so, it is the intention of the President, it is said, to turn the supervision of the canal project over to Secretary Root's department. The Secretary of War desires to arrange the construction plans to suit his own judgment before the transfer is made.

STEARNS ADVOCATES LOCKS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Frederick B. Stearns, a Boston engineer, who was a member of the board of consulting engineers that reported on the type of canal feasible to be constructed across the Isthmus of Panama, advocated the canal-lock project before the Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals yesterday.

HEPBURN AND THE TYPE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals heard with many misgivings the reported statement by Representative Hepburn that the House Committee would not be willing to accept the Senate hearings to determine the type of canal to be constructed across the Isthmus of Panama. This is taken as an indication that Congress will not be able to agree upon a bill deciding the type of waterway unless the session of Congress is long continued.

In the event that no bill is passed, the Appropriations Committee undoubtedly would report the amount necessary to carry on the work until next session, and the Canal Commission would proceed with the construction of a lock under the plans advocated by the minority of the Board of Consulting Engineers. The President in his message transmitting to Congress the reports of the majority and minority of the board, said that he favored the latter, which was for a lock canal, and that if the question were not determined by Congress that that type would be constructed. This offers a solution, if the opposing factions are unable to agree.

SACRAMENTO RIVER PROJECT.

PROTECTION OF GOVERNMENT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is expected that before the McKinley bill permitting the use of Sacramento River water for the irrigation of 200,000 acres of land is brought before the House, a provision will be inserted in it to protect government against hold-up methods in case it ever desires to institute the national irrigation project on the Sacramento.

The Irrigation Bureau officials today called Representative Needham's attention to the lack of such provision, and while the bill is being amended so as to meet the objections of the War Department and commercial interests for fear of interference with navigation, it will also probably be fixed so that the works of the irrigation company can be purchased by the government at a future date at reasonable price. The reclamationists do not wish to have to pay an immense sum for the right which the company secures from the government for nothing.

AGAINST AMERICAN SHIPPING.

SINGAPORE'S DISCRIMINATION.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Steamship discrimination against American shipping is reported to the Bureau of Manufactures from Singapore by Consul-General Wilber, who advises that a combination has been effected between the Barber line, East Asiatic and some of the Standard Oil steamers, all of which are under the English flag, and the Hamburg-American line. The freight rates between South Asia and America have been greatly advanced.

This new move on the part of the European shipping conference is intended to aid English and German dealers in East Indian products to regain control of the business which they have been gradually losing. The consuls believe that what is needed throughout the Orient is an American line of steamers under the American flag, running from New York through the Suez Canal, entirely independent of any combination.

Consul-General Miller of Yokohama makes a report on the valuable timber in Hakkaido, the northernmost island of Japan, which is covered with huge oaks, curly ash, birdseye maple and other hard woods. He believes that a good trade between the Pacific Coast and Hakkaido could be built up by utilizing ships that are taking fish from Alaska to carry timber as a return cargo.

FINSTEAD NOT AMERICAN.

STATE DEPARTMENT'S FINDINGS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The State Department has reported to the friends of Finstead and Cougener, the Americans just sentenced at Chihuahua to twelve years' imprisonment for the killing of the Americans Rutherford and McMurray at Diaz, that it has found nothing so far in the proceedings before the Mexican courts to indicate that there has been any denial of justice, and on no other ground could the department undertake to interfere with the execution of the sentence.

The fact is that Finstead, in whose case many Californians, including two United States Senators, have interested themselves, is not an American citizen, but a Norwegian, and the only reason for action on the part of the State Department was found in the American citizenship of Cougener, alias "Shorty," who was a servant of Finstead. So the department instructed the American Consul at Chihuahua and the second secretary of the American Embassy at Mexico City to watch the developments of the trial and to keep the department informed, which they have faithfully done.

The prisoners have taken an appeal to the Supreme Court of Mexico, and the further proceedings will be kept under observation.

FUNERAL OF KAUFFMAN.

TELEGRAM FROM NOYES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The funeral of Samuel Hay Kauffmann, president of the Evening Star Newspaper Company of Washington, who died here Thursday, took place today. Crosby S. Noyes, editor of the Star, who formed a partnership with Kauffmann almost half a century ago, and who is now in Pasadena, Cal., spending the winter, sent the following telegram, which was published at the top of the editorial column this evening:

"I have great sorrow over my inability to attend the funeral of the dear old friend and comrade with whom I have been associated for forty years by ties of tenderest affection. In the death of Mr. Kauffmann, Washington loses a most valuable citizen and honorable journalism one of its finest exponents."

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

California's Naval Militia.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The records of the Navy Department show that California has contributed $14,324 for navol militia. There is a total of 4477 petty officers and enlisted men in the naval militia organizations, of which California has 345.

Washington Copyright Conference.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The copyright conference, which has been in session here, will prepare a copyright bill and submit it to the organizations which participated in the conference. When approved by them, the bill will be introduced in Congress.

Methodists and the Chinese.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—A delegation from the Methodist Episcopal church, South, today discussed with the President the situation in the Chinese empire. The visitors expressed a fear that if the boycott continued, injury might be done to the work of the American churches among the Chinese. They said they believed the situation would be relieved by a general invitation from American educational institutions to Chinese youth to study in this country. The suggestion met with hearty approval by the President.

Chief of Yards and Docks.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The President today announced the reappointment of Rear-Admiral Endicott, chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks of the Navy Yard, whose term of duty expires April 16. Admiral Endicott will continue as a member of the Isthmian Canal Commission. He will be placed on the retired list of the navy next November.

Death of Paymaster Ash.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The Navy Department has received news by cable of the death at Guantanamo, Cuba, of Paymaster Howard P. Ash.

FOOTPADS ROB HIM.

Highwaymen at Bakersfield Slug a Laboring Man and Relieve Him of His Money.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BAKERSFIELD, March 17.—J. Mayard, a laborer employed on a ranch near town, was held up by four masked highwaymen last night, and after being severely beaten, was robbed of $60. He was unable to regain his feet for some time, and finally a passing street car crew brought him to the police station, where he reported the case to the authorities.

The officers have been working on the case all day, and at a late hour tonight announced that they were on the track of the offenders. This hold-up is the latest of a long list of serious crimes that have been committed in this city during the past month.

BURGLAR HIDES IN HOUSE.

Secretes Himself in the Attic During the Day, but Is Scared Away When He Begins Work.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BAKERSFIELD, March 17.—Gaining entrance into a residence during the day, and hiding in the attic until night in order to perpetrate a robbery, is the latest chapter in the history of crime in this city. Early this morning Dr. Crease was awakened by a noise in a room adjoining his bedroom, and when hearose and secured his revolver, the burglar had made his escape. Investigation revealed the fact that the intruder had gained entrance into the house during the day time while the family was away and had hid in the attic until time to attempt the robbery.

The thief gained nothing for his pains, and was evidently looking for money.

INSURANCE HEARING ENDS.

Full Report May Be Submitted to New York Legislature Within Two Weeks.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ALBANY, March 17.—The hearings before the Legislative Insurance Investigating Committee on the bills proposed by it for amendment of the insurance and other laws, were concluded yesterday.

A sub-committee will meet in New York, probably most of next week with Charles E. Hughes, counsel for the committee, and all of the bills will be gone over and such modifications as the sub-committee may deem necessary will be made.

The net result will be presented to the full committee next week, and Chairman Armstrong hopes to present to the Legislature within two weeks the bills in their final form.

GERMANY'S POPULATION.

Increase of Over Four Million in Five Years With the Women in the Lead.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BERLIN, March 17.—The official returns of the census taken December 1, 1905, show the total population of 60,605,183 in Germany, against 56,367,178 in 1900.

The women outnumber the men by 868,991, but the government statisticians estimate that if the males make the same rate of increase as shown by the last four censuses, they will outnumber the females in 1945.

The population per square mile is 201, against 280. All the States show increases.

NINE BELOW IN NEBRASKA.

LINCOLN (Neb.) March 17.—The average low temperature for Nebraska last night was seven degrees below zero. This was the coldest weather in the State this season. In the extreme northwestern part, the mercury went to nine degrees below.

IRON HEEL TO CRUSH REBELS.

With Upper Hand Russian Head is Merciless.

Extermination of Czar's Foes the Watchcry.

Record of Number Shot and Hanged Is Appalling.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A campaign of extermination against the rebellious elements is being waged ruthlessly by the Russian governmena, and little or no mercy is shown the agitators. The government, having obtained the upper hand once again, has determined never to relinquish it. The imperial policy is shown by the fact that during the last eight weeks the military authorities in the Baltic provinces have hanged 18 persons; shot 621; killed in battle or by fright 620; flogged 250, including two women, and burned ninety-seven farm houses, twenty-two dwellings, four schools, two town halls and three clubhouses. Among those executed were thirteen schoolmasters and twenty-nine farm owners. The military is maneuvering, in view of the expected strikes, with punitive trains, armed with Hotchkiss guns, and has proceeded at great speed to Kiev.

LEADERS BLOCK WARNINGS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, March 17.—There already is evidence that only a check and not a defeat has been administered to the reactionists who are conducting the anti-Semitic agitation.

Premier Witte, after he had forced a decision of the Cabinet to suppress the agitation, knowing the audacity of his opponents, took the precaution privately to ask the Jewish leaders to notify him instantly whenever the Jewish inhabitants of any locality were threatened, in order to place him in a position to insist that measures be taken to protect them.

The Jewish leaders, however, charge that the reactionary clique with the connivance of sympathetic local governor-generals are boldly arranging to block such warnings. The leaders claim to have proof that orders have been given at several places, specifically citing Vitebsk, West Russia, not to transmit messages to the Premier warning him of the imminence of trouble. It is further charged, but proof is lacking, that this was done with the knowledge of Interior Minister Durnovo.

It has been established that Count Podgorichanje, chief of the gendarmerie of Gomel, West Russia, who armed a mob there, while ostentatiously dismissed by M. Durnovo, in reality was only transferred to a better position at Yalta Crimea.

In spite of the official denial of the shooting of undesirable refugees sent back to Russia from England, private information has been obtained tending partially to support the charge. Many of the refugees were sent to Baltic ports, where the authorities are showing no mercy to revolutionists, despite the Emperor's instructions to display greater leniency.

When the refugees disembarked, having fled from Russia without passports, they were regarded as suspects and some of them were given a short shrift.

WITTE WIRES KRAUS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, March 17.—Adolph Kraus of this city, president of the Executive Committee of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, has received the following cablegram from Count Witte:

"Adolph Kraus, Chicago: I am sure you have no doubts that I cannot approve violence, no matter against whom it is directed. The deplorable events that have taken place were the results of riots. You may be persuaded the government will use all possible measures to prevent violence against peaceable inhabitants without regard to what nationality they belong.

[Signed] "COUNT WITTE."

STOESSEL WILL SUFFER.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, March 17.—The evidence taken in the course of the investigation into the surrender of Port Arthur by Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel, which probably will drag on for six weeks longer, will heavily damage the reputation of Stoessel, who is now demanding that Gen. Nogi and other Japanese commanders be summoned as witnesses to testify to the heroic character of the defense.

"BLACK HUNDRED" THREATENS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURGH, March 17.—The members of the council of the empire who voted for the abolition of the death penalty have received threatening letters from the "Black Hundred."

Formal regulations have been promulgated prohibiting the purchase or sale of explosives under penalty of imprisonment at hard labor for five years, and if it is proved that the explosives were intended for revolutionary purposes the penalty is fifteen years at hard labor.

CAPTAIN SENTENCED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

MOSCOW, March 17.—Capt. Shamansky, who refused to order his company to fire on the people here last autumn, has been sentenced by a court-martial to be dismissed from the service and confined for eighteen months in a fortress.

NOT FOMENTING STRIKE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

MOSCOW, March 17.—The committee of the Social Democrats denies that it is participating in efforts to provoke a new general and political strike.

GUNS ON FAST TRAIN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KIEFF (Russia) March 17.—The arrival here of a military train armed with machine guns and quick firers intended for use in punitive expeditions is said to have developed a speed of a hundred miles an hour.

SOPHS ARE FIRST.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, March 17.—The sophomore crew this afternoon won the annual Stanford interclass regatta on Redwood Slough, defeating the freshmen and junior crews in succession. The races were rowed under favorable weather conditions, and in good time. The course was a three-quarter-mile straightaway, and the winning crew covered this distance, both heats, in the good time of 4:15.

The crew which won today last year defeated the classes of California and Washington, and is reckoned the fastest class crew ever developed on the Pacific Coast.

The following men were in the winning boat:

WHAT SULPHUR DOES

For The Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver, and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins, while experimenting with sulphur remedies, soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four to five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article and sold by druggists and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin diseases as this remedy."

At any rate, people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers, a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

PILES

Cured After 50 Years. We Can Cure Piles and Prove It.

Sample Package Free by Mail, So That You Can Prove It On Yourself. No Surgery.

Piles (or hemorrhoids) rarely kill, but they cause more exquisite agony in a few minutes than much more serious troubles. This is especially true in the case of those who are ever so slightly constipated. It means the certain renewal of the agony every morning. It is inevitable and unavoidable.

Piles can now be quickly and perfectly cured, without pain, cutting or detention from business or occupation. It has already been demonstrated in thousands of cases, in both sexes, at all ages and in the very worst as well as the ordinary ones.

We propose to let you try it yourself. You have probably been bitterly disappointed by many so-called Pile-Cures.

This is why we want you to try our remedy before you pay a penny for it. Then you will know certainly and absolutely, whether it will do for you what it has done for so many others. It is for sale in every drug store because people must have it.

No one who has not suffered the torments of itching, painful or bleeding piles can appreciate, for one moment, the marvelous sense of relief that follows the use of the Pyramid Pile Cure. You can go to the toilet without dread or fear, you can cure yourself at home without the slighest trouble, inconvenience or difficulty.

Follow a few easy and simple directions and get well and stay well.

Go to your druggist at once and buy a box of Pyramid Pile Cure for 50 cents.

Here, for instance, is a sample of the kind of letters we get every day and we don't have to ask for them:

"Friend, I write to tell what good your Pyramid Pile Cure has done for me. I used your sample, and it did me so much good I went and got two boxes, and I used one and I am another man altogether. I have no pain, no piles, and I have been troubled with them for over fifty years, and could find no relief till now, thanks to your timely cure. Use my name if it will do you any good. Isaac Smith, Wharton, N. Y."

YOUNG GIRL VICTIM OF REDONDO FIEND.

ALL Redondo was thoroughly aroused last night over a villanous assault on one of the young women of that city by a human fiend, who up to a late hour this morning had eluded capture.

A daughter of E. Cowpre-Thwaite, a traveling man, was the victim. Posses are searching for her assailant.

Miss Cowper-Thwaite, who is 19 years old, and lives with her mother on the bluff two blocks south of the hotel, went down town last night to do some shopping. She was returning to her home when she noticed a man was following her.

The young woman attempted to walk rapidly enough to get away from him, but he gained on her. When she was within a block of her home he seized her by the throat and dragged her into a clump of bushes, nearby.

Threatening to cut her throat if she made any outcry, he made a criminal assault on her.

In her struggles her clothing was torn and disarranged and she lost her shoes.

The wretch later looked through her purse. When he saw that it contained only 45 cents he spurned the money and ran away down the beacn, leaving the young woman, seriousl yinjured and fainting.

She had a frightful experience in making her way home, where she was reported at an early hour this morning as in a serious condition.

The whole town was stirred by the outrage and parties of officers and citizens were scouting the country about there last night in pursuit of the criminal. At 3 o'clock this morning he had not been found.

BOSTON CELEBRATES TWO ANNIVERSARIES.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BOSTON, March 17.—The celebration in South Boston, today, of the anniversary of the evcauation of Boston by the British troops was observed with more than the usual ceremonies.

The day's exercises were begun with the firing of salutes by the warships in the harbor and at the forts. Mayor Fitzgerald entertained at breakfast the city's special Evacuation Day guests and a large number of prominent citizens. The guests included Lieut.-Gen. John C. Bates, Congressman William S. McNary, Rear-Admiral A. S. Snow and Gov. Curtis Guild, Jr.

A feature of the day was the military and naval parade, in which bluejackets and marines from the warships Rhode Island, Des Moines, Wabash and Cleveland participated.

There was also a parade of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, in observance of St. Patrick's Day, which was reviewed by the Governor and Mayor.

BONAPARTE A SPEAKER.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PHILADELPHIA, March 17.—Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte was the guest of honor and the chief speaker, tonight, at the dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick. During the course of his remarks Secretary Bonaparte spoke of the necessity of a greater navy. In this connection he said:

"As we are situated, it can be only when the navy has failed that the other branch of the service, the army, could be called upon to protect the life of the nation against serious peril.

"I ask, tonight, that the Sons of St. Patrick bring all their influence to bear on public opinion in order to render it imperative in demanding from Congress that under no circumstance shall parsimony or the pressure of minor interests or any consideration of faction or party interfere with the upbuilding of a great navy."

BANQUET AT DELMONICO'S.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—Rear-Admiral Joseph Coghlan, U.S.N., Congressman Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts; Congressman W. Bourke Cochran of this city; Mayor McClellan and Thomas A. Daly of Philadelphia were among the speakers tonight at a banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick at Delmonico's. The banquet followed a day of celebration by all the Irish societies of the city and a parade up Fifth avenue, this afternoon, in which 3000 men took part.

MOST'S DEATH COMES TO PASS.

NOTORIOUS ANARCHIST QUITS LIFE AT CINCINNATI.

After a Bomb-proof Career He Is Carried Off by Erysipelas—A Few Friends With Him at the Last. Berkman, His Successor, Refuses to Disclose His Plans.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CINCINNATI, March 17.—Herr Johann Most, the anarchist, died in this city today of erysipelas.

Most came to this city Monday, on the invitation of friends, and had been the guest of Adolph Kraus of Cutter street. He was to have delivered a lecture in Chicago Wednesday night, but on account of an attack of erysipelas, he was obliged to cancel his engagement, although his attack was not regarded as serious. Up to a few hours before his death, his physician expressed confidence that his patient would soon recover.

Most was delirious most of the time during his last few days' illness, suffering greatly. During the larger part of last night he was unconscious, but during the morning he regained consciousness for a short time, and at 9 o'clock seemed more cheerful, and apparently was suffering little pain.

Later, he again became unconscious, and gradually his strength left him, until life expired. With him at the end were a few of his friends in this city, who had been caring for him during his sickness. No plans have yet been made for the funeral, the friends in this city awaiting word from his wife, to whom a message was sent.

BERKMAN HIS SUCCESSOR.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Anarchists in Pittsburgh and the Monongahela Valley tonight, in many meetings, are mourning Johann Most, their dead leader, and swearing fealty to Alexander Berkman, whom Most chose as his successor while in Pittsburgh a week ago.

Berkman, who is serving the last month of his sentence, received the news of Most's death without a particle of emotion. His sardonic features sharpened into an ugly scowl when he was asked today if he intended to assume the mantel of anarchy which Most had dropped on his shoulders.

"If I have any plans for the future," said Berkman, "I shall confide them to my own people, not to representatives of a plutocratic press. All I ask of the newspapers is that they let me alone when I come out. Johann Most was a good man, and a great leader. All I have to say is that I wish I were as worthy as he."

FIVE OF FAMILY ARRESTED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Judge Cochrane, sitting in the trial of wife murderer, W. D. Boles, convicted of poisoning his wife to get rid of her, but given by the jury only a life sentence, denounced the jury, the criminal law of Mississippi and the lawyers who have planned it.

He then ordered the arrest for perjury of five members of the convict's family, who swore to alleged facts that saved the man's neck. Today, one of the men arrested confessed that the family of Boles had conspired to save him.

Feeling is running high, both against Boles and his perjured brothers and others who saved him.

MISS ANTHONY'S ESTATE.

ROCHESTER (N. Y.) March 17.—The will of Miss Susan B. Anthony was offered for probate today. The estate amounts to $10,000, all of which is left to the women-suffrage cause. Rev. Dr. Anna Shaw and Lucy E. Anthony of Philadelphia and Mary S. Anthony of this city are named as the trustees. The Anthony homestead is in Mary Anthony's name. By the terms of the will, Mary Anthony will not receive anything from her sister's estate.

MONEY TO BE RETURNED.

New York Life Trustees Are to Give Back "Yellow Dog" Contributions to Campaign Funds.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—Opposition has arisen among the trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company to the proposed suits against the estate of John A. McCall to recover the "yellow dog" funds he gave to Andrew Hamilton, and the $148,000 of policy holders' money he contributed to the Republican national campaign in 1896, 1900 and 1904.

It was said yesterday that this opposition was so strong that it would be able to defeat the movement to sue.

It also developed that the members of the Finance Committee who served at the times the campaign payments were made, have about completed a plan to make good the total amount out of their own pockets.

The opposition to suing the estate of McCall has become so open that it is expected the trustees favoring such action will not dare to bring before the trustees a resolution authorizing the procedure. Such a resolution will be necessary, for authorization has been only given so far to sue McCall, personally.

But no matter what may be done with reference to the McCall estate, suits will be brought against Hamilton for restitution.

Rupture

New Scientific Appliance, Always a Perfect Fit—Adjustable to Any Size Person—Easy, Comfortable, Never Slips, No Obnoxious Springs or Pads—Costs Less Than Many Common Trusses—Made for Men, Women or Children.

Sent On Trial.

I have invented a rupture appliance that I can safely say, by 30 years' experience in the rupture business, is the only one that will absolutely hold the rupture and never slip and yet is cool, comfortable, conforms to every movement of the body without chafing or hurting and costs less than many ordinary trusses. There are no springs or hard lumpy pads and yet it holds the rupture safely and firmly without pain or inconvenience. I have put the price so low that any person, rich or poor, can buy, and I absolutely guarantee it.

I make it to your order—send it to you—you wear it, and if it doesn't satisfy you send it back to me and I will refund your money without question.

That is the fairest proposition ever made by a rupture specialist. The banks or the postmaster here in Marshall will tell you that is the way I do business—always absolutely on the square.

Here is what Mr. Jas. Britton, a prominent manufacturer of Bethlehem, Pa., writes:

"C. E. Brooks, Esq. Dear Sir:—I have been ruptured six years and have always had trouble with it till I got your appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact at times I did not know I had it on. It just adapted itself to the shape of the body and clung to the spot no matter what position I was in. It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture, if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They certainly would never regret it. My rupture is all healed up and nothing ever did it but your appliance. Jas. Britton."

If you have tried most everything else come to me. Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. Write me today and I will send you my book on Rupture and its Cure, showing my appliance and giving you prices and names of people who have tried it and been cured. It is instant relief when all others fail. Remember I use no salves, no harness, no lies. Just a straight business deal at a reasonable price. C. E. Brooks, 1378 Brooks Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

DEFUNCT BANK DIVIDEND.

Enterprise National of Allegheny Will Pay a Small Percentage in April.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PITTSBURGH, March 17.—It was stated today that the receiver of the defunct Enterprise National Bank of Allegheny will pay a dividend to depositors early in April and that ultimately they may receive 30 cents on the dollar.

The State deposit in the bank at the time of the failure has been made good, the full amount $1,030,000, having been turned over to the State Treasurer by the trust companies which were sureties for the bank.

WHAT DO YOU FEED YOUR BABY?

If the Stomach Causes Distress, There's Something Wrong.

Does Baby's stomach cause trouble? Does constipation make Baby's days miserable and nights restless and increase your cares and worries?

Before you become really alarmed and call in the doctor to give the little one a lot of drugs, just stop and think about what you have been feeding Baby. Have you let it eat "what the others eat?"

Perhaps Baby is three or four years old and therefore you feast it on meat and potatoes and gravy and pie? If that's true, and it is true in countless thousands of homes, there is no mystery about Baby's stomach trouble.

You may reply that Baby has to have nourishing food just the same as any one else. True enough. But it needs,—and it must have it, if it is to grow up and be healthy and robust,—nourishing food that it can digest easily.

Most mothers know, though many of them never apply this knowledge, that in wheat Nature has provided for us one food which contains all the elements necessary for the sustenance of life and the positive assurance of health and happiness. When prepared in the form of Malta-Vita, wheat is the perfect food for babies, whether they are weak and sickly, or strong and well. And it is just as good for grown folks. All grocers sell Malta-Vita. Ready to eat. Crisp and delicious.

SIDE TALKS BY THE OFFICE BOY

The Old Man says, "A boy is known by the company he keeps away from." I seem to do an awful lot of things that displease Ma and I told her the other day she ought to be glad that I ain't twins, the only thing that I'd like to be twins for, is so that I could be at both stores at the same time. We do an awful lot of business at both stores and now that we've put in a big line of ready to wear clothes in both places, it's a toss up which store is going to do the biggest business. Down at Broadway and 6th st., they've got so many more windows to display goods they have an advantage. They put in a line of pure linen shirts, marked them $1.25, and you'd think the people were going to eat them alive, the way they went for them. Another window display that attracted a lot of attention was a window of sateen, swazette and pongee silk outing shirts with the soft collars and cuffs, they're going to be awfully stylish this year.

HOOTS BY THE OWL

Reading the papers these days, looks as if some folks thought they were making history. "The greatest merchandise movements" and "Epoch-making sales" are taking place right here in Los Angeles every day—at least that's the impression you get, unless you're wise.

"The Owl" has made history in Los Angeles, so far as the drug business is concerned. We are not resting on our oars—not for a moment. But "The Owl" makes no misstatements in regard to sales and values. When we put on a special—we advertise it frankly, openly, honestly—for just what it is—and how we happen to make it.

These "greatest ever" and "tremendous movement" sales get smaller and smaller when you apply the test of good common sense to them. Sit on the safety valve, Mr. "Epoch-Maker." Mushy statements don't go with common-sense buyers. They want reliable values.

Look inside "The Owl" stores—any hour—any day. It will prove an object lesson.

IS STRICKEN BY ASSASSIN

Faithful Officer Slain in Tough Quarter.

Deputy City Marshal Dead at Oxnard.

Had Incurred Enmity of the Worst Element.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OXNARD, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A. M. McNaughton, deputy City Marshal and night watchman, was found dead this morning, shot through the head. His body was discovered at 7:30 o'clock in a small alleyway between the Chinese saloon and the Red Light district, by Sam Rowe, who was there to find a Chinese cook.

The bullet entered just above the left ear and nearly penetrated to the other side. The ball was a big one, and made an ugly wound. The shot was fired at a distance of not over four feet as the face was marked with powder. It was discharged straight from the side, striking him perpendicularly. He was probably killed instantly.

TRUSTEES OFFER REWARD.

The authorities were at once notified, the body was taken to the morgue and an investigation was at once started.

City Marshal Reno and all the City Trustees are straining every nerve to trace the tragedy to its source. The board met in special session this morning and offered a reward of $200 for information leading to the capture and conviction of the murderer.

R. B. Haydock, chairman of the board has informed Gov. Pardee of the affair and requested him to offer a reward also.

Mr. McNaughton had been looking after the lowest element in the worst part of town and he had enforced the law so well as to incur the enmity of some in that district. During the last week he had been especially active in suppressing Chinese gambling and the night before last he closed two fan tan houses. It is thought likely that some Chinaman has sought this method to secure revenge.

RAIDS CHINESE QUARTER.

The whole Chinese quarter has been raided today by City Marshal Reno, and Sheriff McMartin, who was called over from Ventura. All gambling outfits were packed up and taken to the City Hall and six suspects were lodged in the City Jail.

The Coroner's jury adjourned this afternoon after hearing the doctor's testimony and will assemble again Monday morning to hear the report of the Sheriff, City Marshal and witnesses.

Mr. McNaughton was a candidate with good prospects of winning at the election for City Marshal. He did his work in such a way that it was almost beyond reproach.

The murdered man leaves a widow and three children and a beautiful cottage just finished and not yet completely paid for. A movement is on to raise a purse for the family. The widow is prostrated over the affair.

This will result in speedy and thorough reform in the Chinese and Red Light district, where lawbreaking has been common and human life has been valued at a low figure.

MADE MISTAKE ABOUT MRS. SHEA.

ACTRESS HAS TROUBLE WITH TOLEDO "PASTOR'S UNION."

Was Arrested for "Having Played" Sunday Night, but Shows That Her Part Was Taken by an Understudy. Now Sues Ketcham and Block for Twenty-five Thousand Dollars.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOLEDO (O.) March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Charlotte Burkett Shea commenced action for $25,000 damages for false imprisonment today against George H. Ketcham and Moses G. Block, owners of the Valentine Theater, and Charles Potter, one of the law-and-order workers.

In her suit, she alleges that she was arrested for having played "at the Lyceum," last Sunday night, when she showed to the court today that she did not play, but that her part was taken by an understudy.

Ketcham and Block are brought into the suit for the alleged reason that the managers of the other houses have proof that they, or at least Ketcham, is in reality the "Pastors' Union," which instituted Mrs. Shea's arrest.

KILLED IN SALOON ROW.

OWNER MAKES RESISTANCE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, March 17.—One man was killed and three others injured, probably fatally, during a fight in the saloon of Henry Dusing at Lake View. The dead man is William Curry. The wounded men were taken to a hospital. One of them was William Russell, a printer.

Curry and the three injured men, according to the police, went to Dusing's saloon in the evening and were drinking heavily. It is said they had a grievance of some kind against the proprietor and that they told him they had "come to do him up."

Dusing paid no attention to the threats. Later the men attacked the proprietor. The bartender hurried to the aid of his employer. Several shots were fired, one of the bullets striking Curry in the head, killing him instantly, and another shot penetrated the abdomen of one of the other men. Russell and the other assailant of the saloon-keeper also were wounded.

The bartender and Proprietor Dusing were arrested.

FOUND WITH GOODS.

COOK CHARGED WITH THEFT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—James M. Lugan, a cook in a local café, was arrested yesterday charged with the theft of a large quantity of silverware. During the last few months the management of the café has missed plate to the amount of $3000. Lugan was suspected, and yesterday the detectives visited his room and recovered a portion of the missing goods.

MRS. WILLIAMS INSANE.

SUFFERING FROM PARANOIA.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Ella B. Williams, who was committed to Bellevue for examination as to her mental condition, she having demanded money at the office of J. Pierpont Morgan, has been pronounced insane by Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald and Dr. Charles L. Dana, who were engaged by William Rand, attorney for Morgan, to make an examination. Dr. M. S. Gregory of the Bellevue staff, also pronounced Mrs. Williams insane. He said that she was suffering from paranoia, or monomania.

means that you are losing control of your will power; it is difficult to concentrate your thoughts; you are forgetful, languid, nervous, irritable. Refresh your tired brain with Dr. Miles' Nervine, which will soothe, feed and strengthen the exhausted nerves, and renew your brain power. The first bottle will not fail to help you; if so, your druggist will return your money.

She is about fifty-five years old, and has a son in England. Mrs. Williams's committment to an institute for the insane will be vigorously contested, Monday, in the Supreme Court, by Sylvester S. Taylor, her attorney.

CRIME BRIEFS.

Father Shoots Son.

SACRAMENTO, March 17.—C. L. Kameyer, a plasterer, fired three shots at his son, James Kameyer, this morning. One of the bullets entered the young man's shoulder and another made a slight wound on his arm. Young Kameyer was not seriously injured. The trouble occurred at the family home. The elder Kameyer was recently released from a local hospital, where he was treated for excessive alcoholism. He is under arrest, charged with assault with intent to commit murder.

Girl Was Crazy.

SAN JOSE (Cal.) March 17.—Tessie McMahon, the young woman who last night attempted suicide by firing a large caliber bullet through her right side, is still living, although it seems impossible that she can recover. The officers and her friends are convinced that illness had resulted in temporary loss of reason.

Teamster's Mad Act.

WHEELING (W. Va.) March 17.—In a jealous rage, waiting from nightfall until midnight for his wife's return, Davis Paxton, a teamster aged 28 years, shot his wife, and believing her dead, tried to kill his baby, his father-in-law, and two police officers. He then turned the weapon on himself and sent a bullet into his lungs, inflicting a fatal wound.

Bad Men Put Away.

SAN JOSE, March 17.—Fong Chong, Thomas Beatty and John Armanacq, were taken to Folsom prison today, the latter to serve five years for forging railroad pay checks, and the two others to serve ten years each for criminal assault.

SCALP SPECIALISTS

Use and Recommend

Newbro's Herpicide

"I am sending you my photograph to show what Newbro's Herpicide has done for me.

"Since I first tried Herpicide upon my hair I have used it exclusively in giving scalp treatments to others, and I would not think of trying to get along without it.

(Signed) "MRS. ANNA CONNER.
"2807 Archer Ave., Chicago, Ill."

Hundreds of lady scalp specialists and hair dressers use and recommend Newbro's Herpicide, instead of products of their own manufacture upon which a much larger profit could be made. They claim that Herpicide makes friends for them and gives much better satisfaction. Some hair dressers use Herpicide for obstinate cases only, but why not use the best first?

Herpicide is a delightful dressing that can be used when there is no disease of the hair or scalp, and as an actual remedy for dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair it stands in a class singularly its own.

Many ladies object to a gummy and sticky hair dressing, or one that is full of sedimentary chemicals intended to dye the hair. The marked preference for a clean and dainty preparation, particularly one that overcomes excessive oiliness and leaves the hair light and fluffy, is reflected in the enormous sale of Newbro's Herpicide. Discriminating ladies become enthusiastic over its refreshing quality and exquisite fragrance. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

GOLD TEETH

When a tooth is so badly decayed or broken away that filling would not prove successful or permanent, we cover the entire tooth with a gold shell (commonly called cap or crown) 22 carats fine. This shell is an exact counterpart of the tooth before decay and is made to fit accurately to the margin of the gum. It is cemented on with a cement which sets and hardens like concrete and holds for a lifetime. This cement also acts as a filling and protects the tooth or root against cold and heat. Dr. Schiffman's method consists of simplifying a system so that a crown is made at one sitting, and not several, as formerly by the old method.

It is with pleasure that I state that I have had several teeth filled by Dr. Schiffman, and that he removed the nerve and filled the root of one of my teeth and put on a porcelain crown which cannot be distinguished from a natural tooth, all of which was done without pain.

JUDSON R. RUSH, 217 New High st.
Of Davis & Rush, Attorneys.

I have been treated by Dr. Schiffman for years. I have tried all his different methods, and can say unhesitatingly no dentist or physician has ever operated with such success or skill. In extracting my teeth he did it without any pain to me. It is a great pleasure to me to recommend him and his method of treatment.

MILO M. POTTER,
Prop. Van Nuys Hotel, L. A. and Hotel Potter, Santa Barbara.

Several years ago Dr. Schiffman did some crown work for me which has proven entirely satisfactory. The work was done painlessly and with great skill. It gives me great pleasure to recommend him.

IRVING R. SMITH,
L. A. TIMES.

Ten years ago a reputable dentist of Virginia told me that a certain molar tooth could not be satisfactorily saved, and that it would probably not be of service for one year. It has not only served me for ten years, as Dr. Schiffman saved and crowned it, and comparatively speaking, without pain. I sing his praise.

A Fairyland of Exquisite Beauty

Grand Millinery Opening

The superb and brilliant aggregation of fine millinery at which your presence is earnestly desired, is the most lavish display of hats ever made by a Los Angeles concern.

Each and every style possesses its own individual charm, an indescribable air of good taste and winsomeness which cannot fail to captivate.

"Frambois," the beautiful soft shade selected by Dame Fashion as the prevailing color for Spring, has been cleverly wrought into innumerable creations, while lavender, white and sautern are shown in abundance. Cloth of gold and gilt is extensively employed, lending a glint of life and brightness which is altogether the most fetching combination devised for many seasons.

Many of these hats bear such world-famous names as Mme. Pouyanne, Virot, Felix and Berthe. No less effective are the beautiful creations from our art millinery rooms, reflecting the favorite models of the leading Paris designers. To this fairyland of beauty and fashion we cordially ask your attendance and that of your friends.

Welsh left town a few hours afterwards, and the members of the Star company, learning of his departure last night, "struck" and the doors remained closed.

Welsh was a severe loser at the race track this season, and his horses have been within the money but twice, representing a total earning of about $75.

The Star has been under the eye of the police for some time, and the management has been warned to eliminate certain disgraceful acts or suffer the penalty of having the curtain rung down on them. While the class of performances has never been materially changed, the police have remained inactive.

Welsh's sudden downfall, however, puts a sudden end to the eyesore, and a horde of performers who have worked for weeks on half salary, are now searching for some trace of their erstwhile employer, or, better still, a portion of the money due them.

KILLS FREAK KITTEN.

Mother Cat Deliberately Takes Life of New-Born Offspring That Faced Both Ways.

SAN BERNARDINO, March 17.—A remarkable illustration of the survival of the fittest has just been witnessed by a nurse at the Marlborough Hospital, when a mother cat carefully looked over a litter of new-born kittens, and noting one which was a monstrosity, deliberately put it to death.

The kitten was born with a double face. Seven other kittens were born within the same hour. The mother cat lovingly fondled her offspring, and coming to the double-faced kitten, the old cat took it by the back of the neck and deliberately shook its life out.

The act was witnessed by a trained nurse, who could not interfere in time to prevent the deed. The body was turned over to Dr. W. H. Mills, chief surgeon in charge, who has preserved the kitten in alcohol, and will deliver a paper on the subject of natural selection, as displayed in this remarkable instinct of the mother cat.

The kitten was perfectly formed, even the two faces being perfect.

PRIZES FOR FINE GROUNDS.

Corona Woman's Improvement Club Proposes to Stimulate Such Enterprises.

CORONA, March 17.—The Woman's Improvement Club is to offer prizes to encourage improvement of blocks as a whole, private grounds and also for neat condition of vacant lots and alleys. The club will also offer prizes to boys and girls under 16 years for the prettiest flower beds and best vegetable gardens. The time of this competition, which will be the first of the sort held here, is from March 19 to June 30.

W. H. Jameson, who recently donated $100 to the Woman's Improvement Club to be awarded as prizes for improvement of private grounds, has deeded to the club a lot in the northwest part of the city, inside the boulevard.

Don't fool with a cold; no one can tell what the end may be. Pneumonia, catarrh, chronic bronchitis and consumption invariably result from neglected colds. Nothing can be compared with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as a quick cure for colds and influenza, and by its use any serious consequences from these diseases may be avoided.—[Adv

Turner's Ugly Attempt to Hide Crookedness.

Took Fifteen Thousand from Paying Tellers.

Innocent Men Under Watch for Two Weeks.

In a brazen attempt to cover up his shortage as assistant cashier of the Union Bank of Savings, at the time of its merger with the German-American Savings Bank, George N. Turner, self-confessed defaulter, tried to shift criminal responsibility upon two innocent associates, according to high officials of the late Union Bank of Savings. So far did he succeed that for two weeks these two men, honest and faithful, were under suspicion and surveillance.

It is admitted by these officials that on Saturday, February 3, when officials of the German-American Savings Bank appeared unexpectedly a week in advance of the proposed merger, to make an official count and check of the cash and moneys in his possession, Turner, realizing that it was a critical moment for him, abstracted from the paying teller's compartment of the safe $15,000 in order that his accounts might check properly, thereby throwing the odium of the shortage upon the paying tellers.

This ruse succeeded for some time, as it was impossible for the officals of the bank to trace the shortage. As was undoubtedly right and proper from the bank heads' point of view, hired detectives shadowed the two men day and night. In this espionage Turner did not escape. It was on the reports of these detectives that suspicion pointed directly toward Turner alone, and indicated the utter innocence of the tellers at the same time that the investigation of the books was proving this same thing more completely to the satisfaction of the bank officials.

With his books in the hands of experts, Turner could no longer hide his falsified entries and "doctored" daily balances. The detectives brought such conclusive proof that even Turner could not longer deny, he broke down and confessed.

Turner was forced to resign under pressure, and at the same time the same pressure was exerted on his father and friends to make his shortage good.

As for the two tellers of the Union Bank of Savings, upon whom Turner attempted to shift the burden of his guilt, they were completely exonerated and are still retained in the same positions in the employ of the German-American Savings Bank, of which merger institution they are trusted employés. Turner himself was honored with the appointment of assistant cashier before his crookedness was discovered.

"This attempt of Turner's to fasten his guilt upon innocent parties, we consider the worst and most reprehensible feature of the whole case," said a Union Bank of Savings official last night. Evidently he would have been willing to see innocent men sent to the penitentiary to shield his own self.

"Never in all of my experience have I run across a better-developed case of monumental nerve than that displayed by Turner. Up to the very moment of his confession, he maintained with the same air of injured innocence that he was purely the victim of circumstance.

"What did he do with the money? That is more or less a mystery. There is no doubt but he has been using the money for some time, probably little by little as his needs demanded."

With the same cool and unruffled front which has characterized his demeanor since the very beginning of the investigation, Turner, with his wife, attended a banquet at the Jonathan Club Friday night, but yesterday all efforts to see him at his home failed. Neighbors declared last night that they had seen nothing of the Turners all day.

It was given out by an official of the bank last night that the amount of Turner's shortage as shown by a full investigation of his accounts, reaches the sum of $15,000, and that the books show that his first "irregularity" was committed some time back, followed thick and fast by other "indiscretions," all of which he carefully covered up through the falsification of his books.

As has heretofore been explained, neither the bank nor the surety company on his bond will lose a cent, as the full amount has been made good by Turner's father and his friends.

And all has not yet been told about Turner—"society" leader, fashion plate, church worker and bank-account falsifier.

NELSON'S MEMORANDUM.

Britishers Save the Precious Relic at Auction at a Cost of Eighteen Thousand Dollars.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There was quite a nervous feeling and flutter, judging from the appeals to the government, when it became known that Nelson's famous memorandum to the fleet before the batttle of Trafalgar was to be put up for auction at Christy's. But the anxiety has subsided and given place to rejoicing.

In the same way as a patriotic art dealer recently purchased the famous picture of Venus and Cupid by Velasquez, at a cost of $225,000, and presented it to the National Gallery, so has this memorandum been purchased by another patriotic dealer, Frank Sabin, he bidding and bidding until the hammer finally fell, amid cheers of a large crowd, at $18,000.

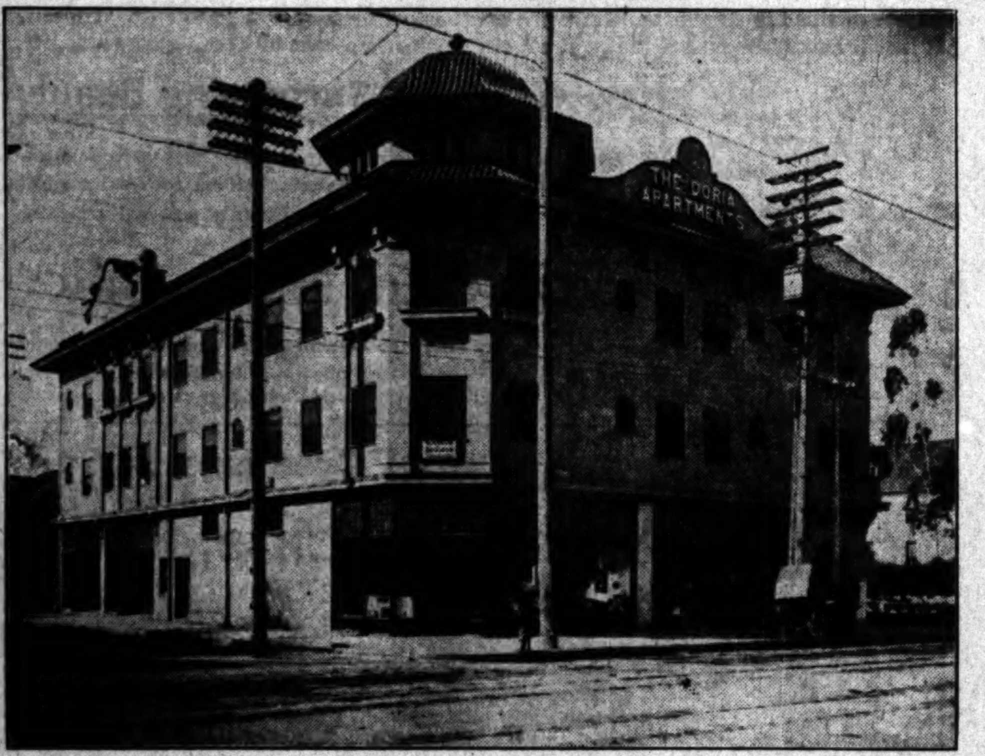
"The Doria Apartments" Equipped with

Marshall & Stearns Company's Patented Fixtures

Excellent Apartment Building Is Cleverly and Conveniently Arranged by Means of These Space Saving Devices.



"THE DORIA APARTMENTS," CORNER OF PICO AND UNION STREETS, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

"The Doria Apartments" is another modern apartment building equipped with the MARSHALL & STEARNS COMPANY'S PATENTED WALL BEDS AND FIXTURES.

Like many throughout California, it is popular with the tourists as well as the permanent resident, and very seldom is there to be found in it a vacant suite. This is because its rooms and suites are pleasantly and conveniently arranged, and each bears the appearance and has to a very large degree, the comforts and advantages of home.

Marshall & Stearns Company's Patented Fixtures installed in any Apartment House, Hotel, Flat Building or Cottage, give to that structure the above advantageous points, and assure for it high-class and permanent tenants. First, because for these many advantages the tenant is willing to pay the highest rent obtainable, and second, because that same tenant is loath to leave a room or apartment which furnishes him such splendid and pleasant surroundings.

To have in one's room, or suite of rooms, a handsome mantel or console, a bookcase, a writing desk, a handy closed compartment for the storing of magazines, etc., a dining table and a gas range which swings from one room to the other, with the gas burning, besides all the other necessary pieces of furniture, means much for the comfort of the occupant. It means that his room, or suite of rooms, is furnished in a manner superior to those in structures built without these PATENTED FIXTURES. It means he has a much more homelike place of abode, and that for this he is willing and does pay a rental of from 25 to 33 1-3 per cent. higher. Besides all this, the floor space is clear, and you are not crowded or hemmed in between your bed and chairs.

By using the MARSHALL & STEARNS COMPANY'S PATENTED FIXTURES your mantel or console, which furnish splendid adornment for your room, is your bed. It closes into a ventilated closet and is perfectly sanitary. Your bookcase and writing desk is your closet door, and your center table is a part of your dining table, the top of which hangs on the outer side of the door leading into the kitchen.

The many advantages derived from the MARSHALL & STEARNS COMPANY'S PATENTED FIXTURES in the construction of all kinds of buildings for living purposes, should receive the careful consideration of everyone who is interested in any way in the construction of such buildings. Your failure to do so will be your loss. Come in and let us show you through the THREE-ROOM COTTAGE which he have erected on the floor of our display rooms, and in which all of our PATENTED FIXTURES are installed.

Send for copy of

which illustrates and describes in detail our PATENTED WALL BEDS AND FIXTURES. It contains many facts and much food for thought in connection with buildings of all kinds for living purposes. Hotel owners, managers, capitalists, architects, contractors and builders, and builders of and investors in Apartment Houses, Hotels, Homes and Cottages, should send for a copy and study its contents. It tells you how to best construct your building for your tenants as well as yourselves. It tells you how to reduce the cost of construction and how to increase the income from 25 per cent. to 33 1-3 per cent. IT IS MAILED FREE UPON REQUEST. SEND FOR A COPY TODAY.

YELLOW FEVER SUSPECTED.

Sickness in New Orleans Hospital Puzzles Staff and Consultation Is Ordered.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—Health officers of Mississippi are in this city to investigate a supposed case of yellow fever on which local physicians have not come to an agreement.

Dr. Herron of the State Board of Health yesterday furnished the press with the following statement:

"The case of Jules Ebernz was reported to this office as suspicious Monday afternoon, March 12, from the Charity Hospital, Dr. Denegre Martin and Dr. J. M. Batchellor diagnosed the case as catarrhal jaundice. Dr. Hamilton Jones, after three days' observation of the case, reports it as yellow fever. The health officers of Mississippi, Alabama and Texas, have been notified."

The case was treated as suspicious from the beginning and every precaution taken.

Following is a copy of the telegram sent to the State health officers of the three adjoining States:

"NEW ORLEANS, March 16.—Committee appointed to investigate suspicious fever cases, Charity Hospital, differ as to diagnosis. Invite you to come [Signed] "DR. C. H. IRON,

"President State Board of Health."

Dr. Batchellor, house physician of the Charity Hospital, when asked regarding the case said that the patient was an oyster shucker, aged 30 years. He was taken to the hospital from a lodging-house on March 8, and it was understood that he had been ill for about seven months.

The physician stated that he had diagnosed the case as catarrhal jaundice, and had seen no reason to alter his opinion. He had treated, and observed hundreds of cases of yellow fever, and was positive that the patient was not suffering from that disease. Ebernz had been at the hospital for about seven days, and the house physician had ample opportunity to observe his ailment and to satisfy himself as to its nature.

DERELICT IS SIGHTED.

PLYMOUTH (Eng.) March 17.—The American line steamer St. Louis, which arrived here today from New York, reports having passed, March 13, close to an abandoned steamer, believed to be the Dunmore, from Cardiff for Newport News, before reported abandoned January 19. The derelict was directly in the track of the St. Louis, but the clear weather enabled her to avoid a collision.

Old "Dr. Goose" is a Great Friend of the Tailor

THE Flat-iron is the "dope" of the Clothing business.

With the hot pressing Iron a slack section of cloth can be Shrunken up in a minute, to any desired degree.

Or a tight section may be stretched to any given degree in the same manner, at a trifling cost, as compared to the Sincere hand-needle-work required to produce a similar result in a permanent manner.

Now practically 80 per cent. of all clothes are faked into shape in the making, by Old Dr. Goose, the hot Flat-iron.

And, any Garment that owes its shape to the Flat-iron, will need the constant use of that same Flat-iron to keep it in shape.

That's a big thing to remember, Reader.

We are telling you about this vital point of Style-Insurance, and economy in Shape-retention, because we are makers of the "Sincerity Clothes."

And every "Sincerity" Garment is faithfully shaped to a finish by the needle, instead of by the faky Flat-iron.

Every defect in workmanship of "Sincerity Clothes" is investigated and, when found, is permanently corrected by hand-needle-work instead of by the quick, easy, and tricky Flat-iron.

That's practical Shape-insurance, isn't it?

And a coat so made, inspected, and revised, (if necessary) will hang well, be square-shouldered without stuffing or padding, and keep its shape without the "Pressing" that a Coat faked into shape by the Flat-iron would need.

To men who would dress well at moderate outlay this fact is mighty important.

Now, if Shape-insurance, and Shape-retention are worth anything to you, Reader, look for the label of the "Sincerity Clothiers" on your next Coat or Overcoat.

That label reads, as follows:

[illegible] PLANS.

[illegible] to do is to [illegible] the water [illegible] during seasons [illegible] Valley has any use for it, and so regulate the flow during the year. If the city needs 20,000 inches, and the discharge of the river and creeks during flood season is 40,000 or 50,000 inches, as estimated by some of the kickers themselves, the surplus will be stored and used to maintain the requisite flow in dry seasons or at times when the entire run-off might be needed for irrigation in the valley. A little knowledge of the function of storage reservoirs would save the Owens Valley people a lot of needless worry.

HAS BOUGHT THE WATER.

Some of the Inyo county objectors say they are perfectly willing that Los Angeles should get water from Owens River for domestic purposes, but not for irrigation. Perhaps they think they can dictate to Los Angeles what she shall do with the water after she has bought it and brought it down here. A good many of them have been perfectly willing to sell land and water to the city without any conditions as to use, and still more of them are anxious to make similar bargains.

A simple law of trade governs the whole matter. If water is worth more in Los Angeles, for irrigation or any other purpose, than in Owens Valley, it will be brought to Los Angeles. That law has operated in all the trades made by the city in Owens Valley, and it will operate just the same in the future. When the Owens Valley farmer is offered more for his water rights than he thinks he can make by the use of them, he will sell. As a matter of fact, the city is flooded with offers of Owens Valley property right now, and many owners who could not induce the city to buy are selling to speculators. If Bishop and Independence disappear from the map, it will be because the inhabitants of those towns can make more money by selling out than by living in them.

A SELFISH CONSPIRACY.

Exploitation of the views of half a dozen Inyo county men on the quantity of water in Owens Valley controlled by the city of Los Angeles can serve no good purpose, and is not intended to serve any good purpose. It is nothing but a part of a preconcerted plan to obstruct the consummation of the city's most vitally important enterprise, and the motives behind that plan are sordid, selfish and inconsistent with civic duty and decent regard for the public welfare. The corporation knockers have talked loosely—in private, only—of "graft" in the Owens River project, and their subsidized organ has attempted to give color to their whispered insinuations by printing matter purporting to show extravagance in the purchase of Owens Valley property by the city's agents. A search for "graft" might not be bootless if directed toward the relations of the knockers and the organ, and carried into the purpose behind the vicious campaign against the welfare of the city.

IRISH TRIBUTE TO ST. PATRICK.

GREAT HALL IS PACKED WITH LOYAL SOULS OF ERIN.

Hibernians Conduct Evening Celebration With Pleasing Features, Including Address by Bishop Conaty on the "Literature of the Gael." His Words Bring Applause.

Good old St. Patrick certainly got a jolly good send-off in Los Angeles last night. Wearin' o' the green was quite the thing, and the clans gathered until they literally packed the spacious Blanchard Hall. Late comers had to be refused admission.

The celebration was under the supervision of Division No. 1, Ancient Order of Hibernians. P. J. O'Connor, president of the division, introduced the chairman, M. J. McGarry, who made a brief address in which he declared that "Irishmen have given to the world the noblest example of the preservation of national sentiment, through oppression for 700 years."

There were musical numbers by Prof. Wilde and Miss Maria Whalen, Miss Anna Doyle, James P. Burns, Miss Mary Kearney and Prof. Frank Carr, the new choirmaster at St. Vibiana's Cathedral, who has come from Worcester, Mass., and who was in charge of the choir when Bishop Conaty was rector there.

After the musical numbers followed Bishop Conaty's address on "The Literature of the Gael." Many times the speaker was interrupted by prolonged applause. He alluded to the recent visit of Dr. Douglas Hyde to this city, and warmly commended this distinguished scholar for the efforts he is making toward the restoration of the Irish as a national language. Bishop Conaty said, in part:

"This history of Irish literature is the history of a people whose records carry us back to nearly a thousand years before Christ, and whose scholarship impressed itself in a very special manner upon the nations whose children had received the lessons of Christianity from the missionaries of Ireland. That Patrick found culture among the Irish is evidenced by his appeal to the intellect of the leaders of the people.

"When Christianity came with St. Patrick, it found an educated class, a spiritual people, full of emotion; their natural pagan traits were Christianized and the people easily led into that magnificent outburst of faith which at once made Ireland the home of sanctity and scholarship. The bard was historian and chronicler and in rhyme recorded the happenings of every day and the pedigree of every prince.

"The first great destruction of Irish literature is chronicled in the advent of the Danes, for whenever they found books or manuscripts they delighted in destroying them. The Norman invaded Ireland in the twelfth century and by his systematic warfare drove from Ireland many of her scholars and purloined much of her literature. When the Irish came in contact with the dragoons of Cromwell, with even more hatred than that shown by the Dane, every effort was made to exterminate all vestiges of religious record. The Penal Laws followed and by them education was proscribed unless received in violation of conscience and the iniquity of attempting to legislate a people into ignorance was consummated. For nearly three centuries afterward, history was made to act as calumniator and vilifier of everything Irish and Catholic.

"Religion, which had always been a characteristic of the race in its pagan days, preserved in its archives the story of the past. The scholars of Erin, who, as monks and nuns, traversed Europe telling the story of redemption and laying the foundations of civilization and scholarship, brought with them as a precious heirloom, the manuscripts of their fathers, saved from the destruction of the Dane and the Norman.

"The story of these Irish monks is a story of the world's civilization. Wherever these sainted men dwelt, they left some portions of the Irish manuscripts which they carried with them. For centuries that literature lay unread and unknown till the genius of modern scholarship in Germany, France and the northern countries, called forth men like Zeus, Kuno Meyer, Pedersen and many others to decipher those records of scholarship and build up for students the key by which they have been able to open this treasure-house of learning and show to the world the genius and beauty of Irish scholarship.

"The great movement in Ireland today toward the preservation of the language is a powerful means in revivifying Irish national character by regaining its very soul, in placing the language of their forefathers in the love and life of the people. Whether the Irish language will ever be a world language is secondary to the necessity of its being a language of the Irish people.

"The enthusiasm in the language fills us with hope that it is the harbinger of unity among the people in regaining not only its literature but with it, its nationality."

MOTHER SAVED BY YOUNG SON.

LITTLE HERO GIVES ALARM WHEN SHE'S IN DANGER.

A. Garcia, Stranger to Family, Enters Home of Mrs. Matilda Arguello and Threatens Her With Harm, When Ten-Year-Old Brings Assistance That Lands Man in Jail.

With his mother practically helpless at the hands of a would-be-murderer, little Antonio Arguello yesterday afternoon saved his parent from harm, and A. Garcia is now locked up in the City Jail.

Mrs. Matilda Arguello, the object of Garcia's insane wrath, luckily escaped uninjured, but is suffering severely from the shock.

Garcia attacked the woman when armed with a murderous knife, and but for Antonio's ready wit, and the assistance lent by Patrolman Arguello, his uncle, a tragedy would have been enacted.

Mrs. Arguello was quietly seated at a writing desk in the library of her home yesterday afternoon at No. 628 Tehama street when Garcia entered. He exchanged a few remarks with the woman and suddenly turned towards her daughter, Mary, with a perfect torrent of epithets. Before Mrs. Arguello could anticipate the man's actions, Garcia had turned upon her with a volley of threats.

Antonio Arguello, who is ten years of age, was occupied with his playthings in an adjoining room. He was not disturbed by Garcia's entrance to the house, but when the man began his storm of abuse the boy crept cautiously to the door and through a slight opening peered into the library.

The lad saw only the flash of the knife and heard indistinctly the words of the murderous beast who stood in a threatening attitude over his mother. Young Arguello hesitated only a moment and then dashed across the street to his uncle's home.

As Patrolman Arguello entered the rear door of the home in which the encounter was taking place Garcia, who had secured some warning that he had been watched, dashed out of the front door of the house and started on the run down the street.

At the end of a chase of four blocks the officer overtook Garcia and after a short struggle overpowered him and placed him under arrest. Garcia was taken to a nearby house and an officer on duty at the time was summoned and the prisoner turned over to him. According to Arguello, a complaint will be sought, charging Garcia with an attempt to murder.

Garcia has been under arrest before, and on the occasion of his last confinement to a cell in the City Jail the authorities were furnished with an exciting attempt at self destruction.

Garcia, angered at his arrest several months ago, obtained possession of a quantity of matches and set fire to his clothing. The jailer on duty was attracted by the smell of smoke and extinguished the flames just as they were communicating with the man's flesh. At this time Garcia raved like a madman and attempted to prevent the officers from rendering him any assistance while his life was in danger.

Mrs. Arguello stated last evening that she cannot remember of having seen Garcia before his entrance to her home yesterday afternoon. His conversation, she states, was practically unintelligible, indicative of his mental incompetency.

DEEP IS LAKE HEMET.

Owing to Heavy Rain It Has More Water Than at Any Time Before.

HEMET, March 17.—Owing to the heavy rainfall of this last week, Lake Hemet measures 114 feet, the deepest in the history of the dam.

H. E. Bothin of San Francisco has purchased about three hundred acres of Park Hill. He will develop beautiful drives for automobiles and carriages, will put in artificial lakes and ornamental shrubbery, and in the end will have a fine park.

W. F. Whittier, H. E. Bothin and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Weatherly left Hemet for San Francisco Thursday, making the trip as far as Redlands in Mr. Bothin's touring car.

The new operahouse of Hemet was formally opened Monday evening with "The Princess of Patches," played by the Elleford company. Although it was raining in torrents, the house was filled with an enthusiastic audience. The operahouse occupies the second floor of a new brick building recently erected by W. F. Whittier.

A Choral Society, under the leadership of R. L. Bowen, has been formed. It met for the first time Thursday evening.

The W.C.T.U. convention of Riverside county will meet in Hemet the later part of April.

The third meeting of the Current Topics Club was held Thursday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. E. M. Clarke. Mrs. P. N. Myers contributed a paper on China. The club will meet with Mrs. Arthur Cole next week.

ARRESTED FOR FORGERY.

Former Hotel Manager of San Diego Gathered in on Orders of Los Angeles Police Chief.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] E. C. Briggs was arrested here this afternoon at the request of Chief of Police Auble of Los Angeles. Briggs is wanted for forgery and will be taken to Los Angeles on the night train.

He left here fifteen years ago. When W. E. Hadley ran the Horton House, Briggs was clerk, and later was manager. A few weeks ago Briggs's wife in Los Angeles asked the police to find out what Briggs was doing down here, and a few days ago Chief Auble requested the department to keep tab on Briggs, pending an investigation into his affairs.

The Furnishing of the Library

while a matter of much study and care, may be more easily accomplished and with results permanently satisfying if one has access to a complete, carefully selected stock of meritorious library furniture. We know our showing in this line is not surpassed in the West, and invite your critical inspection.

We carry the revolving and sectional bookcases—the best makes of the best makers—a full line of library tables, Davenports, couches and chairs in all the different woods and finishes, and embracing only the best designs.

Rockers, chairs, Davenports and couches may be had upholstered in the various fabrics or in leather (and in the latter we have some entirely new shades,) or, if upholsterings are desired to harmonize with any particular scheme of furnishing, we carry these pieces in all woods and designs with muslin coverings, ready for the addition of the preferred material.

WANT COMPANY TO DISBAND.

SAN ROCHDALE CONCERN IS SAID TO BE A LOSER.

Thousands of Acres of Land in Wheat Near Ensenada—Silk Work Machines Arrive from New Jersey. Work of Raising Big Bonus for a Railroad Has Been Commenced.

SAN DIEGO, March 17.—Two-thirds of the members of the San Rochdale Company have filed with the directors a petition asking that the affairs of the concern be wound up. They say that the company was incorporated in March, 1895, and that it has been operated at a loss from that time to the present. The committee suggested to take charge of the liquidation consists of C. F. Emery, A. F. Fuquay and A. C. Mouser.

The Campo Cattle Company of which W. H. Jones is president, and Earle Freeman, secretary, has applied to the Superior Court for permission to increase the amount of its capital stock from $60,000 to $100,000.

St. Patrick's Day was celebrated in this city by an entertainment at the Isis Theater, under the direction of the local division of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. An address on "The Day We Celebrate," was given by Rev. James W. Collins.

General Manager Sanders of the Lower California Development Company states that there are 30,000 acres of land sown to wheat in the vicinity of Ensenada, and that the whole country is looking better than for years. He states that the new steamer for the San Diego-Ensenada run will leave England soon, and will come here by way of the straits. He also says that the Mexican Land and Colonization Company is behind the new fishing company.

A large shipment of machines for the manufacture of silk arrived here yesterday from Paterson, N. J. It consisted of about 5000 pounds. Herman Fascher and Miss Fascher, who have charge of the work at present, have 20,000 silk worms in various stages of development, these having been hatched from one ounce of eggs sent here from Washington. Another shipment of one ounce containing 40,000 eggs, is expected by the end of the month. Mr. Fascher is the inventor of a machine, which takes the silk fibers from the cocoons.

Maj. H. B. Hersey, inspector of the United States Weather Bureau, has left for the north, after a brief visit in San Diego.

L. H. Del Rio, former collector of the port of Ensenada, was in the city today en route to Acapulco, to which place he has been assigned. His successor at Ensenada is P. Victoria.

The work of raising a $1,000,000 subsidy for a railroad eastward through Imperial Valley, was commenced this morning. It was stated last night that $45,000 had been subscribed by two men. The movement is backed by the Realty Board and the Chamber of Commerce.

CORONADO PERSONALS.

CORONADO, March 17.—The usual Friday afternoon tea was served in the ballroom of the hotel yesterday afternoon. A concert was given during the noon hour by the Illinois Cadet Orchestra, and the patronage of the affair was large.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Duke of Kansas City, who are on their first visit to the Coast, are guests at the hotel. They will remain here for two weeks, leaving then for San Francisco. For twenty-five years Mr. Duke was treasurer of the Buford & George Manufacturing Company of Kansas City.

After passing several weeks at Los Angeles, Riverside and Pasadena, Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Fisher of Minneapolis are at the hotel. They will not return home until late in the spring.

A party of automobilists who arrived here from Riverside, where they were obliged to abandon their machine, is composed of the following: Mrs. R. Knowals, her niece Miss Mitchell, E. G. Wheeler and C. D. Wright, all of San Francisco. Mrs. Knowals and Miss Mitchell are prominent in San Francisco society circles. Mr. Wheeler is president of the Bay City & Tonopah Water Company.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion; it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered willow charcoal and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

DISEASE

Wrecks the Health and Happiness of Thousands of MEN

The sexual diseases of men can be counted on the fingers of one hand, and yet they are responsible for fully four-fifths of all the Weakness and Premature Decline from which so many men suffer. This is because they are looked upon lightly and for the time seem to be of small consequence. But the disorders are really treacherous and insidious, attacking many important organs and leaving after results which bring many to a premature grvae.

OUR CURE IS QUICK, THOROUGH AND PERMANENT

We have spent years in the special study of the genito-urinary diseases of men. During all these years we have had ample experience to perfect original and scientific methods, which we now offer to the afflicted. To the skeptical and discouraged we make this fair offer.

THE SIGHT TO SEE
Santa Fe

The most beautiful short journey in the world and this is the very day to make it. After the rains the mountain tops are white, the hills and valleys green and the oranges gold.

Don't fail or forever regret.

Leave at 8:30 in the morning.

Yesterday's Forecast and Report.

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, March 17.—[Reported by George E. Franklin, Local Forecaster.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the thermometer registered 51 deg.; at 5 p.m., 54 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 68 per cent.; 5 p.m., 60 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., west, velocity 4 miles; 5 p.m., southwest, velocity 18 miles. Maximum temperature, 57 deg.; minimum, 49 deg. Rainfall past twenty-four hours, .01 of an inch; rainfall for season, 13.35 inches.

Weather Conditions.—The southwest storm remains practically stationary, owing to the area of high barometer and cold wave overlying the Rocky Mountain Slope, and continues to give unsettled weather in California, with rain, and snow in the mountain sections. The conditions remain favorable for continued unsettled weather in this vicinity tonight and Sunday, with occasional rain and fresh south to west winds. Fair, cold weather continues on the Pacific Slope. The temperature is below zero in Eastern Oregon, and killing frost occurred at Portland this morning, heavy frost at Roseburg and light frost at Baker City, Tacoma and Spokane.

Forecasts.—Local forecast for Los Angeles and vicinity: Continued unsettled weather, with occasional rain, tonight and Sunday; fresh south to west wind.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—Weather conditions and general forecast. The following are the seasonal rainfalls to date, as compared with those of same date last season, and rainfall in the last twenty-four hours:

Stations—	Last twenty-four hours.	This season.	Last season.
Red Bluff	.92	20.02	28.65
San Francisco	.03	13.15	17.93
Fresno	.10	8.05	9.56
San Luis Obispo	.02	17.35	18.98
San Diego	.17	7.51	13.21

The storm continues over Arizona, and snow is falling from Flagstaff to Modena. High winds are reported at Independence, Flagstaff, Los Angeles and Yuma. The pressure has fallen rapidly over Washington, and another disturbance is coming in from the sea. Warmer weather may be expected in California Sunday. Forecast:

San Francisco and vicinity: Fair Sunday morning, with increasing cloudiness during the day; light north winds, changing to southwest.

Los Angeles and vicinity: Cloudy unsettled weather Sunday; possibly showers; brisk south winds, changing to northerly.

Sacramento Valley: Increasing cloudiness Sunday; possibly showers by night; warmer; fresh southeast winds.

San Joaquin Valley: Cloudy Sunday, with snow squalls in the mountains; brisk north wind.

Coast: Fair Sunday; fresh north winds.

Nevada: Snow flurries Sunday.

Arizona: Fair in south; rain or snow in north portion Sunday and Monday.

Storm warnings are displayed on the California coast from San Diego to Port Los Angeles.

Local bank clearings yesterday fell slightly below the previous days of the week, which had all surpassed the $2,000,000 mark. Yesterday the clearings were $1,827,980.19, about $500,000 more than the previous year and nearly $1,000,000 more than two years ago. The clearings for the week are nearly, if not quite, the largest on record, being more than $13,000,000 compared with $8,000,000 a year ago and $6,000,000 in round numbers two years ago.

Sales on the Stock Exchange yesterday will be found above.

The changes in quotations on stocks are as follows:

Associated Oil, bid 47¾, asked 47⅞, both fractional declines from the previous day; Columbia Oil, offered at 30, no bids, an increase of 2 points on the selling end over the previous day; Olinda Land went up to .06 bid, .06½ asked; Reed Crude dropped 1 point on the bidding end to 24, 28 asked as previously; Union dropped 2 points on the bidding end to 185, and advanced 2 points on the asking end to 193; Western Union took a big leap to 240 bid and 275 asked.

In bank stocks First National went up 5 points to 435 bid, and 2 points to 440 asked; German-American receded 1 point to 325 bid, and 5 points to 360 asked; Mercantile Trust went off 2 points to 62 bid, offered at 68; Southern California Savings took another slump of 25 points to 300 bid, none for sale; State Bank and Trust Co. was weaker by 5 points to 92 bid, and a little firmer at par asked.

In the bond list Associated Oil was weaker at 90 bid, 95 old price asked; Los Angeles Home receded a fraction to 97 bid, 98 asked; Pasadena Home was slightly firmer at 90¾ bid, 92 old price asked; Riverside Home was firmer at 84¼ bid, 90 old price asked; Santa Monica Home was steady on the bidding end at 78, and 1 point weaker offered at 82; Union Transportation was firmer at 97¾ bid, 100 old price asked; U. S. L. D. preferred was stronger at 90½ bid, and 91½ asked.

In miscellaneous stock, Edison Electric preferred was a little firmer at 89¾ bid, but weaker at 91 asked; Los Angeles Home preferred, 66¼ bid, a slight decline, and 67 even asked; Los Angeles Home common was weaker at 24 bid, 30 old price asked; Pasadena Home was also weaker at 39 bid, 41 asked; U. S. L. D. preferred was weaker at 56 bid, but stronger at 58 asked.

The changes in the mining list are exceedingly numerous, and will be found under the proper subdivision heads.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKETS.

Aside from the filling of local routine jobbing wants for over-Sunday requirements, there was little life in the produce market yesterday. The continued stormy weather seriously interfered with traffic during the early morning hours; however, later in the day, trade picked up considerably, but prices were without important variation, and there was a lack of interesting features.

A prominent produce broker stated that trade conditions throughout Southern California were never better than now; horticultural and agricultural interests could hardly be in a more prosperous condition; the country never looked better.

Grain is growing rapidly. All crops are more advanced than at this time last year, and promise large yields. The soil is in excellent condition for working, and farmers are busy getting ready for end-of-season seeding. A record-breaking area is certain for sugar beets and beans. In some localities the early-planted beets are up and nearly ready for thinners. Orchards are in fine shape, and deciduous and citrus trees are blooming freely.

Winter vegetables are bringing excellent prices. Less than a hundred carloads of celery now remain in the State. Cabbages are going forward at the rate of thirty carloads daily. This output will increase until the end of May. There is little activity in the bean market. Spot market for Limas is much easier, and the month has seen price shading. Pinks are a little lower, others are unchanged. Under light stock, quotations for dried fruits are steady. Few carloads of anything are now left. Apricots and peaches are very scarce, premiums being offered for small parcels. The raisin market is particularly quiet and the demand is light. Seedless varieties are in small supply. Canned goods are firm. Prices for asparagus have been placed generally 10 cents higher than last season. Wine values are steadily hardening. Shortage of vintage of 1905 has led to healthier state of trade. Sweet wine is in good demand, and practically out of first hands. Locally, retail business is exceedingly good. Jobbing is active as could be expected at this time of the year.

The following nuts have advanced 1 cent: Almonds, 16; Brazils, 14; filberts, 14; pecans, 15; walnuts, 13½@14.

While there was no change in the price of fresh ranch eggs yesterday, dealers were predicting that the market might ease off a trifle by Tuesday. One carload of eastern storage eggs was reported in, but it is understood to have gone in storage. A few eggs were sold on the market yesterday at 18 cents, but the cases were made up largely of eastern storage and the inferior quality of local ranch, and could hardly be classed with the choicest ranch offerings.

The Butter Board of Trade yesterday afternoon reduced the price of fancy and valley creamery to 50 cents flat for two-pound squares. The express companies will soon run refrigerator cars to this market on alternate days from San Joaquin Valley points; then the local supplies will be greatly increased, and lower prices will follow.

The cheese market is very firm in the North, and the conditions here are likewise in harmony with the situation there.

Shipments of fruit and vegetables to Arizona and New Mexico during the past week have been unusually heavy.

The market was not supplied with oranges yesterday, being practically bare of the large-sized navels, and under fairly spirited call for over-Sunday wants assumed a firmer tone. Other citrus fruits are precisely as last quoted, with current supplies fully up to trade requirements.

Tropico, Glendale and Moneta strawberries were more plentiful, at 6@12 per basket.

Quiet markets are reported for potatoes, trading being restricted closely within jobbing confines, and with arrivals moderate, prices were without important change. Onions are firming up somewhat under the arrivals of fresh offerings. Yellow sweet potatoes are steadier at $3.00. Asparagus was a trifle stronger at 6@9; soon the asparagus canneries will start in the north, and steady quotations are looked for here. Rhubarb sold at 90@1.00 per crate; peas, 2½@6; green beans, 10@12; lettuce, 50@75 per crate; beets, 20@30; celery is getting very scarce, and dealers are having to draw on cold storage to meet the requirements. Shipments of celery East have been very heavy this season. Last year at this time there was about thirty carloads of celery in storage, but this year there is only four or five carloads in storage.

Halibut and crabs were plentiful, but all other fish scarce.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—The slight sag in stocks, today, was largely attributable to inanition, the market having sunk into a state of practical stagnation. The bank statement was not considered to promise any improvement in the condition of the money market. The cash item showed a gain of something over a million dollars, which was better than expected, but loans at the same time increased $5,852,500. The resulting growth in the deposits item and the expansion of the reserve requirement resulted in a shrinking of the surplus of $598,575. The change in the loan item may have been influenced by the shifting of accounts incident to the long dividend payment Wednesday, but the payment of maturing obligations to foreign borrowers, which was reflected in the week's demand for foreign exchange, is supposed also to have been transferred to some extent to the local banks. It is pointed out that with the shipment of the final installment of the last Japanese loan there will be on deposit to the credit of that government in London, Paris, Berlin and New York, something like $250,000,000. The withdrawal of these deposits, which has been in progress within the last few weeks, and which is expected to continue, is thus seen to have a wide field for extension with corresponding positive effect on the money market. These funds are placed at present. Bank clearings for the week throughout the country show a decrease, as compared with the corresponding week of last year. This is the first decrease reported in a long period, and is due entirely to the showing of New York and large reserve cities. Today's dull stock market was as barren of feature as the day's news was of incidents having any important financial bearing. Total sales of bonds $656,000.

Clearinghouse Banks.

NEW YORK, March 17.—The statement of the clearinghouse banks of this city for this week shows that the banks hold $5,865,125 over the legal reserve requirement. This is a decrease of $598,575 under last week. Loans, $1,025,432,400; increase, $5,852,900. Deposits, $1,008,868,700; increase, $6,926,700. Legal tenders, $77,630,600; decrease, $648,100. Specie, $180,451,700; increase, $1,783,700. Reserve, $258,082,300; increase, $1,135,600. Reserve required, $252,217,175; increase, $1,734,175. Surplus, $5,865,125; decrease, $598,575. Ex-United States deposits, $8,832,250; decrease, $46,400. Circulation, $50,920,700; decrease, $518,000.

New York Money Market.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Today's statement of the treasury: Available cash balance, $154,706,912; gold coin and bullion, $78,120,697; gold certificates, $46,427,600.

GENERAL EASTERN MARKETS.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, March 17.—Early in the day the feeling in the wheat pit was toward lower prices because of lower cables and an increased movement of wheat from Australia. About the middle of the session the demand increased, and the market became firm. The improvement in demand was due chiefly to a report from Rosario that all the dock laborers at that port had struck and in less degree to increased receipts in the United States. Prices responded readily to the improved demand, and continued to advance throughout the remainder of the day. The market closed strong, with prices at the highest point. The May option opened ⅛ to ¼ lower, at 78⅛@78¼, sold up to 78⅞ and closed at the top with a gain of ⅛. The corn market held firm in sympathy with wheat. May closed ⅛ to ¼ higher, at 43⅜@43⅝. The oats market was weak all day; May closed ¼ down at 29⅝. The provisions market was firm. The volume of trading, however, was small. At the close, May pork was up 10c; lard gained 7½ and ribs were 5 to 7½c higher.

The leading futures closed as follows:

World Cotton Markets.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO FRED DORR & CO.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—It was not a strong market by any means during the early trading and then something happened that showed what the market might do if it only had a bull leader. A telegram was received from Little Rock, Ark., saying that Theo. Price had dictated to a reporter in that city a bullish expression, the statement as quoted was not so very bullish, and there was nothing to show that Mr. Price was buying a bale of cotton in the market, yet his telegram was enough to cause an immediate advance and during most of the day there was a decidedly strong tone to the market. It looked a good deal as if the crowd of ring traders was trying to run out certain big short lines. There was considerable activity in new months owing to covering by some shorts. Spot markets were reported steady. The December visible supply was 77,000 bales vs. 24,000 last year. Ellison's cable showing bales 16 pounds lighter than last year, was bullishly construed, although European spinner stocks were said to be 125,000 bales more than last year.

Cotton in sight—This week, 142,880 bales; last week, 212,500; last year, 115,805. Total in sight, 8,850,801; 9,914,437; 8,711,941. American visible, 3,432,677; 3,063,590; 2,320,458. Total visible 4,874,667, vs. 4,227,090 vs. 3,239,458.

The week and figures are moderately bullish. Hester makes decrease in the visible supply of America for the week 77,000 bales against 24,000 last year. Spinners taking 26,000, against 230,000 last year.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKETS.

GRAIN, FRUIT AND PRODUCE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The first Longworth strawberries for the season arrived today, a consignment of four baskets coming from Palo Alto, and being attractive, quick sales were made at 50 cents a basket. Two crates of large strawberries arrived from Los Angeles, and being of unattractive appearance, dragged slowly at from 7½ cents to 10 cents a basket. There was nothing new in oranges, the supplies and demand being alike light, with firm prices. Low temperatures continued to check the movement in other citrus fruits, and under comparatively light supplies and absence of selling pressure, previous prices were well sustained. Apples met with steady demand, the market for fancy ruling firm at full figures, under the demand for eastern shipment. Conditions in the market for asparagus were somewhat disappointing to sellers who endeavored to force prices up too high. As high as 10 cents was demanded during the early trade for extra, but this rate had to be shaded later in order to create outlet. Good peas sold slightly higher as offerings were scarce, while beans were more plentiful and easier. Summer squash and tomatoes were in fair supply, but sales were slow. Potatoes held steady at old values. Good onions were steady at maximum quotations.

Western Union Oil Doubles Its Dividends Now Paying $2.00 a Share A Month Dividend Equal to 6 Per Cent. on The Stock at $400 Per Share.

The operations of the company are of large magnitude. The revenues are still greatly in excess of the dividend disbursements, and this, too, in disposing of less than one-third of the present production.

We advise the immediate purchase of this stock. It may be bought to net you 6 per cent. or better on the investment, and at the same time is piling up a surplus which is bound to accrue to the benefit of the stockholders.

At $400 Per Share this Stock is still a most profitable investment. We execute orders in this and other securities, and solicit your account.

Market Review

During the past few months our clients bought "Red Top" (Goldfield) around 40 cents. It is today selling around $2.00. Each $100 invested in this stock at 40 cents shows a profit of $400.

In November last our clients bought Kendall (Goldfield) at 18 cents. It is now selling around 87 cents, which means a profit of $690 on each 1000 shares.

Our clients bought Atlanta (Goldfield) in October, 1905, at 11 cents; now quoted at 28 cents. An investment of $110 in this stock now shows a profit of $170 in about five months.

They bought Mohawk (Goldfield) at 13 cents. It is now 54, showing a net profit of $410 on each $130 invested.

MANHATTAN.

Less than six weeks ago you could purchase Manhattan Consolidated at 25 cents. Today it is $1.00. Each $100 invested six weeks ago in this stock, now worth $400.

Manhattan Dexter, then 15 cents, now 80 cents. Each $15 shows a profit of $65.

Manhattan Mining, 10 cents, now 30. Each $10 invested giving a profit of $20, or 200 PER CENT.

IN SIX WEEKS.

One thousand shares of each of the above named stocks could have been purchased for a total of $1820. This investment would today show a profit of $4470.

MANHATTAN DOUBLE EAGLE.

To those who failed to get in on the other Manhattan companies, or who wish additional investments in this camp, we recommend the Double Eagle. This company was but recently incorporated under the laws of Arizona, with one million shares of stock, par value $1. 400,000 are in the treasury for development purposes; 200,000 are now offered to the public, at 10 cents a share (no less than 1000 shares sold any one,) and the money realized from the sale of this stock is to be devoted exclusively to the development of the property. A force of men has already been put to work and a rich strike is confidently expected.

The property consists of three claims situated near the famous Georgia, which has uncovered ore running $500 to the ton only 8 feet from the surface. The Double Eagle has the same ledge running through it as has the Georgia.

The officers and directors are some of the leading mining men and bankers of the Goldfield district, who are noted for their integrity and good judgment. J. P. Marshall, cashier of the Nye and Ormsby County Bank, Goldfield, is president and treasurer; R. L. Colburn, secretary of the famous "Red Top" mine, of Goldfield, is the vice-president; M. J. Monnette, the successful lessee on the Mohawk property, is the secretary. These, together with A. D. Myers, who owned one-half of the Jumbo, and J. L. Lindsay, cashier of the State Bank and Trust Company, Goldfield, compose the directorate.

You can rest assured that these men have every confidence in Double Eagle or they would not be connected with it. We are confident that they will use every effort to make of

"DOUBLE EAGLE" ANOTHER "RED TOP"

It is useles for us to dwell on Manhattan; its praises are being sung by every one. The papers are full of it. The record of fortunes made there during the past TWO MONTHS is almost beyond belief.

Take our advice and buy good Manhattan stock while you can at the initial price. As soon as the treasury allotment of a company is closed out the price invariably advances, showing a speedy profit.

Figure out the profits you could have made by putting a small amount in each of the companies mentioned herein.

We execute orders for any Goldfield, Bullfrog, Tonopah or Manhattan Stock.

Wire your orders.

Respectfully,

R. D. ROBINSON CO.

THE CITY IN BRIEF.

BREVITIES.

On the property of the Mesa Grande Tourmaline and Gem Company, located in San Diego county, seven tourmaline ledges have already been discovered. Each one bears the indications of being the producer of the rich, precious stones. When they are mined, there is no smelting, no stamp mills, no aerial trams, no tailings, no cyanide tanks—nothing but the art of the lapidary in cutting the stones and dressing them for market, at prices that are high and, still, never too high, for the standard society has placed on the precious tourmaline. Some people are going to make fortunes by buying stock in this company. Why not you? The fiscal agent is the Southwestern Securities Company, 503 H. W. Hellman Building. At their offices can be seen a splendid collection of tourmalines—cut, and in the rough. Call at an early date and talk this proposition over. Ask for the convincing proof. There's money in it.

That location is an inferior question, but perfection combined with always reasonable prices more important, shows plainly the millinery business of Mrs. Kruseman, 1302 Pico, corner 13th. Mrs. Kruseman makes exclusively order work and gives retrimming the best attention. Mrs. Kruseman guarantees all her work and charges only according to materials used and work done, but is always reasonable. Through close relations Mrs. Kruseman receives regularly latest designs, descriptions, etc., direct from Paris. The perfect order work of Mrs. Kruseman offers only advantages as it is always becoming, wears better and keeps better.

Thousands of people are wearing our eyeglasses and spectacles with perfect satisfaction and only paid $1.50 for them. Let us fit your eyes with a pair of our best A1 crystal reading lenses in a ten-year gold-filled frame, for $1.50. Examination made with the aid of the latest and most scientific optical instruments by graduate State registered optician. Consultation free. Clark's Jewelry and Optical Store, 351 South Spring st., opposite new Hellman Bldg., near 4th st.

Women with a love for elegance and exclusiveness in millinery certainly had a chance to feast their eyes to their heart's content at the J. W. Robinson Company, millinery opening. Famous as the "Boston Store" millinery has always been, this exhibit astonished all visitors—old customers included.

Miss J. M. Drew, late of 329 S. Hill st., wishes to announce her millinery opening at 231 W. Pico st., Monday and Tuesday, March 19-20. Owing to a large stock of trimmed hats on hand, will sell at a very low price. Hats that sold downtown for $15 and $18, now at $12 and $15; $8 and $9 for $5 and $6.

We are now prepared in our new factory to handle all kinds of ostrich feather repair work, dyeing, cleaning and curling. Experts only employed. Mail orders promptly attended to. ston's Ostrich Farm, South Pasadena, Cawston's Ostrich Farm, South Pasadena, Cal.

Housekeepers attention. Make housecleaning easy. Will get your carpets, rugs, mattresses, thoroughly clean them from all dust and moth; have latest improved machinery. City Steam Carpet Cleaning Works, 507 S. Flower st. Phones M. 427. John Bloeser.

An exceptional opportunity! Alfred H. Cohn, ladies' tailor, 912 S. Figueroa st., has received his spring novelties and latest styles; having no store expenses, offers a generous reduction on all orders on gowns and habits received during the month of March.

The San Francisco office of the Los Angeles Times is in room 41, Chronicle building. Telephone Main 1472. Subscriptions and advertisements taken. Visitors will find copies of The Times on files, and are welcome to call and read them.

AT THE THEATERS.

Noteworthy among the theatrical events of the week is the return of Lillian Burkhart, who will play a short engagement at the Orpheum. This is her first professional appearance here in several years—indeed, her first since her marriage to George Goldschmidt. Some months ago she contributed her talents at the Oberle benefit at the Belasco Theater, but saving this, her life has been very private.

The tour which she is now concluding is announced as her farewell to the stage. This is announced authoritatively by herself, her husband—and the baby daughter who has been her constant companion during the recent journeys. "Henceforth," she says, "I will be merely Mrs. Goldschmidt, and I will stay in Los Angeles." She has received a number of tempting offers from New York and Chicago booking agents for eastern tours, but has unhesitatingly refused them all, playing only at houses which held pre-nuptial contracts with her—contracts that could not be forfeited. Her popularity has apparently not been diminished during the lapse of time, as the newspapers in the cities she has visited have united in giving her unaccustomed praise. In interviews she has disclaimed any future affiliation save that for her home in Los Angeles, and has expressed her constant desire to return to California.

THE WEEK.

The Pacific Coast premier of "The Heir to the Hoorah" will be given at the Mason Operahouse on Thursday evening.

The play is announced merely as an American comedy, by Paul Armstrong, staged by the late Kirk La Shelle just before his untimely death last spring.

The four scenes of "The Heir to the Hoorah" are located in a mining town "just east of the divide." It is a very considerable town, apparently, for it supports a swagger hotel, and boasts at least one "palatial residence." In the first act it is explained that the "Hoorah" is an immensely wealthy gold mine, owned by Joe Lacy, his brother Dave, and their friend, Bud Young. The heir is not heard of until act two, and then it develops that he is a baby, born to Joe Lacy and his wife, Geraldine, while they have been estranged. There are numerous complications, but the estrangement is of course done away with at last.

Guy Bates Post plays Joe Lacy. Mr. Post will be remembered here for his characterization of Steve, in "The Virginian." Ernest Lamson, who plays Dave, was last seen here in "York State Folks." Jane Peyton, who made a hit in "The Earl of Pawtucket," is also in the cast, as are Nora O'Brien and Louise Rutter. T. Tomamoto, said to be the only Japanese actor playing in English, does a jiu-jitsu stunt for the amazement of his audience.

Other principals are Wilfred Lucas, Brinsley Shaw, Francis Coventry, Frank Monroe, Ben Higgins, Cassius Quinby and George Barr.

The engagement is for four performances, including the Saturday matinée.

"There and Back," a farce new to Los Angeles, will be given by the Belasco players this week. It is by George Arliss, who will be remembered for his fine character work in Mrs. Fiske's presentation of "Leah Kleschna."

The farce is based upon the experiences of two young married Londoners, who go on a lark to Scotland, while their wives believe them to be an a rapid round trip to New York. The vessel on which they would have sailed is lost in mid-ocean with all on board, and the fun becomes uproarious on their return, when they proceed to relate their experiences, not knowing that the ship had been sunk. Mr. Galbraith and Mr. Barnum will have the two chief comedy roles.

In the title-role of "Little Christopher," in doublet and hose, Lottie Kendall will be afforded a far more delightful part at the Hotchkiss this week than last.

"Little Christopher" is by Barnet and Kerker, and in New York Bessie Bonehill created the title-role.

In the Hotchkiss cast, Nellie V. Nichols will appear as a Spanish girl, and the two chief comedy roles will be intrusted to Messrs. William Hermann West and Robert Pitkin.

"The Imperial Highway," romantic drama which was an unusual success at the Burbank last year, will be again presented for the week commencing today.

William Desmond will again be seen as Capt. Jack Melville, while Blanche Hall will impersonate the Empress Euphrene. John Burton will enact Cassius Crabb, the American hustler who goes to Zenobia to place American elevators in the palace of the Emperor. Henry Stockbridge will be seen as Ted Blackburn, the young lieutenant. Harry Mestayer has a good character role in Count Charmion. Maida will be played by Miss Stella Razetto, who made her bow to local audiences in Harry Mestayer's "Ghosts" company. Harry Glazier will play the Emperor, and Carol Arden will portray Countess Charmion.

Lillian Burkhart, in her little comedy, "A Strenuous Daisy," will be the headliner of the new bill which will open at the Orpheum tomorrow night. The playlet is by Anna S. Richardson.

The four Piccolo midgets, queer little men with baby faces, will entertain with comedy acrobatics. Agnes Mahr, "the American Tommy Atkins," a clever dancer. Mlle. Chester's statue dog, a pure white setter, will display all the poses of bird hunting.

The holdovers are Dan Sherman and Mabel deForrest, in "The Battle of San Dago," the Rooney Sisters, McCue and Cahill, Al Carleton, and new motion pictures.

"Human Hearts," which has probably enjoyed a longer run than any other melodrama at present being played, will be seen at the Grand this week. "Human Hearts" is in its tenth season.

The Chutes Park has been inaugurated under its new management, and from now on the chutes and the miniature railway will be free attractions, as the zoo has been.

The policy of the new management is to combine this innovation, and from time to time add other free concessions.

A children's playground is being added, as is also a dancing pavillion.

Value of Co-operation.

It is not an unusual thing for the first-night reviewer to pick out for special commendation some lesser light of a company whose acting has merited a word of praise, but neither the critic nor the general public is inclined, as a rule, to recognize to its full extent the value of intelligent co-operation on the part of the minor players. This lack of appreciation of acting, as acting, is another result of the general system of exploiting stars.

The effort of the player, projected with a large amount of preliminary booming, frequently takes on a quality of importance in the general mind which nothing short of actual genius ought to justify. And, on the other hand, we occasionally have an exhibit of rare and unusual talent going almost unnoticed because no particular effort has been made to give it prominence. In fact, such are the peculiar conditions of the player's calling that the very persons are denied publicity to whom it might mean most as regards future opportunity and advancement. More than one capable player has been obliged to seek new employment because his "notices" were too frequent and too laudatory to please the star. And such a condition is possible largely because, except in rare and unusual cases, the general audience at a theatrical representation knows little, and cares less, about any of the individual members of a cast other than the star and an occasional well-advertised name.

The people who attend premier performances in New York, and who form the major part of the audiences for the first few nights of a success, are possibly a little better informed as to the identities of the actors, but thereafter the general run of people out front, though they may scan the list of characters in the left-hand column of the playbill, seldom give any great consideration to the names of the men and women who comprise the cast.

Occasionally an actor or actress by some unusually powerful or colorful bit of acting enforces a brief attention, but unless the effort is supplemented by a judicious and skillful use of printers' ink, it will not be sufficient to stamp the player's individuality on the general mind.

Two facts conspire to rob the actor of the fruit of his labor. To begin with, as has been suggested, he is the victim of the ordinary professional usage and etiquette, frequently emphasized by actual written contract, which denies to any but the star the exploitation of an achievement; secondly, there is the peculiar disadvantage which comes from the common habit of associating an actor with his role.

Call to the mind of the average playgoer some particularly effective bit of characterization in a last season's play—not to go back any further—and he will probably remember it distinctly enough. But ask for the name of the player responsible for the result, and it will not be forthcoming.—[New York Times.

Mansfield's Retirement.

"Never in my life was I more sincere than I am in my announced determination to retire from the activities of my professional life after the next three brief seasons, which have been mapped out for me," said Richard Mansfield last week in Boston.

A cordial how-d'-y'-do, a few polite conventionalities, and then a direct question brought him to his feet. He was interested, and one could fairly see the nerves begin to vibrate. Scarcely a moment while he talked was he quiet. His teeth clenched a small briar pipe, he moved about the room, and his hands and eyes talked as eloquently as his tongue.

This artist, at the zenith of his career, still on the youthful side of 50, has the courage to say that he is going to step aside from the hard, beaten path of publicity and seek the quieter recreative by-paths of leisure and diversion. It is unusual. But, by the grace of that same expletive, it is Mansfieldian.

"All my life I have looked forward to the day when I could lay down my wander-staff and exchange the excitement and strenuous work of my profession for the more deliberate and natural pleasures which are all about us, but are abandoned for the money-rush.

"You have no idea of the demands of my work. Summer and winter, day and night, for twenty-five years I have devoted myself heart and soul to the stage; now if I have earned any privilege, surely it is to rest. To me acting is all absorbing. I must dispose myself temperamentally for the part. It is a species of self-hypnosis. I am what I affect to be. When I act Richard the King I become Richard the King. When I act Ivan, or Don Carlos, or Shylock, I am the Czar, the Prince, and the Jew. And when I come out of that exalted state, which to me is necessary to create an illusion and convince an audience, I return to my dressing room exhausted. It seems for the time being as if years had been cut off my life.

"In an address before the faculty and students of the University of Pennsylvania I amused myself elaborating Shakespeare's lines in which he says, 'All the world's a stage and every man must play his part.' When Shakespeare said it it was accepted without cavil. But when I repeated it it seemed to raise a lively discussion. It is true, however. Consciously or unconsciously, every man is acting. This may not be apparent to the layman, but to an actor it is obvious. Human nature as expressed in my fellow-men has always been my study. A lifetime of observation and experience, study and comparison, has in every instance emphasized this. And some men are bad actors and some are good.

"You will understand that after acting so long, after being thirty or forty other people besides myself, and acting all there is in me out in every conceivable expression, I am sometimes glad not to act. But people believe I act most when I am most natural. It is extraordinary. But it is absolutely necessary to relax and be natural. It is my tonic, my salvation, and yet it is too often the undoing of the reputation any man covets for the kindness which is in his own heart.

"When I am on the stage, I am, as you would say, 'up in the air.' Inspiration is permitted full sway, and the mind is in an exalted state. When I leave the stage I cease to act. I relax. I permit myself to be absolutely natural. So, when thoughtless people about me do things that they should not, things that mar the artistic effect, things which, in a word, rob the audience of that degree of perfection which is their purchased right, I do not act an indifference, but express the disappointment and chagrin which is natural to the situation. If we must act off the stage it would be too much. No real actor ever did act off the stage. They have always been perfectly natural, and their reputation has been eccentricity. But I will say this, that never have I deliberately and with malice offended any one. If sometimes, in a frame of mind over which I had no control, I have said things which have given offense, it has hurt me quite as much as the other.

"If we are to move forward, to perfect the stage, and not sit idly on the sacks of indifference and contentment, then there has got to be a pioneer, a teacher, a corrector, in a word, a critic. Great heights are only reached with blistered feet and bleeding hands."

This he said with feeling. But his alert mentality was soon off on another tack, and still another, until we were soon far out at sea, from the shores where it had been the purpose of this interview to wander. A question or two brought him back.

"What shall I do when I give up the stage? Be sure of one thing, I shall not be idle. But I shall so order my time that there will be some welcome in it for the pleasures of life. What shall I do? What, rather, shall I not do?

"Do you remember the boarding-school days when you chalked off the days until vacation? That's my frame of mind. It seems as if there could not be years enough for all the jolly times we have planned. For one thing, Mrs. Mansfield and I are going on our honeymoon. We never had a honeymoon. It is going to extend around the world and is going to be indefinite."

"Will you act in any foreign countries?"

"It would be great fun, wouldn't it? The thing to do would be to charter a vessel large enough to hold our productions, take along our leading artists, and cruise away in the good old fashion. There would be no route, no contracts, no shackles of any kind. If, when we touched in a port, there was a desire to see us, why we would play for the good people. If they wanted more they should have it, and if they didn't, then unfurl the sails, up with the anchor, and off we'd go. I fancy we should have a fine time. How would you like to go along?"—[New York Times.

The Drama—Music and Musicians—Brush and Pencil

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

LONG BEACH now has a band which promises to do much toward the elevation of real musical art at the seaside town in the coming year.

Manager Gattone has built extensively upon Donatelli's original foundation, and the band has been increased from twenty-six to thirty-five men. Hard work and many rehearsals have given the company an ensemble which is delightful, and when a few faults are eradicated—chief of which is overweight in the brass—the organization will stand with few equals in the smaller concert bands of this end of California.

Raoul Pugno
Marco Vessella

Raoul Pugno, the eminent French pianist who will play here Tuesday evening; Marco Vessala, under whose direction the Long Beach band is doing much for genuine musical art.

Marco Vessala, the new director, is but twenty-four years old, although he has had nearly six years experience as a conductor. His past work shows, for his baton, while devoid of fanciful gyrations, is always sure and at times inspirational in the interpretation of greater works. Vessala, fortunately for art, is a determined exponent of good music. In addition to this, he is an American citizen notwithstanding his Italian birth, and is a capable master of the English language and the customs of the United States. This gets him out of the abstracted helplessness that characterizes not a few of the older Italian directors who have toured through here—men who are not in touch with the wants of present-day America, and who really have no place in our musical scheme.

Vessala' has practically none of the freak about him—long hair appears to be no indication in his case—and has made a good start in carrying on the work at Long Beach that Ellery and his protegé Ferullo started so magnificently at Venice.

Besides being a director, Vessala is a composer of no mean ability, and has a number of clever new works to his credit. His uncle is now director of the Municipal Band at Rome, and his brother, a former director, is married to a Cincinnati millionairess.

A very happy coincidence with his artistic endeavor is that the campaign for good music seems to be appreciated by the tourists and residents of Long Beach. The new auditorium, seating several thousand people, is very well filled at the evening concerts, and the week-day matinées are attractive enough to draw an average of more than a thousand persons—which is quite remarkable for the winter season at a Southern California beach.

Vessala's programmes are absolutely up to date, and as he is a rapid and accurate arranger, his musical library is large and growing constantly.

His band is well divided, and contains several soloists of unusual merit. Chief of these is Emideo Barilotti, baritone, who has not been equalled here by any player of his class save Ellery's genius, Giuseppe Curti. Barilotti, who played at the Chutes last year, has improved wonderfully in the interim, repairing a technique that appeared at one time to be on the wane, and achieving the difficult replica of the human voice in the tone of his instrument.

Gattone has succeeded in signing his band at Long Beach for another year.

Raoul Pugno's Concerts.

The noteworthy events of the week in music will be the two appearances of the French pianist, Raoul Pugno, who will play at Simpson Auditorium on Tuesday evening and Saturday afternoon.

Pugno is considered one of the most finished European pianists of the age. His recent artistic triumphs in Berlin, Vienna, Paris and London bordered on the sensational, for he is not only a virtuoso, but a mature composer and an authority on musical history and philosophy as well. He is honorary professor of music at the Conservatoire, and has been decorated by the French government with the Cross of the Legion of Honor. Similar honors were conferred on him by the governments of Italy, Spain, Holland and Turkey.

Pugno has visited America three times, and each time his tours have been artistic as well as financial successes.

His two programmes follow:

Tuesday evening; Part I: Prelude et Fugue, F Minor (Bach;) Gavotte, G. Major (Handel;) Pieré, A Major (Scarlatti;) Sonata, C sharp, Minor Op. 2 F (Beethoven;) Part II: a. Ballade in G Minor, (Chopin;) b. Impromptu Posthume, (Chopin;) c. Scherzo, B Flat Minor, (Chopin;) d. Berceuse, (Chopin;) e. Polonaise in E Flat Major, (Chopin.) Part III: Phantasiestucke Op. 12 (Schumann;) Serenade a la Lune, (R. Pugno;) Twelfth Rhapsodie, (Liszt.)

Saturday afternoon; Part I: Les Roseaux, (Couperin;) Le Reveille-Matin, (Couperin;) Le Rappel des Diseaut, (Rameau;) Sonata in B Minor, Op. 31, (Beethoven;) Part II: Faschingschwank aus Wien, Op. 26, (Schumann;) Part III: Impromptu in A flat, (Chopin;) Nocturne, F sharp major, (Chopin;) Valse, A flat, (Chopin;) Rondeau brillante, (Weber;) La Fileuse, (Mendelssohn;) La Chane, (Mendelssohn;) Papillons, (Grieg;) Au Printemps, (Grieg;) Eleventh Rapsodie, (Liszt.)

Mr. Sessions's Recital.

The next in the series of Archibald Sessions's vesper recitals at Christ Church will be given on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mr. Sessions will be assisted by Mme. Elsa von Grofe Menasco, 'cellist, and Julius Bierlich, violinist.

The programme includes a serenade by Widor, for violin, 'cello and organ; a Guilmant organ sonata; Beethoven's "Adelaide," as a 'cello number; violin numbers by Bruch and Tschaikowsky, and the andante from a Bargiel trio, Op. 37, for violin, 'cello and organ.

Mr. Condit's Success.

A. Rae Condit, who is well known in the collegiate and musical circles of Los Angeles and Pomona, is meeting with unusual success in the East, and has just been engaged by a large Lyceum Bureau for two more seasons.

He has just finished touring Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Indian Territories and Texas, and will soon enter upon a tour of the Middle West and Eastern States.

He has a number of Chautauqua engagements this summer.

Kubelik.

Kubelik will play in Los Angeles in a little more than a week, and is now scoring high triumphs in his tour toward the West.

Extracts from London criticisms at the time of his English farewell are interesting.

The Standard said: "Queen's Hall on Saturday afternoon was filled to its utmost—every available corner even of the orchestra being used either for sitting or standing, in order to give Kubelik a hearty send-off on his tour around the world. This means that the famous violinist will be absent from our shores for about two years, and it would seem that the unbounded enthusiasm displayed on Saturday was intended to convince him of the fact that whatever lands he may visit in the meantime, none could give him a more hearty and sincere reception than England. And truly he would be a strange individual who would not have been impressed by such a personal demonstration. However, the chief feature of the afternoon was the brilliant performance of Ernst's Concerto, a work which, on account of it being suited to display those qualities which have made Kubelik's name famous all Gover the world—brilliancy, grace, ease and accuracy of execution. With or without deeper intentions on the part of the artist, these are qualities that fascinate and give magic to a name that no after criticism or arguments can erase. Weber's 'Perpetua Nobile' was also on the programme, which ended with Paganini's astonishing 'Rondo a la Clochette.'"

The Daily Graphic said: "London is disconsolate and will not be comforted, for Kubelik has said good-by, and will not irradiate us with the light of his presence for two 'long, weary years,' as the lunatic in 'La Perichole' used to say. On Saturday afternoon he gave a farewell concert at Queen's Hall, which was crowded for the occasion. The scene was affecting beyond words, and can hardly be described in terms of ordinary criticism. To do justice to Kubelik's manifold charms is scarcely within our power and we must content ourselves with recording that he quite deserved all the applause that he got. He dashed off his show pieces, such as Ernst's Concerto in F sharp, Paganini's 'Campanella,' and David's arrangement of Weber's 'Perpetua Nobile,' with all his old brilliancy, and played a charming sonata by Handel with delighted crispness and elegance of style. He gave a number of encores, of course, among them an arrangement of Chopin's Nocturne in D flat, which goes very well for the violin, and made a pleasant change from the hackneyed Nocturne in E flat, which violinists of all sorts and conditions have worn threadbare."

The Daily Mail said: "Herr Kubelik had a great send-off at his farewell recital on Saturday afternoon at Queen's Hall, and crowds of his fair admirers were so loth to part from him that they nearly rushed the platform at the close of the concert. Kubelik still remains facile princeps at musical pyrotechnics, and his continued popularity, especially with the fair sex, is amazing. Everything he played was received with vociferous applause, and we quite lost count of the number of his recalls. Outside the artist's entrance, a formidable army of feminine enthusiasts assailed the doorkeeper with floral tributes, and scented notes, and the violinist must have had an exciting quarter of an hour running the gauntlet.

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

Milan (Da Vinci's Christ).

All day long, year after year,
  Maid and man and priest and lay
Wander in from crowded streets,
  And through the long, cool gallery stray.

And with them, in the fading light,
  We loiter past the pictured wall
Till lo! a face before us comes,
  And something wistful seems to fall

From two strange eyes that speak to all;
  For here a priest, and there a maid,
Two lads, a soldier, and a bonne,
  Before the rail their steps have stayed.

What message bore this awful face,
  Through all the waning centuries fled?
What says it to the gazer now?
  What said it to the myriad dead.

Who came and went like us today,
  And, pausing here in silence, all
In silence laid their weight of sins
  Before this still confessional?

A face more sad man never dreamed,
  A face more sweet man never wrought;
So solemn-sad, so solemn-sweet,
  Serenely set in quiet thought.

The silent sunlight slips away,
  The soldiers pass, the bonne goes by;
The painter drapes his copy in,
  And stops his work and heaves a sigh.

And followed by those eyes, that have
  The patience of eternity.
We carry to the bustling street
  Their loving Benedicite.

More Monotypes by Carl Oscar Borg.

Some weeks ago I had occasion to speak of the experiments in monotype that Carl Oscar Borg was making. They were but tentative beginnings, but even these showed a strong, individual touch, and showed that Mr. Borg had already a pretty clear notion as to what he was after. Yet they did not quite prepare us for the tremendous things he has done in colored monotype within the past few weeks—plates sixteen by twenty inches in size, and equally big in artistic ways.

Her Last Voyage, (Monotype by Carl Oscar Borg.)

We are a trifle chary, in these latter days, of mentioning the word "genius," even in speaking of art and artists, for none of the things of human endeavor must be taken too seriously lest we make ourselves ridiculous. So I will not call Mr. Borg a genius, though the temptation toward a use of the superlative word is strong. I will content myself with saying, however, that I consider him the happy possessor of a most fine and unusual talent, and that his promise in several fields of art is already merging into splendid performance.

The four large monotypes which he has lately executed show him at his best. They give a feeling of strength, vivacity, and a superb fecundity of invention. They are done with the ease and dignity of a master—or so, at least, I might be tempted to say, did I not know that Mr. Borg will do yet better things as he grows in knowledge and experience.

Three of these monotypes are studies of the sea, which Mr. Borg, being a Norseman, holds more dear than the shore. "A Fair Wind" and "The Viking Fleet" both show skies that have the vibrant morbidezza of charcoal, while the moving waves, very simply scratched in, are heavy and ponderous. "Her Last Voyage" is superbly dramatic, a chaos of storm and ultimate doom. Mr. Borg, who has been a sailor, knows every spar and rope and sail of a ship from stem to stern, and you will find no absurd errors of detail in his pictures of the sea. Yet we are told that Winslow Homer himself, master though he be, is not always free from them.

"Sunlight in the Woods," Mr. Borg's fourth mammoth monotype, is what its name suggests—and something more; for the sunlight falls on gnarled and twisted trunks of old oak trees, and in the foreground there is "A tideless pool where shuddering shadows lie."

Mr. Borg has also done a number of smaller monotypes, some of them in very full color, reminding one of colored etchings. These, too, have the serious, almost tragic, element so often found in Mr. Borg's work, due, no doubt, to his Norse birth and ancestry.

As a painter in oils, Carl Oscar Borg has not yet found himself. He is still in the experimental stage, but his experiments are always interesting. His canvases are generally reminiscent of some master who has won his admiration, though Mr. Borg's personal talent is too strong to be even quite submerged. Among the more recent work from his brush, "Evening Light" is like a Keith and a pretty fine Keith at that; "Return of the Fold," with its rich, juicy greens reminds one of Constable; while "Eucalypts" is more original in color and composition.

All the monotypes here mentoned, and many more, besides the oils, as well as a number of new water colors of much charm, will soon be shown in the Steckel gallery, where Mr. Borg is to hold a "one man" exhibition. Every one interested in the progress of art and the art spirit in Los Angeles will do well to go and see them, for they will be found to be more than worthy of his careful consideration.

Allen Hutchinson's Portrait Sketches.

Some months ago I spoke of the work of Allen Hutchinson, the English sculptor who had at that time just settled at San Bernardino.

Mr. Hutchinson has of late been helping the cause of art in Southern California by giving a course of free lectures and demonstrations to the colleges and clubs in his immediate neighborhood. At Pomona College he recently modeled the head of an Indian before the students, though on all the other occasions he selected his subject from the audience and modeled a portrait sketch. His large audiences have found Mr. Hutchinson's demonstrations extremely interesting and instructive. A number of commissions in portraiture have resulted from them.

While staying at Claremont, modeling a bust of President Gates of Pomona College, Mr. Hutchinson had the pleasure of meeting, quite unexpectedly, Louis St. Gaudens, who has been rusticating there for the winter. Louis St. Gaudens, who is a brother of Augustus St. Gaudens, is a sculptor whose fame bids fair to rival that of his illustrious brother.

Among the commissions that came to Mr. Hutchinson's hands was a relief portrait of William Penn Rogers, a well-known orange grower of Highland. Mr. Penn's head and profile are of a type that lends itself well to sculpture, and Mr. Hutchinson's study, in low relief, is strong in character. We reproduce it in these columns.

The Impressionists.

Mrs. S. E. Garden-Mcleod read a very interesting paper on "The Impressionists" before the Arts and Crafts on last Tuesday evening. She pointed out the debt of the Luminarists to Constable, Turner, and Watts.

"The Impressionists," she declared, "have broadened the artists' views of the actual, and by protesting against hard lines, which certainly do not exist in nature, but masses instead, they have unquestionably developed the present study of values; that is, the relative intensity of light or dark that colors possess independently of their hues."

In speaking of Manet, the leader of the movement, Mrs. Mcleod said: "His first sketches were always of great power, but he seems so to delight in the first impression that he desired to go no farther. One of his strong convictions was that the color ought to be left fresh without tormenting the life out of it by disturbing it with the brush. It was he who had the courage to leave imperfect work for the sake of its freshness, rather than sacrifice the freshness to the kind of excellence that may be reached by more laborious finish.

"The mere freshness and crispness of the touch are not in themselves a compensation if the quality is not good. The plain truth is, while some of Manet's work was strong in style and harmonious in coloring, a good deal of it was very crude, and this seems due to his habit of improving.

He worked always in a militant spirit, knowing himself to be despised by the principal artists and an object of ridicule to the public, conditions most unfavorable to quiet progress in the study and culture of the beautiful."

Among the other artists treated in this comprehensive survey of impressionism are Monet, Degas, Renoir, Pissarro, Cézanne and Sisley.

The Scrip.

A new monthly art journal has appeared in the field, The Scrip, small and unpretentious, but first-class in its editor and contributors. It is conducted by Elizabeth Luther Cary and published by Moffat, Yard & Co., New York.

The February number contains, among other timely and well illustrated articles, an account of the decorations that John LaFarge has made for the capitol at St. Paul, Minn. The March number has, among other good things, an illustrated article on the caricatures of Honoré Daumier, a paper (also illustrated) on the etchings of Whistler, and a review of "The Exhibition in Philadelphia," by Royal Cortissoz. There is a department devoted to arts and crafts, a few pages of book reviews, etc.

ART NOTES.

In speaking of the late exhibit at the National Academy of Design, The Scrip says: "Possibly the general tameness would be less obvious if Mr. Borglum's 'Horses of Diomedes' were not among the sculpture exhibits. Miss Shaw Announces Engagement.

Pretty girl friends of Miss Dora Drake Shaw were all a-flutter on Friday evening at the dinner given by Miss Shaw at the Jonathan Club, when the beautiful young hostess ingeniously announced her engagement to Robert Armstrong Heffner, a prominent young Angeleño.

The dinner was a brilliant affair indeed the best of all the announcement was a complete surprise. It was ostensibly given in honor of Miss Claire Browne and Miss Katherine Bruce, two visiting girls from the hostess's former home, Houlton, Me.

The dinner itself was given in the banquet room of the Jonathan Club, which is itself finished in red. The great round table at which twenty-five guests were seated was spread with lacy cloth and in the center glowed a mass of vivid red carnations and soft ferns. Crystal candelabra shaded with red cast a soft glow, and place cards were adorned with scarlet flowers. All the courses were red, beginning with the oyster cocktail and ending with the red heart-shaped ice. The cake, which went with the ice, was served in a dainty basket of red with flowers and ribbons attached and within the inviting cakes reposed the cards of Mr. Heffner and his charming fiancée. Then such a murmur of surprise and laughter and congratulations as arose. The blushing bride-elect was simply overwhelmed. She herself carried out the color scheme well, wearing a handsome frock of black silk net over red silk.

Guests who sat at the lovely table were: Mmes. Paul Hancock, Stewart Roseberry, George Turner, William Keim, and Misses Mildred Pope, Sarah Miller, Marie Carter, Lulu Cliffe, Daisy Sinclair, Adelaide Ball, Clara Parmalee, Lena Turner, Edna Addison, Inez Johnson, Katherine Brady, Bess Gibson, Blanche Guiberson, Frances Thompson, Elsie Vanderpool, Beulah Wright, Gertrude Comstock, Blanche Morton, Claire Browne and Katherine Bruce.

Miss Shaw hersedf has only lived here in Los Angeles about seven months, and for some time made her home with Dr. and Mrs. Murray Johnstone of No. 1016 West Pico street. She comes of a prominent family of Houlton, Me., her father being Hon. R. W. Shaw, a well-known lawyer of that city. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw have recently come to this city to join their daughter and are at present at No. 1060 West Jefferson street. The bride-elect herself is a pretty and charming girl, and since her residence here is a member of the Alpha Rho sorority, having attended the University of Southern California, from which she will graduate this June.

Mr. Heffner is a son of Mrs. R. A. Heffner and of the late R. A. Heffner, both old residents of this city. He is a rising young business man and is connected with W. P. Jeffries & Co. He is a Mason and a Shriner and a popular member of the Jonathan Club.

The young couple have only known each other since Miss Shaw came here which is scarce seven months ago, and 'tis said that it was a case of love at first sight, for scarce had he met until he loved this fair and vivacious young girl.

Warnke-Trapp Nuptials.

A pretty wedding was celebrated at the home of Mrs. Wilhemiena Warnke, No. 1738 Santee street, Miss Alfrieda Warnke becoming the bride of Roy Trapp. Rev. Mr. Cordez of the German Evangelical Church officiated. Miss Jennie Dickerson assisted as maid of honor, and Oscar Warnke as best man. A large reception followed, attended by many young friends of the contracting parties, besides a host of relatives and friends of the family. The parlors and dining-room were fragrant with sweet blossoms. American Beauty roses, red and pink carnations, banked the dining-room mantel. White carnations, Easter lilies, with graceful ferns and swaying palms, garlanded with spring blossoms and greenery, converted the front parlor into a bower of floral beauty, where the bride and groom received the congratulations of their numerous friends. The bride's table was massed with a mound of greenery, white carnations and orange blossoms. In the center rested a magnificent wedding cake, which the bride cut. Christopher catered. A quartette of men's voices rendered sweet music at intervals during the evening. The bride was charmingly gowned in white crepe de chine over pearl white taffeta silk. Trimmings of white satin and Irish rose lace, with a bouquet of bride roses, tied with white satin ribbon, completed a lovely costume. Miss Jennie Dickerson, as maid of honor, wore white organdie, with lace trimmings over pink taffeta. Her bouquet was of pink carnations. The happy couple left in the evening for their new home at 876 East Fifty-seventh street.

Their departure was made memorable by a shower of rice and slippers. The lawn was brilliantly lighted by Chinese lanterns, which added to the charm of the departure of this happy young couple.

-o-

Mrs. McCulloch's Box Party.

Mrs. George F. McCulloch gave a luncheon at her apartments, Franklin and New High street, Wednesday, followed by a box party at the Orpheum. The table decorations were violets and maidenhair ferns. For Mrs. Hammond.

Mrs. Dwight Satterlee of No. 912 South Burlington avenue gave a reception on Wednesday afternoon of this week, in honor of her aunt, Mrs. A. Park Hammond of Rockville, Ct., and of her daughter, Mrs. W. C. Bennett, who has lately returned from an extended trip in the East. In the receiving rooms, shades were drawn, and electric lights enhanced the prettiness of the floral decorations, which consisted of potted ferns in variety, garlands of smilax, and a profusion of flowers. In the living-room, golden poppies glowed amid the green. A tall vase in the hall held a huge cluster of calla lilies; the den, where punch was served, was brightened by blossoms of the yellow rambler, and in the dining-room, pink sweet-peas predominated. On the table were a dainty center piece and doilies to match, of hand-embroidered linen, and silver candelabra casting a soft light beneath pink-tinted shades. Assisting the hostess in receiving were Mmes. S. S. Shepard, F. H. Nichols and W. H. Bates. Mmes. Frederick Braden and Marion Gibbs poured, and other dining-room assistants were Mrs. A. D. Cross and the Misses Inez Thomas and Alice Ammerman. Miss Grace Bates presided at the punch bowl. During the afternoon Mrs. Braden and Miss Ammerman rendered several charming piano selections and Miss Adele Spencer sang with much taste. In the intervals the hum of busy conversation evidenced the pleasure of the passing hours. A very interesting feature of the occasion was the presence of three tiny maids in fluffy white gowns, who attended the door, and helped entertain by their sweet baby speeches and smiling faces. These were the Misses Margaret Benton, Anita Kennedy, and the hostess' little granddaughter, Wilma Bennett. Out of town guests were Mrs. Hammond, guest of honor; Mrs. Matson Hill and daughter of Chicago, and Mrs. John T. Bottomley of Camden, N. J.

Miss Jessie Wapple, prominent society belle, whose engagement is announced to Herman Burkhard today.

SPRING AND THIRD STS.

News of Society—Gossip of Men and Women—Weddings, Parties, Dinners and garlands of crepe paper combined with ferns.

The dining-room was in pink and from the chandelier crepe paper and pink roses were garlanded. Favors were in the shape of clubs tied with pink ribbons and filled with bonbons. Score cards were in the shape of clubs. Mrs. E. A. McCombs won the highest score, and was awarded a beautiful cut glass vase. J. J. Lesaliner won the men's first prize, a carved paper knife. Guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Banker, Mr. and Mrs. Lesaliner, Mr. and Mrs. Kissney, Mr. and Mrs. McCombs and Mr. and Mrs. Swain.

Visit McDonalds.

Mr. and Mrs. F. X. McDonald of the Hinman have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. F. S. McGrath of Chicago, who are on their way home after an enjoyable trip to Honolulu. Mrs. McGrath spent most of her early life in this State, being a daughter of Count Von Boehn, scion of a noted Austro-Hungarian family, who made his home in San Francisco. Mrs. McGrath was Miss Charlotte Von Boehn and this is her first visit to her native State in twenty-two years. She has many friends in the northern part of the State who will be glad to welcome her. She is a pretty woman with the typical California coloring, blonde with blue eyes and rosy cheeks.

Mrs. Hart's Reception.

Mrs. Henry Wilson Hart of No. 849 South Burlington avenue will entertain Thursday, March 22 with a reception and musicale for members of the Ruskin Art Club. At this function, guests will be treated to music by Herr Franz Robert Leischner, former court pianist of Austria. He will on this occasion play the famous Mendelssohn-Liszt Wedding march, a composition which few pianists attempt to play.

Daly Here.

John J. Daly, the millionaire mine owner of Utah, accompanied by his two pretty daughters, Misses Eudora and Evelyn, is a guest for a few weeks at the Angelus Hotel and is being entertained by numerous Salt Lake people visiting here.

On Thursday, accompanied by Col. I. W. Donnellan of Sacramento, they spent the day at Ocean Park, as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Broughall of Salt Lake. Mr. Broughall and Mr. Daly are lifelong business associates and intimate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Daly are also the god-parents of the beautiful little daughter of the Broughalls, so the reunion was a most happy one.

For Walkers.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Gibbon of No. 2733 Harvard boulevard will entertain on Monday evening with a handsome dinner in compliment to Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Walker, who are here from Washington on a visit.

Miss Spears Engaged.

At a meeting of the Kappa Nu sorority held on Saturday afternoon, at the home of Miss Rachel Spears, Mrs. P. B. Spears surprised the members by announcing the engagement of her daughter, Miss Rachel, to J. B. Woodson, son of J. A. Woodson of Montana.

Miss Spears has a host of friends among the young set who will be interested to know of the news. She was a student at the Girls' Collegiate School.

The guests were entertained with cards, and the home was decorated with gold and green, the sorosis colors. Guests for the affair were: Misses Helen Bosbyshell, Pearl Matthews, Juanita Lane, Marguerite Leis, Dot Barrington, Frances arker, Florence Kerns, Willye Kerns, Mabel Wilde, Mabel Damer, Whittlesy, Hazel Bryson, Juliette Hogan, Ruth Shepherd, Harris and Gladys Bowen.

As yet no date has been set for the wedding of this charming young maid, but it will probably take place in the summer.

Newhalls' Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Newhall of Chester Place will entertain with a dinner on Monday evening for a number of their friends.

Mrs. Armstrong to Entertain.

Mrs. J. J. Thomas of San Francisco and Madame de Chauvenet, a noted singer of Chicago, will be guests of honor at the luncheon to be given on Wednesday by Mrs. Frank Wingfield Armstrong of No. 2840 Romeo Place.

For Mrs. Overman.

Mrs. Ruth K. Overman of Chicago, who is at the Hotel Alexandria for a few weeks, has been most cordially entertained. She came to Los Angeles to attend the Pasadena Horse Show, being very fond of good horses and owning not a few herself. She is an excellent whip and a graceful equestrienne, and at her country home near Chicago has some fine horses which she prizes very much.

MRS. EDWARD Q. CORDNER, NER, who is visiting here.

She is thinking of coming back to Los Angeles for the horse show here, and perhaps of bringing some of her fine horses. She is a handsome woman, and clad in her driving rig is most striking.

On Wednesday evening she was guest of honor at a jolly little card party given by Mrs. Frank Goings, of No. 1653 West Twenty-fifth street. Music followed the cards, and later a delicious luncheon was served. The home was filled with the beauty and fragrance of many flowers. In the drawing-room, American Beauty roses and Easter lilies were graceful and striking, and in the den, smilax and roses and Easter lilies combined with good effect. The dining-room was canopied with smilax, and bright-red carnations graced the table. Besides the hostess and Mrs. Overman, there were present: Mrs. W. R. Davidson, Mrs. James Morley, Mrs. E. C. Morrow, Mrs. J. E. Brink, Mrs. George Burger, Mrs. George Gordan, Mrs. Beesley, and Misses Kiewalt and May Neal.

Miss Dora Drake Shaw, popular girl who announced her engagement to Robert Heffner, at a brilliant dinner on Friday evening at the Jonathan Club.

For Miss Strong.

Miss Rena Strong, an attractive girl from Colorado Springs, was the honored guest on Thursday evening at a whist party given by Mrs. Albert Sherwood and her daughter Miss Alice Louise Sherwood of Lovelace avenue. Miss Strong came to Los Angeles to act as maid of honor at the Beard-Billington nuptials which were solemnized recently. She has been visiting Mrs. T. C. Beard, mother of the bride, at her home on Orange street.

The affair on Thursday evening was a farewell compliment and the home was made attractive with greenery and callas. Scores were kept on hand-decorated cards. The first prize for the women was won by Miss Rose Kubach, while that for the men fell to Mr. Ballinger. Dr. Wilson won the second for men and Miss Appleton the girls' second.

After the games music was enjoyed, Miss Kubach singing and Miss Strong giving mandolin music. Mr. Ballinger gave a number of baritone solos.

Guests included: Misses Rose Kubach, Rena Strong, Bernice Burrows, Amy Burton, Sophie Kubach, Pearl and Lena Teague, Juanita Lane, Mabel Kellogg, Madge McGraw, Gurtrice Sherwood, Edna Appleton, Eula May Hammers, Aimie Luentzel and Blanche Sanders, and Messrs. Roy Beard, John Burrows, Dick Garvey, Goodwin, Sheldon Ballinger, A. E. Sherwood, Harry Sherwood, Archibald Sherwood, Fred Appleton, Billy Cook, Tom Inich, Herman Hauser, Ed Bosbyshell, Roy Dorr and Dr. L. A. Civille, Dr. N. W. Goodman and Dr. Wilson.

Friday afternoon Miss Rose Kubach of No. 1201 South Alvarado street gave an informal tea for this same pretty girl, entertaining about twenty-five guests. The tea table contained a pleasing arrangement of ferns and ribbons with cut-glass candelabra. Music and games made the afternoon pass quickly.

Saturday Miss Stavnow entertained a company of girls with a dinner at Venice in honor of Miss Strong, who leaves today for her home.

Stimsons Leave.

Mr. and Mrs. Ezra T. Stimson of West Adams and Scarff street left Thursday for the East, to be gone several months, visiting friends and relatives there.

THE MARVEL FLOWER SHO

THE most beautiful millinery creations of the clever Parisian artists clearly portray the popularity of flowers and foliage for the coming season's wear, whole hats seem to be veritable flower gardens. Such diversity! There seems to be no limitation to the varieties and colors. Truly this might be termed "the flower season." Nearly every conceivable flower and foliage—and especially those ordained for millinery popularity, are shown in profound variety at the Marvel. See window display.

Crushed Roses
Marguerites
Violets
Pansies
Chrysanthemums
Heliotropes
Lilacs
Daisies
Baby Roses
Lily of the Valley
Poppies
Forget-me-nots
Foliages
Fruits
Berries
Maiden-hair Ferns Geraniums
Black Flowers of all sorts

The Marvel's display of Street and Dress Hats may be pronounced the richest, the most superb exposition ever shown in the city. Hats are shown of every style character, and to suit every face—no matter what your preference may be. From the costliest to the most economical, the Marvel is replete with models of rare beauty and becomingness.

Spring Opening
In the Art Department

Our Art Department now presents the most varied showing of exquisite needlework, choice bric-a-brac, cut glass and other articles for home adornment we have ever displayed.

Enjoy the exhibit.

A few of the most interesting displays:

Pillow Covers Center pieces and pillow covers worked in the new and beautiful ribbon embroidery designs, entirely of shaded ribbon, making an exquisite color effect that will at once appeal to any lover of embroidery. Sold in sets (pillow cover and center piece) or singly. Stamped pieces of every design shown in this collection of finished pieces.

Table Sets Lunch cloths, scarfs and table sets of imported Cluny lace, torchon, guipure, fillet and Renaissance laces. Some of them very inexpensive but effective, others extremely rich and costly.

Center pieces and pillow covers with new and striking designs worked in heavy Roman floss—large red poppies, roses, daisies, violets, etc.—very, very pretty and not at all difficult to make.

Dresser Scarfs, etc. Pin cushion tops, center pieces and dresser scarfs in the new shadow embroidery—extremely dainty and effective—can be worked in white or colors. Finished bedroom sets and pillow covers on exhibit. Stamped pieces of the same designs in stock.

Cut Glass Cut glass tumblers in the old English cut at the bottom and three cut bands at the top—a very simple but attractive and serviceable cutting—specially priced at $3.50 a dozen.

Generously good 25c values on sale Monday at TWO for 25c.

High-grade Corsets

With the appearance of a costly gown so largely dependent upon the corsets, no good dresser can afford to be careless about choosing them.

With over two hundred models in America's best makes, and four expert fitters at your service, you are absolutely sure of getting the right corset here.

Sapphire Corsets	$5.00 to $25.00
Bon Ton Corsets	$3.00 to $ 7.50
Royal Worcester Corsets	$1.00 to $ 4.00

Corset Protective Shields Their cost will be saved twice over in the increased length of life they give to one corset. It's just like wearing arm shields to protect your waist. Price, nainsook covered, 25c a pair; silk and nainsook, 40c a pair; all silk, 50c.

(Sold in Corset Department, Rear of Annex, and in Notion Dep't., Near Elevator.)

Heatherbloom The new petticoat fabric

Which is now so extensively advertised in the magazines

The thin, soft quality of HEATHERBLOOM lends itself admirably to the glove-like fit Fashion decrees for the top of every drop-skirt or petticoat, no matter how bouffant be the ruffles. Its lightness is another telling point. In this, as in its finish, it scores even points with the regulation silk skirt in weight. HEATHERBLOOM, 36 inches wide, retails at 35c. per yard. Say 5 yards for a drop-skirt. Cost $1.75. Broad variety of new shades.

HAVE YOU REALLY AN UNBROKEN DINNER SET IN YOUR HOME?

Not an impertinent question, because our business is to sell crockery along with other lines of merchandise. If you need a dinner set, due to the fact that the one you have has been considerably broken into by accident in the kitchen, you cannot further your interests better than to take advantage of some special price offerings we will make for this week. As to the pieces of bric-a-brac in your home or a toilet set in the washroom, you can afford these necessaries at the very small prices quoted in the following items. But remember that whenever in need of anything in the house furnishing line, Hamburger's is the one store at which to buy it.

ROUND TABLE—Where the Editorial Staff Gathers On Sunday Morning

AMONG MEN OF ACTION.

L. G. Fouse of Philadelphia, president of the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Company, is in the city. He was seen at the local office of the company, and spoke of the recent insurance grafts, swindles and shake-ups, a subject near the heart of every big man in his line—especially those not mixed up in the sensational crookedness.

"When we consider that over $13,000,000 is represented in the insurance interests of this country, or more than the combined railroad capital of the United States, and also more than our combined national banking capital, it behooves us to demand careful legislation on the subject of insurance. We should do nothing that will be hasty," said Mr. Fouse.

"The investigating committee of the New York Legislature has made its report and introduced a number of bills. The bills, generally speaking, are of a revolutionary character and will probably not be taken seriously by the committee itself. The purpose of a number of the bills is evidently to test public sentiment, and the bills that are likely to become laws will probably be amended.

"The sensational and yellow newspapers have in a measure created an unhealthy sentiment, yet when it comes to action, the good sense of the public can safely be trusted. It is reasonable to assume that the people will be allowed another view of the situation before the laws of the State of New York are amended.

"The best thing that anyone, either policy holder or agent, interested in perpetuating the life of insurance companies, can do, is to urge that nothing be done for the present.

"It is a dangerous proposition, in haste, passion and prejudice, to disturb laws involving technical matters which are essential to the business. While the big companies are strong, and are solvent beyond question, yet even they can be examined, pounded and legislated out of existence, to the great loss of the millions who have made provision for their dependents through them.

"It is the duty of every sensible and honest person to do what he can to prevent uncalled-for and unnecessary excitement. It is well known that the persons who have been charged with the irregularities are now out of business, and their successors must be given a reasonable time to reconstruct what has been broken down."

Baird Whiteley, who has returned to Southern California from a winter spent in the Philippines, says that a vast work of civilization yet remains to be done in thoroughly modernizing the islands. He himself has been doing a part of it, as he represented a municipal sanitary commission, or committee, of the city of Manila, in part of their extensive work. When the islands are "cleaned up," and are made to produce at their full capacity, their trade will be extremely valuable, and then, Mr. Whiteley believes, Southern California will get a very prominent part of it.

Said he yesterday: "The Philippines make a principality whose possibilities are recognized by only a very small pocentage of the American people. As yet we regard the Philippines as a very troublesome young family, enterprising and able to cry lustily, but not strong enough to do us or themselves any material good.

"The day is coming when the utility of the Philippines will be made fully manifest, and in case of trouble with the Far East, whether it should ever come to war or not, they would be almost invaluable as a haven for our ships and a place of close observance.

"Then, as only the eastern traveler can notice, the Philippines are giving us prestige among the nations of the world. England sways her India, and France and Germany their smaller provinces—while now the United States, clear on the other side of the world, sets her flag in this place, and the passing nations respect it as an emblem of her power.

"The fertility of the Philippine soil, the magnificence of her forests, and the undoubted wealth of her mineral deposits, are further assets in her claim for American affection."

THE RAMBLER.

The Cricket's Song.

When all the world is filled with snow,
And bright the embers snap and glow,
I hear his treble, shrill and low—

"Cheerily cheer up—cheer up!
Let us be gay and jolly.
Cheerily cheer up—cheer up!
Away with melancholy."

And when the fields are wet with rain,
And hope and joy are on the wane,
I hear his merry, glad refrain—

"Cheerily cheer up—cheer up!
Let us be gay and jolly.
Cheerily cheer up—cheer up!
Repining is a folly."

But when the sunshine floods the sky,
Ah! then his voice is clear and high,
A lyric note of ecstasy—

"Cheerily cheer up—cheer up!
Let us be gay and jolly.
Cheerily cheer up—cheer up!
Away with melancholy."

New hopes and feelings thou hast stirred,
Thou hidden minstrel. I have heard
And treasured every cheering word—

"Cheerily cheer up—cheer up!
Let us be gay and jolly.
Cheerily cheer up—cheer up!
Repining is a folly."

A Suit of Black Broadcloth.

"I guess I'll go," said Asa Twilliger, laying down the paper he had been reading.

"Go to what?" his wife inquired as she glanced up from a long seam and snipped off the thread with her teeth.

"To the picnic the Badgers are giving at Long Beach tomorrow. I was born in Wisconsin, though I didn't live there more'n five years. Want to go, too, Myra?"

"No, I guess not. Too busy with Annie's wedding finery, and all," was Mrs. Twilliger's decisive answer. "Besides, I ain't a Badger. I'm a Michigander."

"That's true, though I dunno as that would matter much, seeing as you're married to a Badger. Well, I'm going. I'm glad I got that black broadcloth suit last week—though I expect it'll be my laying-out clothes some day."

"It's a tasty suit, and becomes you, Asa," Mrs. Twilliger assented, cheerfully. "And I guess there ain't much question but you'll live to order another."

"I dunno 'bout that," said Asa, gloomily. "I feel mighty queer inside, now 'n' again."

"Overeating, I shouldn't wonder," retorted Mrs. Twilliger, briskly.

"For goodness sake, pa, don't begin that everlasting harping on your health" put in Annie, who had just entered the room. "You're as healthy and hearty looking a man as I ever see, if I do say so."

"Bloat—all bloat," groaned Asa.

But sick or well, he certainly was a good sleeper, and he woke bright and early the next morning, feeling more cheerful than he would admit to his wife. After shaving with extra care, he put on a clean shirt, and then began to rummage in the dark closet for his new broadcloth suit, which did not appear to be on its proper pegs. He found it at last, however, and proceeded to pull on the trousers.

They seemed to be a tight fit, though they had been loose enough on the day when he got them. Asa pulled and jerked and tugged, and then, paling in sudden fright, sank weakly back in his chair.

"It's bloat!" he muttered, hoarsely. "I knew it! Myra," he called. "Myra, come here!"

"What is it, Asa?"

"Just you come and see!"

"Them pants seem to be kinder tight," was Mrs. Twilliger's wondering comment.

"Tight!" Asa snorted. "It's bloat, I tell you. The coat's tight, too, I'll be bound, and so's the vest."

"Try 'em on, Asa, and let's see."

They were both most excruciatingly tight, and Mrs. Twilliger had to admit as much.

"See what's come on me in less'n a week," said Asa, triumphantly, "an' you wimmen folks wouldn't even believe I was sick! But I'm going to the picnic, bloat or no bloat. I'm going to eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow I die!"

"Asa!" Mrs. Twilliger protested. "And you a deacon of the church! Well, if you're sot on going, give me them pants, and I'll see if I can fix 'em up with a gusset."

"What's that?" Asa inquired, suspiciously.

"Oh, just a piece of cloth sewed in like a wedge. It won't show."

Asa fumed and fretted while the gusset was being inserted. The coat and vest he heroically kept on, though they were bursting at every button. The gusset afforded some relief, yet the trousers were still as tight as the skin of a sausage.

"Better stay home, pa," Annie suggested. "You do look a sight."

"I don't care a darn how I look!" Asa blustered, and mother and daughter raised their hands in horror at his profanity. "I'm a Badger, and if the other Badgers don't like my style they can lump it. I've made up my mind to go, and I won't be hindered by no wimmen folks."

He got away from the house at last, hot, angry and perspiring. He had hardly been gone a minute, however, when Annie came running after him, frantically waving something black above her head. It proved, on closer view, to be a pair of trousers.

"Pa, pa," Annie screamed, "come back! We've found your suit."

"Found my suit?" Asa retorted. "Well, one's enough to wear at a time, I guess, when it's as tight as this."

"But this one'll fit," Annie panted, beginning to gag and choke with suppressed laughter. "These—are—your pants, pa. You've got Cousin John Henry's suit on—and you know how thin he is along of you. Oh—ha, ha, ha!"

Asa looked dazed. He glanced down at the remodeled trousers, though he found it a breath-taking proceeding to do even this. "Well," he began, "I'll be—"

"Pa!" cried Annie, shocked into shrill and articulate speech again.

"Contwisted," Asa finished.

"It wasn't bloat, after all, was it, pa?" said Annie, silly, giggling into the trousers she held.

Asa turned a dull red. "Who put them clothes o' John Henry's into my closet?" he sternly demanded, after a pause.

"Why, you did, pa," said Annie, sweetly. "I saw him hand 'em to you myself, the day he left for Imperial."

And Asa stalked back to the house in stony silence.

IN THE BIG INDUSTRIES.

Niagara Power for Syracuse.

A project is on foot to carry electric power from Niagara Falls to Syracuse, N. Y., a distance of 162 miles. This will still leave the record for long distance transmission with California, namely 218 miles, but the new installation will far surpass anything before attempted in the Eastern States. Moreover, the undertaking is to be on a very big scale, the generating plant providing for the immediate handling of forty thousand horse power, with provision made for twenty thousand horse power additional when required. The enterprise has two special features of importance. In the first place the cable is of aluminum instead of copper. Aluminum is an excellent conductor of electricity, and, though more costly than copper, is very much lighter. Hence, when the price of copper is high, as at present, it is cheaper to use the other metal.

International Issue Involved.

The second point is that the power will be generated on the Canadian side, so that it will be a produce sold to United States consumers by a foreign company. No doubt the financial interests on both sides of Niagara Falls associated with the electrical industry are closely identified, but this feature of the scheme is bound to lead to discussion. For example, foreign coal has to pay a heavy duty; it may then well be asked by those interested why foreign electric power, subserving the same uses as coal, should enter duty free. In Canada, also, the scheme has provoked comment, and already there is a move to have a law passed forbidding the generation of electric power in the Dominion for sale to foreign consumers, that is to say to foreign industrial competitors. It is clear that several far-reaching issues are involved, bringing before us more forcibly than ever the urgency of an international conference and agreement as to the use of Niagara Falls before troubles develop that it may be difficult to remedy in face of accomplished facts. Already, with such a big scheme under way as the one above referred to, a crop of possible complications is springing up.

Paper from Straw.

According to the New York Commercial, we are to have a complete revolution in the paper-making industry. Wood pulp is to disappear, and straw is to take its place. Inferior grades of paper have long since been manufactured from straw, but not the finer qualities and those requiring tensile strength. Now, however, we are promised every grade required, from rough Manila wrappings up to the finest paper for bonds and ledgers, all from the straw that grows everywhere in such superabundance. If this news be true, the world is not only entering upon an era of cheap paper, but vast acreages of forest lands will be saved from destruction. It takes from sixteen to thirty years to grow a spruce tree large enough to be profitably converted into pulp, but it requires only a few weeks to raise straw. Thus with a raw material that annually renews itself, it w... no longer be necessary to go to the woods for paper pulp.

New Process of Manufacture.

It is claimed that by the new process every particle of the straw is used including the knots, hitherto a source of difficulty. After being subjected to three alkali and two acid baths, the straw emerges at the end of four hours' treatment as a perfectly white and uniform pulp without a trace of resemblance to its origin. With the exception of buckwheat, all kinds of straws are equally suitable—rice, wheat, oat and rye having given identical results. The New York company that holds the patents is already erecting one mill in Louisiana to handle rice straw, another in Minnesota to utilize wheat straw, and a third in Ohio to treat oat straw. There has been a long search for a raw material to take the place of spruce or poplar wood in paper making, but to find it at last in what is virtually a waste agricultural product is good fortune indeed both for the paper-buyer and for the farmer.

Gold from South Africa.

Gold production in the Transvaal has now, through the introduction of Chinese labor, passed the point at which it was interrupted by the Boer war. The largest production before the war was just under 4,000,000 ounces, in 1898. Last year the return was 4,897,221 ounces, or about $100,000,000 worth of the metal. It is obvious that any shrinkage of the output now would not only be a serious blow to South Africa, but would affect every money market in the world. For the gold is urgently required to meet the industrial developments everywhere in progress, and there would be no more powerful factor in checking these developments than to cut off the enormous and regular supplies of gold from South Africa.

Hence the manifest reluctance now being shown by Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and his brother Liberal ministers in England to act on their pre-election manifestoes with too much haste. It served on the hustings to denounce Chinese coolie labor as "slavery," but the word has been withdrawn and apologized for in Parliament. There are over fifty thousand coolies at work on the Transvaal mines, and, although no more will be introduced for the present, the deportation question is now conveniently shelved for a year or so—"until the Transvaal colony has responsible government and can decide the issue for herself." Meanwhile the mines are fairly well manned with labor, and, although further development may be checked, the coolies are steadily gaining experience in their work. Therefore during the present year at all events we may look to see a further and continuous advance in the Transvaal gold output.

STREAKS OF HUMOR.

Ma: Gracious! What's the matter with the baby?

Pa: Oh, he bumped his head against one of the pedals of the piano.

Ma: Poor little dear! Perhaps he's seriously hurt.

Pa: Oh, I guess not. It was the soft pedal he struck.—[Philadelphia Press.

Discharged Cook: An' will yez give me a reference, mum?

Cross Lady: Reference, indeed! What is there to recommend you?

Discharged Cook: Just say th't I've lived wid you a whole month.—[Cleveland Leader.

Statistical Boarder: Have you the remotest idea, for instance, what the world's supply of honey is?

Sentimental Boarder: Yes, sir. The world's supply of honey weighs exactly 116 pounds, and her name is—well, I'm not going to mention it in this crowd.—[Chicago Tribune.

"This is an interesting clock, Miss," said the salesman; "you really should have one, especially if you're bothered with tiresome callers."

"It's merely a cuckoo clock, isn't it?" asked Miss May Pechis.

"Yes, but beginning at 10 p.m., instead of saying 'cuck-koo' every quarter hour it yells: 'Go home! Go home!'"—[Philadelphia Press.

Kind Old Lady: What ails the baby? He looks healthy, I'm sure.

The Nurse: Oh, he is, the little dear! But he's peevish today on account of cutting his whiskers.—[Puck.

Scribbles: I wonder how the custom of an editor calling himself "we" originated?

Dribbles: Doubtless some old-time blue-pencil wielder was on to the fact that in union there is strength, and used the term when he had occasion to ring in a bluff on a poet.—[Chicago News.

Mrs. Chugwater: Josiah, what is a "surrender value" in life insurance?

Mr. Chugwater: It's the value of the stuff you surrender to the company for the officers to get rich on.—[Chicago Tribune.

"I wonder why it is that ham and eggs usually go together," queried the shoe-clerk boarder.

"The association was originally due to the magnetic attraction of the stage ham, I believe," replied the cheerful idiot.—[Chicago News.

"Last night, George," said the sweet girl, "you told me you loved me more than tongue could tell, and—O, George—that wasn't true."

Provocation.

"Why did you strike your wife?" asked the judge.

"Because she insisted on naming our baby 'Parsifal,' your honor."

"Case dismissed, but don't get brought here too often."

The Society Mother.

"I suppose your maid frequently takes your poodle out for an airing?"

"Trust Fifi to a servant? Never! Besides, the children occupy her time."

"The appointed Saturday came," wrote the novelist.

Then he reflected.

"That is terribly commonplace," murmured he. "I wonder how it woudl do to say that the appointed Saturday never came?"

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

Prof. Elwood Mead, chief of irrigation investigations of the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, begins a course of lectures on irrigation at the University of California this week. They will be given three times a week for six weeks.

An unusual scene was enacted in the Council chamber of the Town Trustees of Berkeley last week, when Clarence Merrill, who has served as Town Clerk for the past four years, tendered his resignation to take effect on March 15, and was given a rousing ovation by the members of the board. The Trustees, and citizens in general, gave him a vote of thanks for his faithful service to the city.

An extraordinary blight of the tomato crop in this State is described in a bulletin issued by the State university, Prof. Ralph E. Smith contributing the story of the disaster and also suggesting ways of preventing a repetition of the plague. The territory affected by the blight is in Southern California, near La Habra, and there hundreds of acres of tomatoes, promising a splendid and profitable crop, were suddenly ruined by a mysterious disease.

Colvin B. Brown of Stockton, who went to Washington, D. C., with a delegation to interest the government in the early digging of the diverted canal at Sacramento Valley, has wired to Stockton that their mission has been successful, and that the government has agreed to accept certificates of search of the rights of way for the canal instead of the abstracts and that the work of digging the diverting canal can soon be commenced. It probably can be completed within the present year.

Word was received last week by friends of Dr. E. H. Woolsey, one of the most prominent surgeons of Oakland, that he had met with an accident while riding on a street car at Honolulu and had been so seriously injured that he is returning to the United States for treatment. Dr. Woolsey left Oakland two months ago, intending to spend some months in travel and study in the Far East. Two weeks ago he was thrown from a car and sustained severe injuries to his knee, which has so crippled him that he moves about only by the aid of crutches.

Denison H. Clift of San Francisco was elected editor of Chaparral, the humorous paper of Stanford, at a meeting of the staff last week. He will take charge of the paper next September and hold the office for a year. Clift succeeds Morris Oppenheim, who recently had trouble with the faculty on account of his cutting editorial comment. Clift has been a member of the staff since his freshman year, and is an associate on the Sequoia staff, a member of the 1907 "Quad" board, and has contributed to several outside magazines. He registers in the history department.

MEN AND THINGS OVER THE SEAS.

British Politics.

That the sweeping victory of the Liberals in the recent general election is going to produce no very sweeping change all of a hurry in British legislation is already made manifest. It is one thing to use every weapon that comes handy to trounce one's political opponents at election time, but it is quite another thing to reverse everything denounced when the responsibility of office comes to be assumed. "Ca canny" is now the motto to which Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman apparently pins his faith. His followers in the House of Commons have already given an overwhelming vote in favor of payment of members of Parliament; but the Prime Minister, while expressing approval of the principle, declares that no money is available, and thus this question is adroitly shelved. Then again the fiercely denounced "slavery" of Chinese coolies in South Africa is now virtually admitted on the ministerial benches to be not nearly so bad as it was painted during election time; in any case it will be allowed to continue until, a year or so hence, responsible government can be introduced in the Transvaal and the colony be left to decide the question for itself.

Radicalism Goes Slow.

When the present government was in opposition the Balfour government was vigorously assailed for its policy in India. Lord Kitchener should not have been allowed to claim, as commander-in-chief of the army, powers hitherto vested in the supreme civil authority; the presidency of Bengal should not have been divided into two provinces in face of strong native disapproval. Now almost the first acts of the Campbell-Bannerman Cabinet are to confirm Lord Kitchener's position and to approve the Bengal subdivision as absolutely essential to the proper administration of the country! It is really remarkable how the responsibility of office can alter the angle of view. Of course this all makes for national continuity of policy, which in itself is a good thing, and as regards foreign affairs a vital thing. There will be legislative reforms in England during the six or seven years' life of the Liberal ministry; but they will come cautiously and deliberately, not at the pace the perfervid reformers of election times promised them.

A Triumph for Temperance.

Absinthe drinking is a terrible curse of the French race, not only in certain districts and cities of France, but also in French Switzerland, in Belgium and in the French colonies. Indeed wherever the Frenchman goes he takes with him the liquor that is both a deadly drug as well as an alcoholic stimulant. In France the evils of absinthe drinking are well recognized, and for some years past there has been an almost impassioned campaign in the press, by medical men, and on the part of philanthropic societies to stop the manufacture and the sale of absinthe. Belgium, however, is the first country especially affected by the scourge to take legislative action. A new law has just been passed by the Belgian Parliament absolutely prohibiting the making, the importing, or the selling of absinthe, the penalty being a fine ranging from $5 to $100, together with imprisonment of from one week to six months. Any absinthe found in the country will be confiscated. This is a tremendous triumph for the cause of temperance, also for the rational method of solving the drink problem by first of all eliminating its grossest factors.

Absinthe in Switzerland.

Switzerland is following in the wake of Belgium. There also a regular crusade has been started against absinthe. Monster petitions are being signed urging the government to suppress the absinthe distilleries, and make the sale of the liquor an unlawful act. Most of the absinthe sold in Switzerland is the cheapest and vilest stuff, the better qualities being exported to France and Belgium. The concoction makes those who drink it for the time being quite irresponsible, and during last year a whole series of diabolical murders and attempts at murder, maiming of cattle, and deliberate incendiarism in French Switzerland were traced to individuals who proved to be confirmed absinthe drinkers. Hence the present public agitation. If Switzerland wipes out the manufacture of absinthe as Belgium has done, and this regardless of the fact that the Canton of Neuchatel depends mainly for its revenue on the absinthe distilleries, then it is reasonably certain that the wave of popular opinion in France will soon sweep away the trade in that country as well.

The Motor Omnibus in London.

The old horse-drawn omnibus in London is doomed; within three years motor omnibuses will exclusively be used. The change has come only after careful and prolonged experiment. At the close of 1905 the London General Omnibus Company, for example, had twenty-nine motor omnibuses of the finally approved type at work. For a year these had operated with complete success, traveling twice as fast as the old omnibuses, stopping and starting again in half the space of time, breaking down seldom or never at all, attracting the public because they served them well, and earning a big revenue because of their popularity. Therefore this year the number of motor omnibuss used by this company is to be increased to three hundred, and within three years the entire equipment will have changed to the new type of vehicle.

To all who know the streets of London the importance of this reform will be manifest. At the Bank of England, for example, at any hour of the day there may be fifty or more omnibuses in sight. Now the motor vehicle, by dispensing with horses, takes up just one-half the space. Here there is at once an immense relief to the traffic congestion. Then as the motors travel so much quicker than horses, and stoppages involve far shorter delays, the present difficulties will be once again pretty nearly cut in half.

The company above referred to is only one of several others. In all there are already 307 motor omnibuses on the streets of London. But there are still 3471 horse omnibuses to be replaced by motors, and it is estimated that this year over $5,000,000 will be spent toward making the transformation.

Hungary for Her Own Hand.

But if Austria is a weak limb to the triple alliance, the other limb of the dual monarchy is weaker still. The Hungarians are fighting the German element within the confines of Hungary and Austria with bitterest animosity, and this animosity extends to the German race as a whole. Francis Kossuth has declared on behalf of the Hungarian national party: "We regard the triple alliance as the greatest obstacle that stands in the way of the full realization of our political claims and legitimate aspirations." Such plain-speaking falls little short of frank treason, but the Magyars have long since thrown all nice considerations of loyalty to the four winds of heaven. As Kossuth clearly indicates, they are determined not to allow their national issue to be obscured by any other issues; so a European war at the present time might see them in the field to assert Hungarian independence, but it would be very unlikely to see them, triple alliance or no triple alliance, streaming forth to join the Germany battalions. So with Austria timidly chafing under the bond, and Hungary openly resenting it, the dual monarchy can no more be counted an effective member of the alliance than Italy. Germany stands alone at the present time, and, if the triple alliance has made for peace in the past by reason of its strength, today it may still continue to avert the calamity of war because of its very weakness.

Drunkenness Cure

Give Orrine and Destroy All Desire for Drink.
Sold Under Guarantee

The medical profession has long since recognized the fallacy of attempting to cure a drinking man of his intemperate habits by moral suasion. Drunkenness is a disease and no disease is more common and so seldom recognized. A victim of the drink habit can no more resist liquor than a man with ague can resist shivering.

The terrible craving for liquor is a symptom of disease, and to overcome it the disease itself should be treated in a scientific way. When one has used whisky, beer or other stimulants for a long time, the nerve cells have become accustomed to the effects of the stimulants and demand liquor in order to perform their duties. If the nerve cells are properly treated, the craving for liquor will be destroyed.

This is far too practical an age for "faith-cure" fallacies. It will not now be contended by many sane persons that organic disease can be cure by mental processes.

In the last few years, a scientific treatment called Orrine has made many remarkable cures of alcoholism or inebriety, or, to use the worst term, drunkenness. So uniformly successful has Orrine been that it is sold under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure the habit. What better evidence than this can be offered as to its power to destroy all craving for strong drink?

Orrine is prepared [illegible] a powder, perfectly [illegible] which can be given [illegible] drink. Chas. Schwab Advises Buying Mines in Nevada

From Los Angeles Examiner, March 4.

A straight tip from Chas. M. Schwab: "Buy Nevada gold mines."

Where?

"Oh, out on the desert up there," replied Mr. Schwab when the question was put to him last night as he rolled into Los Angeles in his private car the Loretta.

Mr. Schwab is returning East after investing several millions of dollars in Nevada mines, having bought the Shoshone among other properties.

Important Discovery at Tonopah

From the Denver Mining Record.

TONOPAH, Nev., March 7.—Rich ore has been encountered in the West Tonopah mine. Already stringers of ore have been found, and one of these on the 400-foot level shows up very strong and is from two to two-and-a-half feet wide. Values were obtained all the way down the shaft, but they increased with depth.

A few days ago a strong flow of gas was encountered in the shaft. The flow of gas has always been encountered in the big mines of Tonopah just previous to making a good strike. One of the officers of the company said that the formation is exactly like that in the bigger mines, and it shows that reaching the ledge is only a matter of attaining sufficient depth.

Several prominent men of the Tonopah district said that should good ore be found in the West Tonopah it will improve the whole flat, and one of them said this would make Tonopah the biggest mining camp in the world. Ore in the West Tonopah would indicate that the rich mineral zone of Tonopah extends a mile farther west than was at first anticipated.

Many of the crimes were committed against the mining and railroad companies, their superintendents or foremen. In the early '70's it became evident that these acts were the work of an organized band working in a more or less systematic manner, until by 1873, a regular reign of terror existed through the entire mining region, from Pottsville to Carbondale. The skull and crossbones or coffin warnings became more feared than the same signs ever were under the lawless rule of the Kuklux or White Caps. Such warnings were not to be taken lightly, and many men on receiving them would give up good positions and hurriedly move from the country.

The situation became so bad late in 1873 that Franklin B. Gowan, president of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad and mining companies, called to his aid Allan Pinkerton, chief of the detective bureau that he had founded, told him to take such steps as were necessary to break up the criminal order, placed at his command $25,000 for that purpose, and told him to draw on the company for more when that money was exhausted.

M'PARLAN SELECTED FOR TASK.

From a partial investigation into the situation Mr. Pinkerton decided that the only way in which the order could be broken up was from the inside, and for that purpose, to do the work almost unaided, Mr. Pinkerton selected James McParlan, a young Irishman connected with the Chicago branch of the detective agency.

Changing his name to James McKenna, the young detective went to the Schuylkill district of the mining region in December, 1873. He pretended to be searching for work in the mines, but soon let certain men whom he suspected of being connected with the Mollies understand that he cared less for work than other things. To them he confided that he was in reality engaged in "shoving the queer" or passing counterfeit money, and that what little work he did was merely a blind to cover up his other acts. This answered several purposes to his advantage. It convinced the men with whom he wished to become associated of his criminal tendencies, it gave an excuse in their mind for his working little, gave him an opportunity to travel around the mining region freely, and prevented arousing suspicion in the criminals' minds at least, because he always had plenty of money.

He pretended that in Buffalo he had belonged to the secret society under the cloak of which he became convinced the Mollies committed their crimes. He also let a few of the leading spirits know that he left Buffalo because he had killed a man in an elevator and the officials of that city were looking for him.

To prevent the possibility of the officials getting track of him, as might be the case should he send to Buffalo for a card transferring him to another lodge, he suggested that it would be better for him to be initiated into the order again. One of the first Mollies with whom he became associated was Michael or "Muff" Lawler, one of the leaders in the order, and through whose influence McKenna succeeded in being initiated.

By that time the Mollies had become convinced that McKenna was a man after their own hearts. He was a rollicking, carousing young Irishman, ever ready for a fight or a dance, a flirtation or a spree. He soon became one of the leaders in the order, and was elected secretary of the Shenandoah division, a position which helped him greatly in his detective work, as it necessitated his traveling to all parts of the district and becoming acquainted with many of the men belonging to the order.

Before he began his work he was convinced that it was the Mollies who were responsible for a large share of the crimes that had caused such a reign of terror. Soon after he became a member his suspicions were confirmed. But he also soon discovered that the men connected with the order were so firmly intrenched that the work of breaking them up would be more difficult than he had surmised.

LAW OFFICERS IN SOCIETY.

Many of the Mollies were miners, but among them were many saloon keepers, and even prominent men in the section, against whom no suspicion had ever been turned. When he learned that within the lodge were many constables, members of village councils, even burgesses, the Mayors of Pennsylvania village, a Sheriff or two, several jury commissioners, who had the selection of men to serve on trial juries, and even that a Mollie was nominated, and came near being elected a county judge, it was easy to understand why it had been impossible to secure convictions for the crimes for which arrests had been made before that time.

He also soon learned that the organized manner in which these crimes were committed surpassed his expectations. If a member of the order had a grievance against some man, he would not murder or assault the man in person. Instead he would present the matter to his lodge at a meeting, where it would be regularly considered, and in a manner the offending person would be secretly tried, convicted and sentenced without his being aware that anything was the matter.

Then, if the lodge should decide that the man should be murdered, assaulted, his horse or cow killed or maimed, his house or barn burned, or some other atrocious punishment meted out to him, the lodge reaching such decision usually would not select one of its own members to carry out the sentence.

CALLED ON NEIGHBORING LODGE.

Instead requisition would be made on some lodge of the order in a neighboring city or town to come to the place, where there was less danger of identification than would be the case should one of the local men perform the deed, to carry out the sentence.

Thus, when Policeman John F. Yost, of Tamaqua, who had come under the Mollies' ban, was shot and killed in 1875, two Mollies from the small town "across the ridge" were assigned to do the work.

A few of the murders that aroused the most interest were those of George Major, burgess of Mahanoy City, murdered in 1874; T. W. Langdon, John R. Jones, George K. Smith and Morgan Powell, all mining superintendents or foremen; Alexander Rae, who was killed in 1866, and whose murderers were never brought to justice until 1876, when they were convicted through the work of McKenna; and Gomer James, a young miner, who by many people was suspected of being a Mollie.

The openness with which they discussed their work among themselves and the pride that they took in performing crimes was well shown in the murder of Gomer James.

KILLED BROTHER OF MOLLIE.

He was murdered because he had killed the brother of a prominent Mollie in a quarrel. He was regularly tried and was acquitted on the ground that he killed the man in self-defense. The Mollies, however, overruled the decision of the regular court, and passed on him the death sentence, which was carried out at a miners' picnic.

A dispute arose as to whether Thomas Hurley or another prominent Mollie had shot James, and to determine to whom belonged the honor, the matter was referred to McKenna, who by that time had become one of the leaders in the order. After hearing the evidence he decided that Hurley was entitled to the credit for the murder, a decision that brought much pleasure to Hurley and discomfiture to the man against whom the decision was made.

Hurley was one of the few murderers of the order against whom McKenna secured strong testimony who escaped punishment. When the arrests began as a result of McKenna's work, Hurley fled to Colorado, where he remained in hiding until his death a few years ago. It is a strange coincidence that when McKenna sought retirement to escape the vengeance of the Mollies who wanted to kill him after they learned his real character, he also went to Colorado, where he remained in seclusion for many years.

HELPED IN PLOTTING MURDERS.

McKenna soon began to help the Mollies plot their murders or other crimes, and he was supposed by them to be one of their most bloodthirsty members, while to the general public of the section he was considered to be one of the most worthless drunken scallawags in the mining district. Whenever he learned of a murder plot, particularly when he had a hand in the plotting, he usually succeeded in getting warning through the detective agency with which he kept in close touch, so that the crime was frustrated.

Although he knew that the murder of Policeman Yost was planned, and he once prevenetd it, he was unable later to prevent the consummation of the crime.

At one time McKenna, with two other members of his lodge, was delegated to go "over the mountain" to kill a man with whom none of the three was acquainted, their only knowledge of their intended victim being that he had been condemned by the Mollies of the town in which the man lived.

Before they reached the place McKenna succeeded in getting his accomplices into several saloons, where he plied them with liquor until they became too badly intoxicated to help perform their task. When they returned home it was the other two instead of McKenna, who were blamed by their companions because of the failure of the crime.

McKenna's ability to drink an enormous amount of liquor without becoming intoxicated stood him in good stead. Nevertheless, he undermined his health by the bad whisky that he drank while engaged in this work, so that when the writer met an acquaintance of the detective in the West a few years ago, he was told that McParlan still suffered from the effects of the whiskey that he drank as a Molly Maguire.

The reckless daring of McKenna was probably best shown in connection with the labor riot at West Shenandoah on June 3, 1875. Labor troubles and strikes existed throughout the mining regions that year, the Mollies taking a prominent part in the riots. On the day in question twenty-four Pinkerton men, armed with repeating rifles, were sent to quell a mob of about 500 men, who were marching over the mountain, bent on burning the West Shenandoah coal breaker. When the mob was stopped by the threatening rifles of the Pinkertons, in te forefront, urging his comrades to kill the officers was McKenna, wildly flourishing his thick "shillalah," evidently the ringleader. The only one of the officers who knew that he was not the wild rioter that he appeared was Robert J. Linden, the captain of the Pinkertons, who signalled to McKenna to get out of the way.

TOO KCHANCE WITH DEATH.

McKenna refused to obey the signal, but increased his attempt to have the rioters attack the officers. He later said that he never expected to come out of the fray alive, but he knew that the Mollies would suspect and kill him if he had shown the "white feather" then. Besides, he thought he had his work near enough completed, with evidence enough in the hands of the detective agency, to insure the conviction of the leading Mollies, even if he should be killed.

When he left the witness stand a year later, nine members of the company of Pinkertons told him: "I supposed that day at Shenandoah that you were the worst rioter of the lot, and I had you covered, intending to kill you if the order to fire had been given."

"I knew it," coolly replied the detective: "I could see rifles all along the line aimed at me."

But the mob broke before the order to fire had been given.

Late in 1875 the Mollies became convinced that some member of the lodge was giving information to the officials, for arrests began to be made in a manner that made it evident that the officials had accurate information. It was stated that if the traitor could be found he would be killed at once, one of those who most loudly advocated such a course being McKenna. Punishment was meted out to several men who were suspected of being the traitor, but still the arrests continued.

UNDER SUSPICION AT LAST.

It was not for nearly a year that suspicion began to be cast at McKenna, and then his friends, who were among the leaders of the order, several of whom he afterward sent to the gallows, would not listen to such accusations. Such suspicion had existed for some time before it reached McKenna, so that he could take notice of it. He then loudly expressed his desire to be brought face to face with any person who dared insinuate that he was not a good Mollie, offering to whip or meet in any way that might be suggested any such traducer of his criminal reputation.

When these whispers of suspicion against him continued to be circulated, he went openly to his lodge and demanded an official investigation, that he might be able to prove the falsity of the charges against him. His bluff was not called although several members of the order still believed that he was the informer, and secretly sought to kill him after they failed to interest the lodge in their suspicions. Several times he narrowly escaped death at the hands of these suspicious persons, who laid many plots to kill him.

WENT ON WITNESS STAND.

When he undertook the work it was with the understanding that he was not to be asked to go on the witness stand, and if possible the fact that he was associated with the work was never to be known except to the few men in the secret. He succeeded in various ways in procuring evidence of the most conclusive nature to prove a large number of men guilty and placing that evidence in the hands of the officials without figuring directly in the case.

When the trials of the arrested Mollies began, however, he was so afraid that the evidence in the manner in which it existed would not be sufficient to secure conviction, that at his own request he was placed on the stand as a witness in a large number of murder trials in several counties, and by his evidence succeeded in sending twelve of the leading Mollies to the gallows, and many others to prison for long terms, and thereby broke up the worst gang ever organized for crime in America, unless, as he now says, the record of criminals of the Western Miners' Federation shall be shown to be worse than that of the Mollie Maguires.

BULGER MAKES GRAVE CHARGES.

PACIFIC COAST STEAMSHIP RACING MUST BE STOPPED.

Inspector Alleges That Engineer Dunham Endangered Lives—Puts a Stick in the Valve En Route to Portland—Mississippi "Negro Custom" Will Not Be Revived.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 14.—Having been informed that racing was permitted on certain lines of Coast steamships on the northern run, United States Local Inspectors O. F. Bolles and John K. Bulger made an investigation, which resulted in a complaint being filed yesterday morning with United States Dist.-Atty. Robert T. Devlin against Azariah Dunham, chief engineer of the steamship Roanoke. He is accused of having wedged and loaded the safety valve on a recent trip between this city and Portland, Or.

The Call says the inspectors were very indignant when they learned that the safety valve had been tampered with, especially on a passenger vessel. Inspector Bulger said that had the boiler of the Roanoke exploded and a great loss of life ensued, the inspectors would have been denounced by the press and the public generally for having allowed "rotten" boilers to be used, when, in fact, there was nothing the matter with the boilers. The inspector continued:

"In defense of passengers and of our office, I am going to put a stop to this boat racing. The man who endangers the lives of innocent and unsuspecting passengers should go to the penitentiary, and should Dunham be guilty, I will do all that I can to send him there as a warning to others. The reported old-time Mississippi River custom of tying a negro on the safety valve will not be revived on this Coast if the United States local inspectors can help it."

Accompanying the communication of the inspectors to Mr. Devlin were two affidavits. The first is by Samuel McIntosh, water tender on the Roanoke, who deposes that the steamship left San Francisco on February 16 of this year, went to Portland, Or., and, returning, arrived at Eureka on March 3. "During all of that time while at sea," continues Mr. McIntosh in his affidavit, "the safety valves of said steamer were shored and wedged down by orders of Chief Engineer Dunham."

Engineer Dunham also filed an affidavit, it being to this effect:

"The safety valves were not shored down by my orders, but there was a stick put in to take up the side motion of the weight on the valve when the ship was rolling heavily at sea, and this stick, while it steadied the weight, would not prevent the valve lifting at any pressure exceeding eighty pounds, at which it was set. I also testify that there are two spring loaded safety valves on the main steam drums and steam to be carried was seventy-five pounds pressure by my orders, and the steam pressure was held below eighty pounds. These spring valves on the same drum are of sufficient size to comply with the United States law independent of those on the main boilers, of which complaint is made."

United States District Attorney Devlin has taken the matter under advisement.

HISTORY SOURCES.

Many-Sided Genius.

THE JOURNAL OF LATROBE. By Benjamin Henry Latrobe, architect of the Capitol at Washington. With an introduction by J. H. B. Latrobe. D. Appleton Co., New York.

In these latter days of anniversary fairs we have all of us been surfeited with historical source books—most of them, while important, excessively boresome to the lay reader. Benjamin H. Latrobe's journal is an exception to the rule—a record delightful in its study of historic personages, remarkable in its acuteness and originality of thought. Had Latrobe lived in this century, his fondness for natural history, in which his observations are noteworthy for his time, might have made of him a famous specialist in biology; although his sociologic viewpoint is frequently quite as independent and in advance of his time as that on natural science; and his notes on some of the important men of the day are illuminating. The portrait of Latrobe, used as frontispiece, shows a long, oval face of great intellecutality and fineness.

The book opens June 10, 1796, at Col Skipwith's Cumberland county, Virginia, whence Latrobe went to Mr. Richard Randolph's and on to Petersburg. Even at that early age some distinguishing southern propensities were obviously already in evidence, as the traveler remarks on the number of military titles, especially those of major and colonel, that he finds about him.

A further horseback journey takes him to Alexandria, thence to Suffolk. He remarks on the motonous vulgarity of tavern carousing observed by the way—from which his own good taste and sobriety keeps him apart. "The youngsters at the tables are often loud talkers, and their subjects are (Oh, tempora, Oh, mores!) the last drunken bout and the girls. This is unpleasant, but it is best to be silent in such cases, and that is an effectual resource."

Latrobe is engaged to do some surveying, fixing the boundaries of property belonging to the Dismal Swamp Land Company. In the midst of this work he visits Mount Vernon to present to the President a letter of introduction that he has from Washington's nephew, Bushrod, his particular friend. He gives an interesting description of the place and inhabitants, including Miss Custis and young La Fayette, whom the President, he says, treats "more as his child than as a guest." Of the President himself, he says:

"Washington has something uncommonly majestic and commanding in his walk, his address, his figure, and his countenance. His face is characterized, however, more by intense and powerful thought than by quick and fiery conception. There is a mildness about its expression, and an air of reserve in his manner lowers its tone still more. He is 64, but appears some years younger, and has sufficient apparent vigor to last many years yet. He was frequently entirely silent for many minutes, during which time an awkwardness seemed to prevail in every one present. His answers were often short and sometimes approached to moroseness. He did not at any time speak with very remarkable fluency; perhaps the extreme correctness of his language, which seemed almost studied, prevented that effect. He appeared to enjoy a humorous observation, and made several himself. He laughed heartily several times in a very good-humored manner. On the morning of my departure he treated me as if I had lived years in his house, with ease and attention, but in general I thought there was a slight air of moroseness about him, as if something had vexed him."

For Washington, had Horace lived at the present age, he would have written his celebrated ode; it is impossible to have read it and not recollect in the presence of this great man the "virum justum propositique tenacem," etc.

A letter of Latrobe's to Ferdinand Fairfax on the subject of the American system of education, shows how much he was in advance of the general standard of his time on this, as on many other subjects. Among other things, his remarks on the study of the classics are remarkable for their progressiveness. He says:

"Education has been the subject of innumerable treatises. They have all, even those which are founded in the boldest and most original trains of thinking, received part of their character from the habits acquired by their authors from the mode which was fashionable in their own education. There is a fashion even of sentiment, and wherever there is a fashion there is bigotry. I wish we could get rid of fashions in thinking. I think this age less addicted to them than the preceding have been. At all events, more fashions are suffered to live together as contemporaries than formerly, and we have a greater choice of them. They therefore improve by emulation. The old ones, which were seldom changed, and the absurdity of which was not so easily discovered for want of contrast, seldom ceased to be worn until they would no longer hang together.

"While religion and law were the only paths of learning which led to riches and honor, and while priests occupied both professions, it was, exclusively of other circumstances which made the rest of barbarous Europe dependent upon the remnant of Roman civilization in Italy, good policy in the priests to entrench themselves in the Latin and Greek languages. How effectually the Latin religion and the Latin law of the centuries between the sixth and the fifteenth held Europe in the most abject subjection to ecclesiastical and political tyrants everybody knows. A mathematician was then a heretic, and a natural philosopher a wizard.

"After the reformers had driven the priests from many of their strongholds, and Lord Bacon had pointed out, by the way of experiment, the true road to science, or, which is synonymous, to truth, the habit of mankind, though their knowledge was increased, still continued to subsist. Accustomed to see pretended knowledge only in Greek and Latin dress, they could not bear to behold truth in the plain garb of a vernacular idiom, but tricked out the simple, chaste maiden in the foppery of the harlot.

"Learning, in fact, within the remembrance of every one who is above 30, was another word for Greek and Latin. Oxford, and even Cambridge, are yet immense hospitals, in which lingers, decrepit and mortally wounded, what remains of Greek and Latin ignorance in England." . . .

"As America took the lead in the practice of improved political theory in the organization of a community, I sincerely wish that she may set the example of a rational education of her citizens."

Latrobe admits advantages in a critical knowledge of Latin and Greek, and enumerates these at some length; but he ranks the value of their study far below that of many other subjects. "My objection," he says, "therefore goes not to teaching Greek and Latin, but to the preference given to the Greek and Latin instruction. I should object even to its being upon a level with moral philosophy, mathematics, physics or modern languages." And again: "I think of a boy 10 or 12 years old I could much sooner make a perfect botanist than a good Greek scholar; and I am sure the botanist would be happier, healthier and less agitated by false notions of glory and honor than the expositor of Homer; nor do I believe his mind would have acquired less activity and vigor."

One chapter of the book is devoted to Latrobe's observations on some forms of animal life native to Virginia, especially to the "dirt-daubers" and other wasps and hornets. His studies of these are very minute and careful; so much so that they might very well have been written at the present time; and he accompanies his work with a fine drawing of the dirt-daubers' cells, the young larvae and the full-grown wasp. He also interestingly describes a battle of mocking birds with a snake which was attempting to rob the nest.

The story of the building of the national Capitol occupies about forty pages of the book and will naturally interest many. This brings history down to the year 1817, and contains letters to Washington, to Jefferson and to Aaron Burr as Vice-President. In 1817 Latrobe resigned his position as architect of the Capitol and went further South. A study of New Orleans and its people takes up a good part of the remainder of the book, and some general criticism the rest. Defenders of the South against the Mrs. Stowe's representations of the evils of slavery would scarcely like Latrobe's observations on the institution, although, to be sure, his remarks apply only to New Orleans and the Creole slave-owners there. Yet the fact that the treatment he describes was permitted has its significance. Latrobe says:

"The general opinion of the masters and mistresses of the slaves in this city and neighborhood is that the Americans treat and feed and clothe their calves well, but that the Creoles are, in all these respects, comparatively cruel to these unfortunate people. In going into Davis's ballroom and looking around the brilliant circle of ladies, it is impossible to imagine that any one of the fair, mild, and somewhat languid faces could express any feeling but of kindness and humanity. And yet several, I had almost said many, of these soft beauties had themselves handled the cowskin with a sort of savage pleasure, and those soft eyes had looked on the tortures of their slaves, inflicted by their orders, with satisfaction, while they had coolly prescribed the dose of infliction, the measure of which should stop short of the life of their property.

"Mme. Tremoulet—why should I conceal the name of such a termagant, is one of these notorious for their cruelty. She is a small, mild-faced creature, who weeps over the absence of her daughter, now with her husband in France. She has several servants; one a mulatto woman, by far the best house servant of her sex that I know of, famous also as a seamstress and for her good temper, so much so that she can at any time be sold for $2000, and Tremoulet actually asks $3000. Independently of her duty in a large boarding house, in waiting, and making beds, she is expected to make two shirts a day (and night) for the benefit of her mistress's private purse. In six weeks I have never seen in her conduct the smallest fault; she is modest, obliging, and incredibly active. A few days ago she failed, because it was impossible, to make the bed of a stranger at the hour prescribed. In consequence of this fault, Mme. Tremoulet had her stripped quite naked, tied to a bedpost, and she herself, in the presence of her daughter, Mrs. Turpin, the mother of three beautiful children, whipped her with a cowskin until she bled. Mrs. Turpin then observed: 'Maman, vous etes trop bonne; pourquoi prenez vous la peine de la fouetter vous-meme, appellez donc Guillaume.' William was called, and made to whip her till she fainted. This scene made a noise in the house, and the blood betrayed it. Poor Sophy is ill and constantly crying. I shall leave the house as soon as convenient to me.

Madame —— is another of these hell-cats. Her husband is a very amiable man, president of the Bank of Louisiana, whom she had driven to seek a divorce, but the matter had been compromised lately. She did actually whip a negress to death, and treated another so cruelly that she died a short time afterwards. Mr. ——, a merchant of this place, stated the facts to the grand jury, but it was hushed up from respect to the lady's husband.

"My landlady, a sensible Irish woman, saw through the fence preparations making by Mme. C—— to punish several of her negroes. A ladder was laid down and a naked man tied upon it. She was so shocked that she left her house for several hours, and did not return until she supposed the execution was over. The first wife of —— was a beast of the same kind. A gentleman, whom I will not name, saw her stand by, some years ago, while a naked woman was tied on a ladder by her orders, to undergo the punishment of the whip. He immediately turned about and departed."

Latrobe adds: "At the ball on Washington's Birthday, the 22nd, the idea of these things destroyed all the pleasure I should otherwise have felt in seeing the brilliant assemblage of as many beautiful faces and forms as I ever saw collected in one room. All pale, languid and mild. I fancied I saw a cowskin in every pretty hand, gracefully waved in the dance; and admired the comparative awkwardness of look and motion of my countrywomen, whose arms had never been rendered pliant by the exercise of the whip upon the bound and screaming slaves. Whatever, therefore, this community may lose in taste and elegance and exterior suavity, and acquire of serious and awkward bluntness, and commercial stiffness, may the change be as rapid as possible, if at the same time active humanity is introduced into the deplorable system of slavery, which I fear, must long, perhaps forever, prevail in this State."

The "journal" contains lengthy observations on the yellow fever at New Orleans, and on the mosquitoes there. Latrobe describes "four distinct species," of mosquitoes with difference in coloring and note. He has watched the process of their growth from the egg through the larval to the winged state, and describes the swarming of the larvae in the rainwater casks, in wells and elsewhere in water of the city.

The volume closes with some observations on the surface conformation of the Americas, and suppositions as to their geologic history—crude suppositions but exceeding ingenious, and, for that date, amazingly original and scientifically advanced.

The value of the book is enhanced by a number of drawings by Latrobe—thirty-one in all—including a portrait of Edmund Randolph, one of Washington, two sketches of groups at Mount Vernon, "An attempt at the features of Patrick Henry," a caricature of "A Whig Reading a Tory Paper," etc.

FICTION.

Not Wholesome.

THE LAKE. By George Moore. D. Appleton & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

One has only to read a half-dozen of the most recent novels to perceive how many different styles are now represented in fiction, where a decade or two ago, only a few were current. "The Truth About Tolna," dramatic in method, containing much of conversation and little of description, clever, light yet of polished literary workmanship, fairly probable yet depending much on rapid action and snarls of incident for its interest, stands at the one extreme, and a novel like George Moore's "The Lake," contemplative, closely analytic, abounding in detailed description, depending little on action and much on psychologic interest at the other end of the scale.

This last book is, indeed, amazingly analytic; it would be very tiresomely so, except that its analysis, minute as it is, always has some recognizable psychologic or artistic interest and makes the reader more at home in his surroundings, better acquainted with men and things in their everyday significance, until he comes to feel almost as if he had been born in the Irish parish by the lake in which the scene is laid, and had lived there all his life. Here is a sample of the sort of musing description, the picture of things as seen through the mood of the characters, of which the book is entirely made up. Father Oliver, a young priest walks by the lake:

"This lake was beautiful, but he was tired of its low gray shores; he was tired of those mountains, melancholy as Irish melodies and as beautiful. He felt suddenly that he didn't want to see a lake or a mountain for two months at least, and that his longing for a change was legitimate and most natural. It pleased him to remember that everyone likes to get out of his native country for a while. But he had never been out of sight of this lake except for the years he had spent at Maynooth. When he left Maynooth he had pleaded that he might be sent to live among the mountains by Kilronan Abbey, at the north end of the lake—when Father Conway died, he had been moved round to the western shore. Every day of his life he walked by the lake; there was nowhere else to walk, unless up and down the lawn under the sycamores, imitating Father Peter, who used to walk there, reading his breviary, stopping from time to time to speak to a parishoner in the road below; he, too, used to read his breviary under the sycamores; but for one reason or another, he walked there no longer, and now every afternoon found him standing at the end of this sandy pit, looking across the lake toward Tinnick, where he was born and where his sister lived.

"He couldn't see the walls of the convent today, there was too much mist about—and he liked to see them; for whenever he saw them he began to think of his sister Eliza, and he liked to think of her—she was his favorite sister. They were nearly the same age, and had played together; and his eyes dwelt in imagination on the dark corner under the stairs where they used to play"—and so on and so on. At first one takes this for introductory description, expecting to come to the story soon; one goes on and on, and finds only the same thing; then one perceives that the entire book is written in this manner. The style wearies—then it interests; it is seen to be entirely suited to the subject—the country, quiet life of this priest, the hero, occupied with dreams and reveries and introspective, curious analyses of men and things. So one reads on to the end, recognizing that the book is an excellent piece of work from the purely artistic viewpoint.

The morals of the story are more questionable. The plot is simple. The young priest hears some gossip about the pretty young school mistress of the parish, goes to her and learns that the gossip is true and that she is about to go quietly away in order not to disgrace the parish. He is so strongly affected by the facts that he preaches a stern sermon on chastity, the following Sunday, and the result of this is that the girl leaves the place at once for London. He, however, does not know where she has gone, and is filled with fear of what may have happened to her through his condemnation until he has a letter from a London priest, inquiring regarding the girl whom he is about to appoint to a position as organist. She has told him her story quite truthfully, and he merely writes to ask whether it is true. He condemns the country priest's action, as its, he says, so fierce denunciation would have driven the girl to suicide had she not been of unusually strong mind.

Now Father Oliver, the country priest, is deeply affected by the letter, and not only replies to his London brother, confirming the girl's story, but after a time writes to the girl herself. Indeed, his conscience so troubles him about her that he continues to write her advice from time to time—and the remainder of the book consists mainly of letters between the two, with a few between the two priests. The girl is frank, cheerful, without scruples for the past, loves her child and looks forward with confidence to a pleasant future, expecting good fortune. It comes to her in shape of a literary man, a widower, engaged on a book of agnostic historic criticism of Christianity, to whom she becomes amanuensis. She comes to live in his house, to be his young daughter's most intimate friend and companion, to travel with the two on their explorations for material for this book. Father Oliver is worried about this anti-Christian influence to which she is subjected, and writes many expostulatory letters concerning it and concerning events of the travels. Finally the thought is suggested to him that she may be the mistress of the author, and the agony that this idea causes him reveals to him the fact that he loves the girl, has all along loved her, even when he denounced her. He finds himself out of sympathy with his life as a priest and makes up his mind to escape from it to the United States, going away in such manner that his clothes will be found on the shore of the lake and the inference be made that he is drowned in its waters.

The book, as was said above, in its psychological analysis and descriptions of nature—that is, from the literary viewpoint—is well done; it is impossible not to recognize this. Its ethical viewpoint is regrettable; the standard held up being the girl's to which Father Oliver is converted—a cheerful, unregretting disregard of all ordinary codes in sex affairs.

JUVENILE BOOKS.

Boys in Camp.

TWO YOUNG CRUSOES. By W. S. Phillips. Star Publishing Company, Chicago, Ill. (Price $1.)

"Do not seek herein for the things that make hearts burn with passion or go heavy as lead," says the author of "Two Young Crusoes," in his preface; "there is not keen analysis of men and motives in this volume—none of the polish that covers the thin veneer of civilization. It is a simple tale of the awkwardness and savagery of youth—of the sermon of nature—for this book breathes of God's own wilderness that is closer to the core of the heart of men than most of them know." It is, indeed, a healthy outdoor book, a story of the wild people, feathered and furred, as seen by two boys, "Freckles" and "Jaybird." It contains much of the woodcraft for which boys are seeking in these days of Thompson Seton, and is, besides, a story that they will enjoy.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

California Mineralogy.

THE STRUCTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL MATERIALS OF CALIFORNIA. Issued by the California State Mining Bureau, Ferry Bldg., San Francisco, under the direction of Lewis E. Aubury, State Mineralogist.

This new bulletin of nearly 400 pages is of the utmost importance to the State. "It was considered advisable," says Mr. Aubury, in his letter of transmittal to the Governor, "to issue the bulletin at this time, owing to the rapid increase of building operations in California during the past few years. The great demand for building stone, marble, clay products, etc., together with the phenomenal strides made in the various industrial pursuits, which are to a very great extent dependent upon the mineral industry of this State, has created a demand for an official bulletin wherein would be found a description not only of the developed, but also of the undeveloped, mineral resources of the State, of which this bulletin treats."

The book takes up the subject by minerals, and by the counties in which each mineral is found, with charts, maps, tables, lists of references to books and articles on phases of the subject, and many illustrations of quarries, works, machinery used in handling different material, buildings in the construction of which certain material has been used, etc. The treatment of each particular mineral is thorough and scientific, dealing with it from the point of view of the chemist, geologist and the business man interested in its uses and availability. An appendix gives a full list of mineral specimens in the museum of the State Mining Bureau, and a second appendix adds something on the history and aims of the bureau, its equipment, publications, etc. No more practical and valuable publication has recently appeared in this State.

PEOPLE AND THINGS LITERARY.

The Macmillan Company announce for issue this spring a new novel by John Luther Long, the author of "Madame Butterfly" and "Heimweh." Its title is "The Way of the Gods."

A special edition is to be issued of Owen Wister's novel, "Lady Baltimore," which The Macmillan Company announce for April. This large paper edition is limited to 100 copies for sale, at $5 net per copy.

Dr. Van Dyke's "Story of the Other Wise Man" may justly claim to be the most popular little classic ever written. It was first published in 1895, yet announcement comes from the Harpers that they are printing an edition of 20,000 copies, and this, it is said, is no uncommon order. A number of bindings are carried in regular stock. It is worthy of comment that the Easter demand is very nearly as great as at Christmas, although the story is especially appropriate to the latter season.

Although Anthony Hope's "Rupert of Hentzau" is now in its eight year, there is still a good demand for it, and Messrs. Henry Holt & Co. have just had to print it for the twenty-second time, and that, too, despite the fact that a cheaper unillustrated authorized edition of 50,000 copies was put on the market last year. Mr. Gibson's illustrations (which are decidedly dramatic and out of the usual line of his work) for the regular edition of "Rupert of Hentzau" and for the famous "Prisoner of Zenda," to which it is a sequel, probably have something to do with the vogue of these books.

The recent exhibition in New York of Albert Sterner's drawings, including the originals for "The Marriage of William Ashe," serves to call to mind some of the obstacles that may confront an artist. When Mr. Sterner undertook the commission to illustrate Mrs. Ward's novel, he was living in Munich, where he found great difficulty in securing good English models. A long and tiresome search revealed one man who consented to pose for a short time. Mr. Sterner thus obtained one drawing of "William Ashe," and then had a life-size plaster bust of the man made, which he used as model for the remainder of the series. Then rows upon rows of stout and rosy German maidens were passed in review before the artist in the vain hope of discovering a suitable original for the sprightly "Lady Kitty;" but at last Mr. Sterner was forced to betake himself to London to find the slender girl with the oval face and dark eyes now familiar to us as "Lady Kitty." For a time Mr. Sterner occupied Mrs. Ward's beautiful country house, in daily consultation with the author, discussing, altering and amending; but his endeavor is more than justified by the result, for his illustrations for the novel really illustrate a quality in pictorial work that is, unfortunately, very rare.

Jerome K. Jerome's attack on American humor has brought out some interesting expressions of opinion. Brander Matthews, as voiced in a recent interview in the New York Herald, declares that American humor is not only as keen as it ever was, but that Mark Twain, George Ade and Peter Dunne are the best humorists we ever had. It was customary twenty-five years ago for people to compare Mark Twain with John Phoenix and Josh Billings, and it is only of recent years, says Prof. Matthews, that he has come to be recognized not as a funny man, but as a real humorist, fit to be ranked with Rabelais, Cervantes, Swift and Moliere—men who have left a message for posterity. "People have also discovered that he is a great moralist," he continues, "and that his fun is invariably clean and wholesome, having its roots in the eternal verities; that his pictures of life are essentially veracious, and being truthful they are necessarily moral. I remember the only occasion when I had the good fortune to meet Robert Louis Stevenson. It was on a rainy day in a smoke-clouded London club, and we had a conversation there for two hours. Most of that time was spent in talking about Mark Twain, and discussing how great a book was "Huckleberry Finn." Stevenson said it was greater than any that had appeared for the ten years prior to its publication."

Among the important books on Little, Brown & Co.'s spring list may be found: "The Heart of the Railroad Problem, by Prof. Frank Parsons; "The Fight for Canada,"" by Maj. William Wood; "The Up-to-date Waitress," by Jeannette M. Hill; "Thunder and Lightning," by Camille Flammarion; "Practical Rowing, with Scull and Sweep," by Arthur W. Stevens; "The Economy of Happiness," by James MacKaye; "The Game of Bridge," by Fisher Ames; "The Book of Daniel and Modern Criticism," by Rev. Charles H. H. Wright, D.D.; and "Centralization and the Law," by Dean Melville M. Bigelow of the Boston University Law School, and others. The firm also announces a special limited issue of "The Triumphs," by Petrarch, translated by Henry Boyd, and printed at the University Press from Humanistic type, made especially for the publication, together with six plates from ancient Florentine engravings.

NEW MAGAZINES.

In the Technical World Magazine for April, Prof. William Franklin Watson of Furman University discusses human blood tests under the title "When Life or Death Hangs on a Blood Stain." Alton D. Adams, consulting hydraulic engineer, terms his article significantly "Niagara Falls Nearly Ruined." "Gun Cotton Used as a Fuel;" "Trolley Line That Hangs in the Air;" "Arizona's Petrified Forest," are titles of other especially interesting articles. Bion J. Arnold, past president American Institute of Electrical Engineers, writes on "Electrical Engineering."

The Century's series of papers by Camille Gronkowski on "Historic Palaces of Paris" will treat in the April issue of the interesting and beautiful Hotel de la Rochefoucauld-Doudeauville. As in former articles in this series, there will be illustrations from photographs made by special permission for the Century and now published for the first time.

The April Garden Magazine will be a special double planting number, and will contain two elaborate tables for sowing flower and vegetable seeds, telling at glance everything that the amateur needs to know in order to make a successful garden. Other articles carry out the general idea of planting the garden. One will show how a shrubbery garden may have flowers all the year. Another will tell about the flowers of the mountains which can be grown in lowland places. Abundance of flowers from annuals of all sorts will follow from reading the practical advice which is given in the various articles. As usual, the magazine will be adequately illustrated, a special feature being three pages of Suggestive Gardens, with short cut hints which will help others to follow out the ideas.

Realizing the fact that a monthly guide to magazineland, arranged simply and sensibly to meet the needs of the average busy reader, would fill a decided need, the Dial Company of Chicago has begun publication of a monthly periodical entitled "What's in the Magazines." This little publication provides a bird's-eye view of the magazines of the month, enabling one to find out in five minutes just what they contain and what the principal articles are about. It is a periodical that brings all the other periodicals into a nutshell; and as such must prove a great help to busy readers.

The Engineering Magazine for March presents the most significant recent contribution to the settlement of isthmian affairs, in John F. Wallace's article on "Plain Facts About the Panama Canal." He tells frankly the difficulties he found in attempting to carry out the work as chief engineer, and defines exactly how red-tape and politics will always prevent efficient or economical construction under direct government control. He points out the entire applicability and desirability of the contract system, and indicates just how he believes it should be employed. Mr. Magee concludes his widely-noticed interpretation of German industrial aims and ideals, and the publication is particularly timely in view of the menace of a tariff war between Germany and the United States. O. M. Becker, in a richly-illustrated paper, follows his review of "The Square Deal in Works Management;" there are also handsomely illustrated contributions on plaster mining and preparation near Paris, the Elizabeth eye-bar suspension bridge at Budapest, and the advance of electric railroading during the past quarter century. The concluding article in the number is a very interesting summary of the changes of one lifetime in the machine shop, by Egbert P. Watson; but beyond this the magazine carries its excellent department of Reviews of the Engineering Press of the world, and the Engineering Index to all current technical literature.

The leading article in the March World's Work is M. G. Cunniff's vivid and comprehensive explanation of "Texas and the Texans." It shows, with the aid of striking photographs, how our biggest commonwealth is marching on. Eugene P. Lyle's series of West Indian investigations is continued interestingly with the story of "Capt. Baker and Jamaica." "Q. P.'s" series of insurance articles, which have attracted such wide attention, deals in this number with "Life Insurance Corruption," epitomizing the causes of the scandals and the revelations of the Armstrong investigation. "The Growth of Fletcherism" by Isaac F. Marcosson explains how the science of right eating is being widely adopted and what it means. William G. Fitzgerald tells in "The German Army" how the Kaiser has the largest and most efficient fighting organization in the world. The career of Mr. Odell as business boss is dealt with at first hand in "Industrial Politics." "Col. Arden's Intrusion," by Freeman Harding, is the account of how one trust sandbagged another in the game of high finance. A particularly timely article is "Automobiles for Everybody," in which Harry B. Haines shows the comparison between the cost of keeping a motor car and the cost of maintaining horses. Bertha M. Smith describes "Growing Oranges in California," while Adele Marie Shaw tells of the Boston and Chicago Parental Schools.

THE HERO OF "HEIDELBERG."

RULER WHO INSPIRED PLAY HAS DECIDED TO REMARRY.

At the End of a Sporting Tour in India on Which He Is About to Set Forth, the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar Will Wed His Deceased Wife's Sister.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Feb. 20.—"Old Heidelberg" has just been produced at the Theater Antoine, in Paris, and according to all accounts, the German university play which made so great a success in the Fatherland and subsequently charmed audiences in the United States and Great Britain, is making a hit with French playgoers, too. It is a coincidence that the important young German ruler whose rather pathetic early years are said to have inspired the author of "Old Heidelberg" to write his piece is just attracting attention again, owing to his reported intention to remarry.

THE GRAND DUKE OF SAXE-WEIMAR.

The young ruler in question is the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar, whose first wife, the beautiful Caroline of Reuss, died, it may be remembered, just under a year ago. Her husband is by no means "consoled," but the position of a reigning monarch forbids him to remain single, especially when, as in the Grand Duke's case, he is the heir apparent to a still more illustrious throne, and so it is said that his Royal Highness has arranged to be married to his deceased wife's younger sister, Princess Hermine of Reuss, who is also uncommonly well favored.

First, however, the Grand Duke is going to India, where he intends to spend a couple of months in shooting big game; a voyage to the Orient having been strongly urged upon him by the court physicians. It is to be hoped that he will get some enjoyment out of the experience, for, up to the present time, his life has been an uncommonly gray one, even for a sovereign. Of his youth, in fact, the play "Old Heidelberg," furnishes a picture which is probably not exaggerated in the least. Educated in the strictest manner after the fashion in the small German courts, he lost his parents at an early age, and was practically brought up by his grandfather at a time when dullness reigned supreme at the court of Weimar. His childhood was a lonely one, and he has seldom known what it was to enjoy freedom or to associate with men of his own age. His marriage, it is true, was supposedly a love match, but again the Grand Duke's bad angel intervened, and his wife died when they had been married only a few months.

If wealth could console him, however, the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar should be comparatively happy, for he is the richest unmarried prince in the world. The important throne to which he may succeed is, of course, that of Holland, whose King he will be in case Queen Wilhelmina should have no children. His right so to do comes through his grandmother, Princess Sophia of Holland, who married the Grand Duke Charles Alexander of Saxe-Weimar in 1842. It is said, however, that no one hopes more sincerely than the young Grand Duke that the Queen of Holland may be blessed with a son, the duties of kingship appealing to him in not the slightest degree. Probably he thinks that he has had trouble enough already.

The Latest Style.

The Count de Impecune was in despair. The haughty American heiress would have none of him. "French Counts," she informed him cuttingly, "are no longer the smart thing in husbands. They are not wearing them this year."

In the midst of his despair the Count de Impecune conceived a brilliant idea. Disguising himself as Gaston Prunes he hired out to the proud beauty's father as a chauffeur. Within a fortnight the fair Hildegarde eloped with him, first settling on him the income of $1,000,000. A reconciliation with the family is expected.—[Puck.

pool, swarming with bacilli. In front of a shop in Paris is a sign, "English spoken—American understood." This sign is just as misleading as every other sign in Paris. If our English cannot be understood right here in England, what chance have we among strangers?

One of the blessed advantages of coming here to England is that every American, no matter how old he may be or how often he has assisted at the massacre of the mother tongue, may begin to get a correct line on the genuine English speech. A few Americans, say fifty or more in Boston and several in New York, are said to speak English in spots. Very often they fan, but sometimes they hit the ball. By patient endeavor they have mastered the sound of "a" as in "father," but they continue to call a clerk a clerk, instead of a "clark," and they never have gained the courage to say "leftenant." They wander on the suburbs of the English language, nibbling at the edges, as it were. Any one living west of Pittsburgh is still lost in the desert.

It is only when the Pilgrim comes right here to the fountain head of the Chancerian language that he can drink deep and revive his parched intellect. For three days I have been camping here at the headwaters of English, although this is my fourth visit to London and I have taken a thorough course at the music halls and conversed with some of the most prominent shopkeepers on or in the Strand, to say nothing of having chatted almost in a spirit of democratic equality with some of the most representative waiters, I still feel as if I were a little child playing by the seashore while the great ocean of British idioms lies undiscovered before me.

Yesterday, however, I had the rare and almost delirious pleasure of meeting an upper-class Englishman. He has family, social position, wealth, several capital letters trailing after his name (which is long enough without an appendix,) an ancestry, a glorious past and possibly a future. Usually an American has to wait in London eight or ten years before he meets an Englishman who is not trying to sell him dress shirts or something to put on his hair. In two short days—practicaly at one bound—I had realized the full ambition of my countrymen.

Before being presented to the heavy swell I was taken into the chamber of meditation by the American who was to accompany me on this flight of glory. He prepared me for the ceremony by whispering to me that the chap we were about to meet went everywhere and saw everybody; that he was a 'varsity man and had shot big game and had a place up country, and couldn't remember the names of all his clubs—had to hire a man by the year just to remember the names of his clubs.

May I confess that I was immensely flattered to know that I could meet this important person? When we are at long range we throw bricks at the aristocracy and landed gentry, but when we come close to them we tremble violently and are much pleased if they differentiate us from the furniture of the room.

Why not tell the truth for once? I was tickled and overheated with bliss to know that this social lion was quite willing to sit alongside of me and breathe the adjacent atmosphere.

Also I was perturbed and stage frightened because I knew that I spoke nothing but the American language, and that probably I used my nose instead of my vocal chords in giving expression to such thoughts as might escape from me. Furthermore, I was afraid that during our conversation I might accidentally lapse into slang, and I knew that in Great Britain slang is abhorred above every other earthly thing except goods of German manufacture. So I resolved to be on my guard and try to come as near to English speech as it is possible for any one to come after he has walked up and down State street for ten years.

My real and ulterior motive in welcoming this interview with a registered Englishman was to get, free of charge, an allopathic dose of twenty-four carat English. I wanted to bask in the bright light of an intellect that had no flickers in it and absorb some of the infallibility that is so prevalent in these parts.

We met. I steadied myself and said. "I'm glad to know you—that is, I am extremely pleased to have the honor of making your acquaintance."

He looked at me with a kindly light in his steel blue eyes, and after a short period of deliberation spoke as follows: "Thanks."

"The international developments of recent years have been such as should properly engender a feeling of the warmest brotherhood between all branches of the Anglo-Saxon race," I said. "I don't think that any fair-minded American has it in for Great Britain—that is, it seems to me that all former resentment growing out of early conflicts between the two countries has given way to a spirit of tolerant undertsanding. Do you not agree with me?"

He hesitated for a moment, as if not desiring to commit himself by a hasty or impassioned reply, and then delivered himself as follows: "Quite."

"It seems to me," I said, following the same line of thought, "that fair-minded people on both sides of the water are getting sore—that is, losing patience with the agitators who preach the old doctrine that our attitude toward Great Britain is necessarily one of enmity. We cannot forget that when the European powers attempted to concert their influence against the United States at the outset of the late war with Spain you bluffed them out—that is, you induced them to relinquish their unfriendly intentions. Every thoughtful man in America is onto this fact—that is, he understands how important was the service you rendered us—and he is correspondingly grateful. The American people and the English people speak the same language, theoretically. Our interests are practically identical in all parts of the world—that is, we are trying to do everybody, and so are you. What I want to convey is that neither nation can properly work out its destiny except by co-operating with the other. Therefore, any policy looking toward a severance of friendly relations is unworthy of consideration."

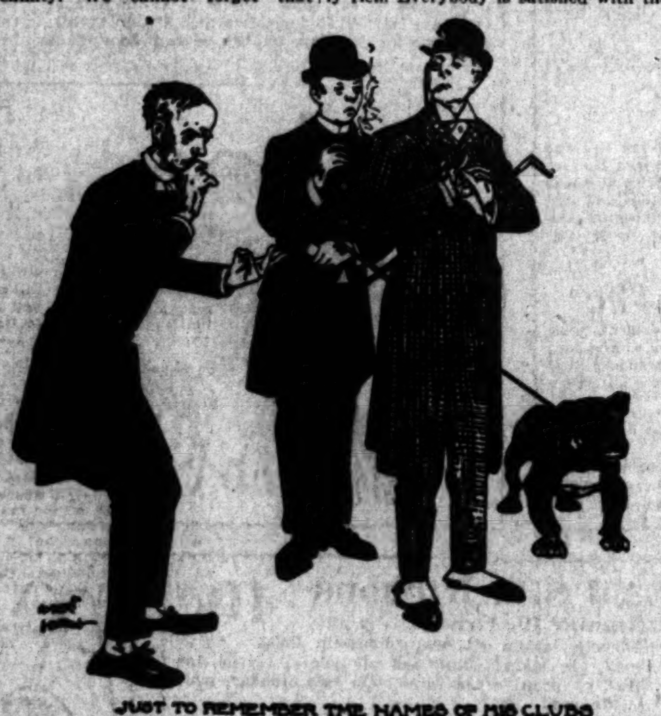
"Rot!" said he.

"Just at present all Americans are profoundly grateful to the British public for its generous recognition of the sterling qualities of our beloved Executive," I continued. "Over in the States we think that 'Teddy' is the goods—that is, the people of all sections have unbounded faith in him. We think he is on the level—that is, that his dominant policies are guided by the spirit of integrity. As a fair-minded Briton, who is keeping in touch with the affairs of the world, may I ask you your candid opinion of President Roosevelt?"

After a brief pause, he spoke as follows: "Ripping!"

"The impulse of friendliness on the part of the English people seems to be more evident year by year," I continued. "It is now possible for Americans to get into nearly all the London hotels. You show your faith in our monetary system by accepting all of the collateral we can bring over. No identification is necessary. Formerly the visiting American was asked to give references before he was separated from his income—that is, before one of your business institutions would enter into negotiations with him. Nowadays you see behind the chin whisker the beautiful trade-mark of consanguinity. You say, 'Blood is thicker than water,' and you accept a $5 bill just the same as if it were an English sovereign worth $4.86."

"Jolly glad to get it," said he.



JUST TO REMEMBER THE NAMES OF HIS CLUBS

"Both countries have adopted the gospel of reciprocity," I said, warmed by this sudden burst of enthusiasm. "We send shiploads of tourists over here. You send shiploads of English actors to New York. The tourists go home as soon as they are broke—that is, as soon as their funds are exhausted. The English actors come home as soon as they are independently rich. Everybody is satisfied with the arrangement and the international bonds are further strengthened. Of course, some of the English actors blow up—that is, fail to meet with any great measure of financial success—when they get out as far as Omaha, but while they are mystifying the American public some of our tourists are going around London mystifying the British public. Doubtless you have seen some of these tourists?"

The distinguished person nodded his head in grave acquiescence and then said with some feeling, "Bounders!"

"In spite of these breaches of international faith the situation taken as a whole is one promising an indefinite continuation of cordial friendship between the powers," I said. "I ad darned glad that such is the case; ain't you?"

"Awfully," he replied.

Then we parted.

It is really worth a long sea voyage to be permitted to get the English language at first hand, to revel in its unexpected sublimities and gaze down new and awe-inspiring vistas of rhetorical splendor.

Mr. Bean's Autobiography.

The first thing I remember I was a nice white bean. I was put in a sack with a lot of other beans for seed. I was kept there a long time, until one warm day my sisters and I were taken out and buried in the ground. It was very cold down there, and I was very much dissatisfied.

I had a great many visitors. There were earthworms and four or five different kinds of bugs; They would come and cheer me up and tell me something good was going to happen after all.

How well I remember how I felt when the first rain came! The water ran down around me, and the ground grew colder and colder all the time, and I thought sure I should freeze. The next day my skin began to swell up, and something within me began to move.

"Ah," said I, "something good is going to happen, after all."

Sure enough, the next day my skin opened, and out came a little foot which grew down into the ground, and a lot of little toes grew out on it. Then I began to stick my head above the ground. In two or three more days I began to put out my hands which were the leaves. Then I grew up tall and strong, and was the finest of all my brothers and sisters. I had beautiful white blossoms on me, which turned out to be little pods which were filled with beans.

One day a little girl came and gathered them, and I heard her tell her mother that they were just right, to eat, so I suppose that is what became of them.

I lived on until the frost came, and then I froze.

How Fish Are Hatched.

Dear Editor—I have never written to the Good Cheer Corner before. I am 12 years old, and I am in the seventh grade at school. My grandfather takes The Times, and I like to read it. I like all kinds of puzzles and problems, and I enjoy reading Polly Evans's page for boys and girls.

I will write a story in my letter which may interest some who do not know it. When I was at the Portland Fair last summer, I saw many different kinds of fish in the Forestry and Government buildings. They were especially beautiful in the Government building. There were attendants in each different department to explain about the fish. A salt water salmon cannot live for many days in fresh water. After being there for a few days, its body becomes covered with sores.

In the Forestry building are the fish hatcheries. The fish do not break the egg, and then go away and leave it, as chickens do, but instead, they grow on the side of the egg. Some of them create a very funny sight when they have just been hatched and are trying to swim with the egg on one side, and it draws it down so that it cannot swim, but falls over on the side. The egg looks like a blister on the side of the fish. As the fish grows larger, the egg gradually gets smaller and finally disappears altogether. Your friend,

HAZEL GULLEY.

Dot, the Dentist.

Dear Editor, Good Cheer Corner: This story I have written to you is a true story.

Dot is a monkey. He has lived with us two years. He was brought here from India. Dot is a happy, good-natured little fellow. He is full of tricks and pranks.

But last week Dot was not a happy, pleasant monkey. Dot was cross because he had a toothache. All the family were sorry for him. He would sit down on the floor and put his paw up to his mouth, and look so pitiful, and sometimes he would cry and sob.

At last, Dot grew tired of the pain and made up his mind to have the toothache no longer—no, not one minute longer.

What do you suppose Dot did? He found a long stout string and wound it about the aching tooth, then he took the string between his two front paws and pulled it tight. Then he drew up one of his hind legs and kicked the string hard and swift. Out flew a scream from Dot's mouth, and the tooth!

The big tears stood in the little dentist's eyes, as he looked up at us, then he gave a sharp little howl. Then Dot ran to take a nap, and when he woke he was happy.

Hoping it is not too long,
Yours truly,
MATILDA THOMPSON.

"Ssh" and the Baby.

Dear Editor—There was a baby lived near us in Detroit, Mich. He was about 2 years old, but could talk plain for his age. He called me Ssh. I don't know why he called me that, only that when I took him for a ride, I would buy him some candy, and he called candy ssh.

One Christmas day I went over to his house and gave him a box of creams. He liked them so well he ate all his mother would let him. As I went to go home he said in words, which I will make into verse:

"I like my pretty things,
My dolly, book and ball,
But now you're going away,
I like you best of all."

Sincerely,
MARIE M'DONALD.

An Opportune Sale of

Sheets and Pillow Cases

The Finished Product at Less Than Material

The cotton market is on the rise, and in spite of the advance we start a sale Monday of sheets and pillow cases that will enable hotels, lodging houses and economical housewives to lay in a stock at prices that do not cover cost of material, say nothing of the finished product. It's just such opportune sales as these that make The Broadway Department Store famous. Some of the lots are limited, and in order that all may take advantage of the liberal pricing, we limit the time; in other instances there's an endless assortment. Don't let anything keep you away from this sale Monday. You'll find these on the third floor.

[illegible] Parts.

[illegible] may have pre- [illegible] of the parts, [illegible] of a giant [illegible] place in an almost [illegible] of time. First, [illegible] cylinders are [illegible] floor by one [illegible] and are sus- [illegible] track upon which [illegible] to be built. They [illegible] jacks, and with [illegible] are placed in [illegible] the workmen are [illegible] to arrive many [illegible] applied, and when [illegible] steam generator [illegible] the boiler shop [illegible] into place the [illegible] the semblance [illegible] boiler shop is one of [illegible] of the modern [illegible] institution. Steel [illegible] exclusively as [illegible] for modern [illegible] boilers, although [illegible] export the firebox [illegible] steel for boilers is [illegible] works in sheets of [illegible] thicknesses, some of [illegible] feet in length. [illegible] may be explained, [illegible] a ring for the [illegible] now in use. The [illegible] of holes in the [illegible] is done solely by [illegible] individual electric [illegible] away with the dan- [illegible] which were an unpleasant feature of old-time shop practice. The riveting is done by massive, but practically noiseless, machines which are operated by hydraulic power.

The Foundry Department.

The foundry is another important department in the locomotive building plant, for whereas pressed steel and cast steel are extensively used in locomotive construction there is one part which is invariably made of cast iron and that is the cylinders. The largest American locomotive building plant has a foundry that extends the length of a city block. The equipment includes three cupolas, each having a capacity of fifty tons of iron at one heat and the amount of this metal actually used in this shop aggregates 135 tons per day. The cast iron used for cylinders is of the hardest grade obtainable. In locomotive work it is necessary to make some castings weighing as much as 9000 pounds and in the production of these large pieces the molten metal is poured into the moulds from ladles each of which has a capacity of 12,000 pounds of iron.

The average American locomotive of moderate size and modern construction costs from $10,000 to $12,000, whereas the foreign-built engine costs considerably more and this advantage in price is one of the factors which has enabled Yankee locomotive builders to sell abroad more than $40,000,000 worth of locomotives, a single American firm having filled orders from twenty-nine different countries in one year.

The Biggest Locomotive Works.

No mention of American superiority in locomotive building would be complete without reference to the unique features of the largest institution in the world for the manufacture of locomotives,—the famous Baldwin Works at Philadelphia. The number of men employed in this gigantic locomotive works exceeds that of any other private organization in the world devoted to a single industry, yet despite the tendencies of this age of concentration the plant is not operated by a corporation but by a good old-fashioned partnership conducted on the simplest lines. Every one of the seven partners who are now at the head of the manufactory began at the bottom and worked his way to the top. Not one of these men ever put a cent into the firm, but for their hard work they have taken out millions of dollars in profits.

Moreover this remarkable merit system is still in force, and the superintendents and foremen of the present day are men who some years back started in the lowest positions, whereas the coming owners of this great property are now lads in overalls and jumpers doing the most disagreeable class of work. The men work long hours, some of them toiling twelve hours a day, but they are proportionately long headed and not afraid of hard work, and the plant has never had any labor troubles. The 18,000 employés are paid more than $1,000,000 in wages each month, and every man on the pay roll draws his pay in gold and silver coin.

Training Apprentices.

It may be of interest in conclusion to explain the apprentice system whereby new recruits are added to this army of locomotive builders. There are three classes of apprentices in the plant. The first class is made up of boys with common school educations who begin work at seventeen years of age, agreeing to work four years and receiving five cents per hour the first year with a gradual increase to eleven cents per hour the fourth year with a bonus of $125 at the close of the term. Second class apprentices are high school graduates who serve three years advancing in wages from 7 to 11 cents per hour and winning a $100 bonus in the end. The third class is made up of young men over twenty-one years old, college or technical school graduates who receive higher wages than either of the other classes of apprentices and often obtain early advancement to a foreman's position.

AUTO VS. HORSE.

Comparison Between the Actual Cost of Running a Horse Vehicle and an Automobile.

The March World's Work in an article on "Auomobiles For Everybody" shows the difference between the cost of maintaining a horse and keeping an automobile. The case of the physician is cited as typical of other classes of people. The doctor's driving equipment is presented as follows:

Standard doctor's buggy	$300
Cut-under carriage	400
Single harness, hand made	50
Double harness hand made	10
Two horses at $150 apiece	300
Total	$1150

To this sum should be added the cost of a coachman's uniform, the cost of heat and light, veterinarian's services, shoeing, repairs, depreciation, and interest on investment; but these will be omitted as there are similar expenses, amounting to as much, in maintaining an automobile. An automobile would probably cost more for repairs than the carriages. The expense of maintenance of the carriages would be about as follows:

Stable rent per year	$100
Oats, hay and straw for two horses	240
Shoeing two horses	48
Hire of man at $20 a month	240
Harness repairs, painting of carriage	50
Sundries, brushes, blankets, etc.	25
Total	$703

Assuming that it is possible to drive twenty miles a day with this equipment, or approximately 7000 miles a year, at a cost of $700 for maintenance, the cost per mile would be 10 cents.

To match the work of two horses, a physician desiring an automobile would need a powerful and sturdy runabout costing from $1000 to $1200 of at least ten-horse power, and with an engine of two cylinders at least. For-all-year use, embracing winter driving, an air-cooled machine is most logical. The car must be fitted with a top and a storm apron and curtains, and as far as possible it must be simple of control and have easily accessible parts. The approximate cost for 7000 miles of use of such an equipment might be estimated as follows:

Stable rent	$100
Gasolene	70
Lubricating oil	10
Battery	25
Painting	25
Tires	100
Services of a man	240
Total	$550

ABOUT OLIVES.

The California Ripe Olive Far Superior to the Imported Pickled Olive.

[The Cultivator:] The introduction of ripe olives to the market in America is of comparatively late date. The ripe olive as a very nourishing food has long been used by the Orientals. The Italian reserves his best ripe olives for home consumption, where they are a part of the daily diet, and are consumed in large quantities, taking the place of meat. Travelers in Palestine have been surprised at the power of endurance of their Bedouin guides, who live solely on ripe pickled olives, and hard, black bread, and endure the longest and hardest marches, apparently without effort or effect. In countries like Spain, Italy and Greece the ripe olive is a staple article of food. Workmen toil hard all day on a ration of black bread and a handful of ripe, pickled olives, and keep in All this may be taken as evidence of the highly nutritive qualities in the ripe olive.

In California, the ripe olives are prescribed in hospitals by physicians for the sick and convalescent. The oil blended with the salt in the pickle forms an appetizing digester which stimulates secretion and builds up the appetite. Those who are posted never restrain their children from eating the ripe olives, knowing that they are more nourishing than meat, are easily digested and contain none of the dangerous heating qualities which accompany meat diet.

The imported green, or queen olive, is nothing more or less than an unripe, undeveloped, and indigestible pickle. It is pickled and shipped from its native home in that state simply because it lends itself better to long transportation than the ripe olive. There is no nutrition in the green olive, and physicians claim that when eaten in large quantities, especially by people with weak digestions, much harm is done by this indigestible, unripe article of food. The producers of these green olives know that the natives of Italy, France and Spain would not think of eating them, hence they are only put up for the foreign market as a commercial commodity. Americans must look to California for a healthy, palatable, sanitary article when they want a good olive. The food value of the green olive as compared with the ripe can be likened to that of a little, green apple to a rich, juicy, ripe one. According to olive experts, ripe olives and olive oil should not be considered as an occasional delicacy, but should form a part of the average diet and should be considered a household necessity.

The demand for this commodity is constantly growing, which is a pleasing indication that the food value of the ripe olive is becoming better known and recognized, and doubtless the day will come when the green olive will be banished from the American table, and the ripe California olive will be served in its place.

USES OF LAMP BLACK.

[Mining World.] Lampblack is finely divided carbon or soot, produced on a commercial scale by the imperfect combustion of organic materials that are rich in carbon, such as tar, resins, pitch and petroleum. The combustion is usually carried out in brick furnaces or in cast iron vessels to which a smaller supply of air is admitted than is required for complete oxidation. The dense smoke that results is conveyed through a series of settling chambers, in which the lampblack is deposited, the finest grade being precipitated in the last chamber. Lampblack so prepared contains about 80 per cent. of carbon, the remaining portion being of oily and resinous matters, together with moisture and certain inorganic substances such as ammonium sulphate. The resinous and other organic materials are removed by heating to redness in a closed crucible, after which the soot is digested with hydrochloric or sulphuric acid and finally washed to remove the inorganic substances. Lampblack is used mainly in the manufacture of paints and printers' ink and for such purposes the crude product is amply pure.

Nitrogen from Air.

At the inauguration of the new chemical institute of the Technische Hochschule in Berlin, Prof. O. R. Witt gave some interesting information regarding recent developments in connection with the production of nitrogen from the air by electrical means. According to the Elektrotechnischer Anzeiger, the professor said that the greatest progress has been made in Norway, where Prof. Birkeland, assisted by Herr S. Eyde, had developed a commercial method of producing nitrogen, using an arc elongated by a magnetic field and an e.m.f. of 5000 volts. Experiments were first started with a twenty-horse power plant in 1903. After experimenting with plants of small size the inventors built the first factory at Notodden in May, 1905. The equipment consists of three furnaces, each consuming 700-horse power and all three combined deal with 75,000 litres (2650 cubic feet) of air per minute. Before entering the furnace, the air is mixed with nitric oxide which gives it an intense brown color. After passing through the furnaces the gases are led to stone towers (having a capacity of 8800 gallons each) where nitric acid is formed. Copper tubes are used as electrodes, being cooled by a water circulation. It is stated that plants of less than 5000-horse power are not commercial; in fact, it would seem that installations of less than 20,000-horse power are also doubtful in this respect, even if the power be very cheap.

Growing Rose Bushes for the East.

HOW THE RAPID WOOD GROWTH IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA FAVORS THE NURSERY BUSINESS.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

THE JACKSON & PERKINS COMPANY, a nursery firm of Newark, N. Y., pays special attention to raising roses and other shrubbery. In 1897 they resolved to start a nursery in Southern California. For that purpose they bought in the Villa Park school district, Orange county, ten acres of land, the soil whereof is a sandy loam, mostly heavy. There they started a nursery for roses exclusively, which ever since has been in charge of Mr. W. W. Perkins, a member of the firm.

The object, was and has ever since remained, to raise rose bushes, and after a year's growth to ship them, the roots wrapped in moss, to the Newark nursery. This is because rose bushes here grow so much more rapidly than at Newark that they attain in one year more than twice the size of similar bushes of the same age raised at Newark. Wood growth is thus wonderfully expedited. With every variety of roses grading depends on size, and the grade determines the value. At Newark Maréchal Niel roses wholesale for $25 per hundred; Queen of Prairie for $10 to $12; La France in the fall of the year for $12 and in the spring for $10; tree roses all fetch one same price, whatever may be the variety—$35 in the fall and $25 in spring. They will be budded on stems from two to three feet high. When a first-grade bush is worth $9, a second-grade bush of the same variety will command $7.

Cuttings from the East.

At first cuttings or slips, three months old and rooted, were expressed from Newark to California. This was first done in January, 1898. They were planted in nursery rows on part of the ten-acre field, and about one year later, after they had developed into big bushes, they were shipped back to Newark by freight. The varieties were American Beauty, Mrs. John Lang, La France and General Jacques Minot. Of the bushes developed in California 60 per cent. grade number one, while only 25 per cent. of the bushes developed at Newark at the same time from similar plants of the same age will grade this high. The expense of expressing the three-months' old plants from Newark was $12 per hundred pounds, and 3000 cuttings weighed about that. A beginning was made with that number. To ship bushes back in carload lots costs $1.10 per hundred pounds, and $3.15 in lots less than a carload of twelve tons. According to the one-year-old bush being more or less vigorous a car holding twelve tons will contain from 65,000 to 85,000 bushes.

The first experiment proved such a success that the firm extended their operations from year to year, and went on buying more land. First five acres were added, then another five, then twenty, till now they have seventy acres. Every year a larger number of three-months'-old cuttings were expressed from Newark; the second year ten times more than the first, that is 30,000 instead of 3000; till in 1900 the number of 90,000 was reached. Then the expressing from Newark was given up, not so much in order to avoid the cost of expressage, but more because so often the young plants in transit in the express car were injured, principally by frost, so that whole boxes might become worthless. The change was determined on despite the fact that with the wide range of thermometer between noon and midnight here, cuttings or slips do not root so easily; and labor is higher priced than at Newark.

Management of Cuttings.

From that time cuttings or slips have been taken from bushes about to be shipped to Newark, without injury to those bushes. Both hard wood and soft wood cuttings are taken. The former are cuttings from wood already hard, the latter from young tender shoots. The process with such cuttings is as follows:

Cuttings are planted in so-called propagation beds, in a layer of sand six inches deep and underlaid with a layer of fresh horse manure a foot and a half in thickness. Each propagation bed is covered with a glass sash. The cuttings are watered every day. They are left in the propagation bed for six weeks, during which time they become properly rooted. Then they are taken out and placed in pots filled with earth as rich as possible with humus. The plants thus potted are placed in a greenhouse, where the temperature by night is kept at 70 degrees Fahrenheit by means of hot water in pipes, and by day at 60 degrees through solar heat. When in the morning the outer air is unusually cold artificial heat is again supplied. The plants are watered every day and left in the greenhouse from thirty-five to sixty days, after which they are planted in nursery rows in the field. The length of time in the greenhouse is determined by climatic conditions. If the spring is cold the planting out is delayed. They are left in the rows till next winter, then shipped to Newark.

Cuttings always are taken from bushes in December, January or February, when the air is moist and cool. Later, after sap has begun to flow freely, the time has come for forming not roots but buds.

Mr. Perkins began with his own cuttings to the extent of 120,000, but last winter he shipped 387,000 bushes. This winter he will have altogether about 350,000 bushes to ship. This is not quite so many as last winter because last spring was very cold and changeable, which caused him to lose over 30 per cent. of the plants, while the ordinary loss is only from 10 to 15 per cent. He has already shipped one carload, and calculates on shipping three more.

Mr. Perkins has grown over one hundred different varieties of roses. As to all he has found sandy loam, and even a clay soil, preferable. Only a few varieties do at all well on light soil. These are the roses of the Rambler family, the Dorothy Perkins (thus named after a niece of Mr. Perkins) and Vick's Caprice. The La France, American Beauty and Ulrich Brunner prosper only in heavy soil, and do best in clay.

Roses With Fruit Trees.

The larger part of the seventy acres is also planted in orange or walnut trees. The orange trees are either young stock, or old trees recently budded over. This necessitates fertilizing more heavily than would be required if only roses were being raised on the land. Mr. Perkins applies altogether two hundred tons of animal manure to the seventy acres—one hundred tons of sheep manure, which, hauled at the ranch, costs him $2.50 per ton; cow manure thirty-five tons; balance horse manure, the two latter laid on costing him $2 per ton. He also sows peas or alfalfa between the rows of trees, in so far as possible without interfering with cultivating. He finds that from two-year-old alfalfa he gets more nitrogen when plowing it under than from peas. Chemicals he has not yet applied, except 4000 pounds of bone and blood spread broadcast over the field, but he contemplates doing so.

The Best Varieties.

He considers it best for roses to be budded, especially the weaker kinds. A vigorous stock, like the Minneta or the Ragged Robin, will add strength. In his last winter's shipment were 20,000 budded bushes. But there is one objection; a stock or root may throw out a sucker. That sucker may be more vigorous than the scion. An ignorant grower may not notice its being only a sucker, and not merely neglect cutting it off, but even cut the scion off instead. The standard size for roses at Neward is from twenty to thirty inches, with three stalks and no more. Running roses should be four feet. Climbing roses should have two runners at Newark; but in California one is preferable not to tax the root too heavily.

All the hundred varieties of roses tried by Mr. Perkins here do well; but best are the Diebach, Ulrich Brunner, Paul Niegen, La France, all kinds of tree rose and rambler, the Clio, Keeynes, Magna Charta and Caprice. Hardest to raise he has found the American Beauty, and the Mrs. John Lang; they are delicate and strictly hothouse flowers. The Maréchal Niel he has found to do but poorly when budded on its own root, but well when budded on Minetta stock. At Newark it has to be kept during winter in a hothouse.

What Mr. Perkins contends for is wood growth. As has been said, in one year he can make bushes reach a size in California they could not reach in less than between two and three years at Newark. After they have reached Newark, of course, the climate there will determine the blooming, just as if they had been raised there. He cares only for the Newark market, and does not aim at local trade. He has ascertained that, howsoever excellent California is for the wood growth of roses, the climate is not so favorable for blooming, by reason of the cool nights and the great variations of the thermometer between the different hours of day and night.

The varieties which he has found to blossom best here are all the tree roses and the ramblers; also the La France, Paget Center, Meteor, Maria Van Hout, Barculda, Saffron and Sumant. When budded on Minetta or other wild stock, or on Baltimore Belle the following varieties may also succeed; but not otherwise, namely: The Alfred Colon, Marshal P. Wilder, and Lord Dufferin.

HINTS FROM OUR CONSULS.

Spanish Orange Crop Decreasing.

Consul Bartleman of Seville makes a report on the dwindling orange exports of that port. It would seem that this would require more oranges from other countries to supply European markets. The letter follows: "According to the Revista Commercial of Seville the disease which has raged among the orangeries of this region is responsible for the retrogressive movement in the exportation of this fruit which, although extensive in previous years, amounted in the present but to a very limited number of shipments. In the season 1900-1901, 200,000 boxes of oranges were shipped from Seville by water route, every year thereafter showing a greater decrease, the exportation in the present year amounting to only 88,000 boxes. Small as this quantity appears, it would not have even reached this figure were it not for the recurrence to neighboring provinces, where the trees continue in a sound state and whose limited production was incorporated with shipments directed from this port."

Bone Products.

Consul McNally of Liege writes that degelatinized bone flour is an article obtained in the manufacture of bone glues and contains about 30 per cent. of phosphoric acid and about 1 per cent. nitrogen. The raw bone meal is obtained as above and contains about 21 per cent. phosphoric acid and 5 per cent. nitrogen. Both articles are considered by the advanced European farmers as excellent fertilizers and are used to a great extent. They are composed exclusively of organic matters. Some shipments have gone from this consular district to the United States, and it is thought that when the American farmer becomes fully acquainted with the merits of the products he will use them extensively.

Continuing his report Consul McNally says: "Precipitated bone phosphate is a by-product of the manufacture of glue and contains about 40 per cent. phosphoric acid soluble. Formerly this article was exported as a manure, and was extensively used both on account of its fertilizing merits and because of its richness in phosphoric acid, which compared with its volume meant great economy in freight. The manufacturers have not, however, succeeded in purifying the phosphate to a high degree of perfection. The complete output is sold exclusively in Europe, and the demand is so great that it is sold several seasons in advance. It is particularly valuable in the feeding of domestic animals, such as cattle, horses, pigs, etc. It is said to have given excellent results in the development of the animal's frame, prevents sickness to a great extent and gives a much more healthy constitution. The demand for the thoroughly purified precipitated bone phosphate would indicate its nourishing and strength-giving properties, and would be of particular interest to American farmers and cattle breeders."

Lower California.

Consul Kaiser of Mazatlan writes: "Wireless telegraphy was put in public service on January 1, 1906, and messages are now being sent and received for Guayamas and Santa Rosalia, Lower California, the latter place having been, up to said date, without telegraphic communication. The tariff rate for a message is $1 American currency for each ten words, and 10 cents American for each additional word. It is too early to give an opinion as to the success of the system, which consists of two plans, called the 'Slaby Arco' and 'Telefunken,' both of which were imported from Germany. During December, 1905, the receipts of the Mazatlan telegraph office (the telegraph lines being owned and operated by the Federal government) were as follows: Messages sent and received, 6244, the fees for which were nearly $10,000 American currency. The government messages amounted to $643 in addition."

Novel Sash Lock.

A novelty in the hardware trade is a window-sash lock by the use of which a window can be fastened open from the inside at any desired height, so that the lock cannot be tampered with from the outside. The lock is operated by a cam against the latch, which holds the sash in any position desired. The action of the cam on the lever presses it out of the lock, causing it to engage with an iron plate screwed to the sash. In operating the lock it is only necessary to turn a key, which will lock or unlock the sash, as required. For purposes of ventilation the sash can be raised an inch or more top and bottom and securely fastened. The lock cannot be seen or opened from the outside, and can only be opened from the inside with its own key, which can be removed if desired.

WIND A SUBJECT WHICH SUGGESTS MOVEMENTS TO ADD TO STRENGTH OF THE BODY.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

THERE is a sign in the Zodias which promises any child born under its spell a magic susceptibility to the healing influences of Nature. Green trees and babbling brooks are the only doctors which a person belonging to the sign of Libra need ever consult. This is the mystical decree of the stars.

While reading the oracular language of astrology one is likely to be dazed, to accept without question all that it says—regretting, perhaps, but not doubting, that since one was born in May instead of September, one may never feel the benign influence of Nature nor be hushed by the whispering of the wind.

But this is fiction. It is not true.

WEATHER VANE.
Trunk-twisting exercise.
Aids digestion.

There is no sign in the heavens under which man may be born that does not offer this same promise to the children of men. That Nature is a great physician there can be no doubt. She cannot only heal the physical man, but she can restore and gladden the heart and lift the mind above all anxious cares and petty ambitions. But she does not reserve her ministrations for a partial few. Simply because he is a human being it is the birthright of every child of man to feel at one time or anotner a close and vital relation between himself and Nature, to be open to her influences, stilled by her calm repose, inspired by her grandeur. This heritage is not a matter of signs and seasons, not a blind and mysterious decree of Fate. It is a simple scientific fact, easily explained by psychology and easily obtained by any mother for any child. If she can but keep alive within him a love for wind and wave, for wood and hill she will assure to him for all time an open sesame to healing waters, protecting groves and mountains of strength. And the earlier the heart of the child is open to this influence the deeper and more lasting it will be.

Let us seize him then at this plastic age when impressions made are easily retained.

The first practical question is what are some of the actual experiences which it will be worth his while to have. The wind is one of the great forces of Nature which ever serves to lift man out of himself and to create within him a longing for freedom, power and self-expression. It is more than the mere motion and activity that appeals to him. It is the hidden life, the invisible yet mighty force, the personality seeking to express itself in action—accomplishment. The wind is one theme, then, which will touch his heart and fire his imagination. It will serve to show the mother how other subjects may be similarly treated.

FLYING KITE.
Free muscular movements.
Develops imagination.

Having, then, found an experience which it will be worth the child's while to have, the second question which confronts us is how we shall present it to him. Psychology tells us that the best way to train the child, mentally, morally or physically is through concrete examples, which will call for activity on the part of the child and which may be often represented to his consciousness in the form of play.

Applying this general theory to the particular instance—take the child out on a windy day and let him look for evidences of the wind passing by. He will doubtless find the flags waving, clothes flapping on the line, the boys out flying their kites, the ribbons on hats blowing about, the long tail feathers of the rooster, tall grasses and taller trees all rising and falling, bending and turning in the breeze. Do not shield him too carefully from the full force of a strong wind. Let him feel its power. Let him have personal evidence of its strength. Let him try to run against it, to meet it face to face, to battle with it and not be baffled by it. Thus he will gain courage to resist opposition and determination to conquer and overcome obstacles.

If a child has once had an actual experience of this kind, of a representation of the same activity in play it will recall, and, to some measure, actually repeat, the emotions aroused by the reality. Here again psychology gives us a helpful suggestion by telling us that it is the frequent repetition of a thought, an emotion, an action which, developing brain tracks with every new passage over the same road gradually determines habit and character.

"Do you mean," asks a practical and busy mother, "that we take our children out every time the wind blows?" By no means. That is the meaning and value of these games. To the average child an initiation in the form of play is quite as enjoyable and almost as real as the actual experience. Was there ever a child who could resist the magic words, "Let's pretend."

In the quiet of the evening hour then take just a few moments from the turmoil of the day to prepare the children in mind and heart as well as body for a sleep that will be truly restful and worth his while.

RUNNING AGAINST THE WIND.
Vigorous exercise to arouse respiration and bring chest and head into good position.

Assuming that the child has felt and seen several manifestations of the wind, what are some of the activities which he may re-present in his play and which will secure relaxation for tired nerves and muscles, and promise a sleep that will re-create muscular tissue and nervous energy.

The weather vane twisting and turning in the breeze, is a good introductory exercise. With the feet well planted on the ground to give a firm base, (remind the child how securely the vane is fastened to the topmost pinnacle,) arms extended from the sides as high as the shoulders, twist the trunk from the ankles or from the waist, first to the right, then to the left, as if blown by the wind. This exercise will furnish great amusement to the children and, at the same time, produce and preserve flexibility, one of the most distinguishing characteristics of youth. It will also strengthen the waist muscles and thus establish an erect poise of the body, lacking which even a child may be ungainly or take on the appearance of old age or deformity.

SHIP SAILING.
Free rythmic movements to develop grace and agility.

Representing a flag flying and waving is a good arm and wrist movement conducive to suppleness and grace of motion. This movement should be taken by each arm, that the child may learn to control and direct the left arm as wel as the right. In this play the body represents the flag pole. Thus excellent position is secured through suggestion.

The clothes flapping on the line is another manifestation of the wind which lends itself to an imitation in play. The arms represent the clothes, the shoulders where the clothes are fastened to the line. Raising and lowering the arms, which themselves are held "limp as a rag," varying the velocity and the distance of the movement at will, affords another arm exercise, which will soon develop good muscle to fill up those ugly hollows in the chest.

The carriage of the head is always one of the most noticeable characteristics of a distinguished appearance and pride of bearing. Imitating the nodding of the tree-tops in a gentle breeze offers an exercise which, if frequently taken will arouse a good habitual and unself-conscious poise of the head.

The rising and falling of the branches of a tree in a storm suggest further arm movements, and imitating the deep bending of the tree to a strong wind offers a deep forward bending of the trunk, or a bending to right and left. Do not allow the children to bend backwards.

Pretending to run against the wind is a suitable exercise to be taken in the middle of the evening's play. It calls for vigorous action, stirs up the circulation and compels deep, free respiration. With the arms extended at the sides, palms forward, chest and head up the child may run rapidly down the long hall. If the floor space is limited he may simply lift his heels high in imitation of running, coming down lightly on the balls of his feet, while remaining in one place. "In place run" they call this exercise in the gymnasium, where it is much used for its beneficial results.

Pretending to fly a kite will develop a child's imagination and combine arm, body, leg and head movements. Such realistic touches as winding and unwinding the string on the stick, tossing the kite into the air, running backwards, twisting, turning, bending, pulling, all add greatly to the pleasure of the game.

A good exercise to close the evening's performance is the representation of the sailboat. Begin the game by swaying from the ankles or rising and falling on the balls of the feet as if rolling on the waves. Then hoist the sail by stretching the right arm upward for the mast, the left arm sideways for the yard-arm. Alternate the arm positions several times during the game. When the sail is up imagine its being filled by the wind. Step rapidly to the side or run forward as if carried by a gust of wind. Bend and turn in imitation of the boat tilting on the waves, or tipped by the wind. Making sudden bends and turns to avoid furniture and go smoothly through doors develops a quick response of muscle to the dictates of the will. After the sail is over, lower the canvas and again rock quietly on the water—to still the heart beat. This movement is an excellent one to induce sleep and music will add greatly both to its pleasure and calming benefit.

To make these activities natural and spontaneous turn them into a guessing game, which will be the more enjoyable if the entire family will take part. Each person can show something that the wind does and all the rest may try to guess what the movement represents. The successful guesser in his turn representing another of the wind's activities.

In this way the children will come to put themselves, their ideas and their souls into their work. They will acquire initiative originality, creative ability. Healthful minds wil be developed along with healthful bodies and wholesome emotions will accompany, stimulate and inspire both. Accurate observations will become a habit of mind and in their turn will be followed by efficient execution while enthusiasm and interest will crown and season and constantly accompany his work.

Thus the education of the child need not be left entirely to the crowded school. Education is an atmosphere, a dicipline, a life. And the fullest individual life must ever be the one which can respond most sympathetically to all life.

BELLE RAGNAR PARSONS.

The Young Husband.

THE FIRST YEAR OF MARRIED LIFE MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

His first year—it is the most important of all. You are two people who are getting acquainted with each other, and the acquaintance means a friendship for life. You must have first of all a good stock of patience. You know little about the ways and weaknesses of women, and you must learn to bear with them. Remember, you have promised to love and protect this woman and you must show that you are a man of your word. You must protect her from your own follies and you must be man enough not to be afraid to tell her of your love.

The word of love means very much to the wife. It is a hard time for both of you. She knows little of the peculiarities of men, and you know nothing of the weaknesses of woman. All during the honeymoon there were kisses and smiles and dainty compliments. She seems something too bright and good for everyday life. Then for a little while you are off on an idyllic journey.

During that time you have a blissful feeling when you put her wraps about her and you would burden yourself with any number of bundles and bags if she needed them and then you come back to the little nest that is going to be home to you and you make a wonderful discovery. It is that this marvelous creature, this exquisite being, this dream, is, after all, only a woman. Mark you, if she had been an angel she would not have married you. She is human and, therefore, she has her weaknesses and her little faults, and these you will have to be introduced to. You will have to learn to understand her during this first year of your married life.

And now that you are back home, that you have taken up your business life, that you are indeed living the ordinary life of a man, you forget some of these affectionate acts. You come home in the evening, to be greeted by a wife whose eyes are very red, whose lips quiver, and who can't speak without bursting into tears. Ah, as you left the house in the morning you forgot to kiss her good-by and tell her that you hoped she would be happy all the day long.

It is a little thing to be sure, but you trained her to this affection during the honeymoon and you hurt her feelings when you leave her without a word now. A woman, my friend, is not an angel, but she is a sensitive being who likes to have, as a wife, the expression you gave as a sweetheart and during the happy month after she was a bride.

She thinks it is queer that you did not discover that she possessed the faults before you married her, and she wonders as she sits by herself and stares out of the window: "Why, if I have so many faults, does anybody care for me?"

It is true the breakfast was bad. It is also true that she had four or five cooks within the last month. But she is doing her very best in trying to get a good one, and she does wish that you would encourage her a little bit in her troubles and not find fault with her all the time. Especially this morning, when her head aches as if it would split. She wonders if men ever have headaches as women do.

I think you might have a little patience with her. This little girl, who, in her white satin and orange blossoms a few months ago you thought must be an angel, has only been experimenting a short time. Just remember that, won't you. Physically women are not as strong as men. It isn't necessary for you to say that you liked the bad breakfast. One thing you can do, you can encourage her and hope that she will soon have a better cook.

You also could remind her that these are the early days of her housekeeping; that is where your strength ought to come in; that is the time when you should represent yourself to her, not only as her husband, but her keeper.

Her little ways, of course she has them, and it is just probable that some of them may not suit you; but don't you think it would be much nicer for you to quietly talk them over with her than to show yourself a barbarian? If you don't like them, tell her the reason why. She is a reasonable creature and she loves you well enough to prefer to do what you like, if what you like is right, of course.

You are a bit in your own way yourself, but she doesn't find fault with you. You can keep your handkerchiefs in the top drawer or in the second one, as you please, and she will not object. But if, for some pretty little idea, she takes all your handkerchiefs and puts them in a perfume sachet, why need you get so cross with her? Why need you insist on her liking strange people, or saying that she does like them when she does not? She is sweet and amiable and loving and hospitable to all who bear your name, but you can't expect her to be attracted at once to Jim Brown, who is an old friend of yours, but whose manners are extremely brusque, and who greets her with the salutation, "Well, Mrs. Bride, I suppose none of his friends will ever see your husband now." She is anxious for you to keep your friends, and she is hurt when this is said to her, and surely you can't blame her for it. Find out all her little ways that you don't like, and then be sure for dear love's sake she will make her ways your ways and life will be happier all around.

If anybody had told you you would be stingy to your wire, you would have cut them dead, and yet when the winter days were over and the Easter bonnets came, it wasn't very nice of you when she said something of getting a new bonnet, to say: "Why, I thought you had eight or ten bonnets," and I don't think it very nice of you to ask her to tell you exactly how she spent the household money. A woman, my friend, will economize closely for the man she loves, but that man has no right to conclude that she is a partner in purse. You are wise in giving her a regular sum for household expenses. Still, I think, if you are a generous-minded man, you will never let your wife ask you for money, and you will never make her feel that what she has is not by right her own. She earns it just as much as you do, for she makes a home for you and gives such happiness as comes from no other. You laugh with disdain, as is proper, at woman's suffrage; then you must understand that the woman, who is not capable of taking the position of a man in the world, requires from men a deal of consideration.

The kiss of greeting or farewell tells a more loving tale to the wife than to the sweetheart. You must cultivate this if you wish to make your wife happy. Many a woman has died thinking that her husband did not love her, simply because he thought it unmanly to tell her in words or deeds of the love that was in his heart. My boy, it is manly, it is great and strong to take the woman you love close to you, close to your heart, to make your wife understand that every day brings her nearer to you, every hour makes you love her more and that you are ten times happier when you think of her as your wife, than when you dreamed of her as your sweetheart.

Many a little wife goes hungry for loving words, and they are so easily said. You may argue with yourself that you love her just as much, if you don't say so. My dear boy, your wife doesn't know that. She is not a mind-reader, and so you must take just a few minutes every day to make her understand that you love her better than you ever did your sweetheart. Then truly he has made her comprehend that her price is far above rubies.

But how hard it is to make a man understand that a woman appreciates little, polite attentions from him more than all the costly gifts that he can possibly buy for her.

The heart of a real woman is easily touched and a cross, sharp, sarcastic or downright rude speech from the man she loves cuts like a knife and leaves an impression that all his later sophistries fail to eradicate. Of course, the masculine argument is that there is no occasion for a woman to droop and pine when she has everything that the world can give her. But how little he is able to gauge the untold longing that lies in her breast for those trifling items that the world cannot give her, that he alone can bestow and which in the giving cost him nothing, but make her rich. Indeed, so rich that she can smilingly look misfortune in the face, rejoice in the sacrifice, soar superior to every trial and regard her lot the happiest among mortals. In the rush and hurry of his business life a man forgets the curt reply, the brusque criticism or the absolute indifference indulged in by him before leaving for the day's work.

Not so in a woman, busy though she may be in her domestic affairs, she carries a heavy heart with her from one task to another and the ready tears well to her eyes at the thought of what the man has forgotten all about by this time. Had he given her a word of praise, a lover-like look, a kiss, not perfunctory, she would have blossomed forth as a rose in the sunshine and the song of her heart would have been given utterance to by her lips, and nothing would seem hard or trying either to nands or brains. If men could only understand that the women they love are like flowers, susceptible to every chill, but responding gratefully to every mark of attention, company manners would be worn more in the intimate relation of life and there would be many happier women than at the present time exist.

RETURN OF BURNOUS.

Useful Evening Cloaks Which Will Not Soil—How They Are Made.

[London Express:] The old burnous style of theater wrap, so dear to our mothers in their youth, and so essentially practical in all cases, has once more been accepted by La Mode with enthusiasm, and, according to the breath of rumor, will prove the favorite pattern during many months to come. As a general rule, these burnous garments, fashioned for the most part of the very softest make of chiffon velvet—uncrushable and almost "unspoilable"—are carried out in rich coloring, such as browns with coppery light in them, royal purples, emerald, or tilleul green, and the wohle gamut of rose and coral pinks.

In most cases it is the velvet with a ribbed effect, or, rather, the narrowest of lines—what the French call cisele—which is most in favor, the cloak being slashed up on either side over net or mousseline, and caught together again over the open space with cords and tassels, silver or gold cord being, as a rule, preferred.

For those who travel up to town by train these burnous garments are an immense convenience not only on account of the fact that they are all-enveloping, but because there is no chance of crushing the sleeves of the evening gown. In many cases fine faced cloth is substituted for velvet, and dark, sober colors are chosen which will not soil en route, while into the lining of the cloak is put all the elaboration which is lacking in the exterior, with the result that when the fronts are thrown back the effect gained is all that can posibly be desired. As a rule, these linings are carried out in soft satin veiled with patterned chiffon, mousseline de soie, or the finest Pompadour net, elaborately gauged and gathered, or mounted in little superposed flounces one above the other, rich embroideries being often introduced as a facing to the cloaks.

On the other hand, those who are free to ignore ways and means, and the obvious drawbacks of railway traveling, have a wide field of choice before them. Some of the newest cloaks and capes are composed of clouds of chiffon, two or three veilings of different pale colors being adopted and the upper one handsomely embroidered in sparkling multi-colored paillettes, which reflect the "shot" shades of the chiffon with each movement of the wearer. Numbers of cloaks and coats, too, are being fashioned of black net showered all over with raised black chenille spots about the size of a pea. These cloaks have incrustations of ivory guipure forming a kind of border round the hem, and are often edged with a fringe of black chenille and supplemented with thick ball tassels of the same.

A feature of the wraps which are made in coat form is that they are frequently fashioned with wide surplice sleeves, as voluminous at the hem as the popular kimona sleeve.

Fashion Notes.

Nohting is prettier for young girls than the reefer or military modes in jackets.

Tucks or gathers render the plain shirtwaist more becoming to youthful figures.

The new ribbons are used to trim evening gowns as well as to make the ever popular sash and girdle.

Among the extravagant fancies are chemisettes, turn-over collars and collar-and-cuff sets of real lace—Duchesse and rose point.

A useful outdoor garment for girds ranging from four to sixteen years is a double-breasted cape in military style. The neck may be finished with a standing band or a turn-down collar, while the pointed hood is both decorative and practical.

Dressy frocks that hang in straight lines from yoke or bust depth are finding great favor, and are very attractive when becoming to the figure. A short body lining, consisting of backs and darted fronts, affords support for the deep yoke and full skirt.

Say "Yes"

To This Offer, and See the Good You Will Get.

Write us if you are ready to try Liquozone. Let us buy the first bottle for you. Let the product itself prove the good it can do.

You who are waiting don't know what you miss. There are plenty to tell you if you would ask; for millions have already used it. Some use it to get well; some to keep well. Some to cure germ disease; some as a tonic. You will use it as they do, when you learn what the product does. And you will then regret that you delayed so long.

What Liquozone Is.

The virtues of Liquozone are derived solely from gases, by a process requiring large apparatus, and from 8 to 14 days' time. No alcohol, no narcotics are in it. Chemists of the highest class direct the making. The result is to obtain from these harmless gases a powerful tonic-germicide.

The great value of Liquozone lies in the fact that it is deadly to germs, yet harmless to you. Germs are of vegetable origin; and this gas-made product, when absorbed by them, stops their activities. We publish an offer of $1000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. But to the body Liquozone is exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. It is helpful in the extreme.

That is its main distinction. Common germicides are poisons when taken internally. That is why medicine proves so nearly helpless in a germ disease. Liquozone is a tonic.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone, after hundreds of tests had been made with it. After its power had been demonstrated again and again, in the most difficult germ diseases. Then we spent, in two years, more than ten times that sum to let others test it at our expense. The result is that millions of people, scattered everywhere, have shared in the benefits of this invention.

We make the same offer to you. We ask you to prove, at our cost, how much this product means to you. Let Liquozone itself show how wrong it is to suffer from a trouble that it cures.

Germ Diseases.

Most of our sickness has, in late years, been traced to germ attacks. The list of known germ diseases now numbers about one hundred.

Some germs—as in skin troubles—directly attack the tissues. Some create toxins, causing such troubles as Rheumatism, Blood Poison, Kidney Disease and nerve weakness. Some destroy vital organs, as in Consumption. Some—like the germs of Catarrh—create inflammation; some cause indigestion. Directly or indirectly, nearly every serious ailment is a germ result. Such diseases call for Liquozone—not drugs, which can't kill germs.

THE BIDWELL COLD MOTOR.

I will supply the greatest necessity now known in the business world. The demand is so large that it will make all of us rich. If you want to get in with me on this you will have to be quick about it. The stock is selling like hot cakes.

Prof. Benson Bidwell.

Inventor of the Trolley Car System.
Inventor of the Railway Car Telephone System.
Inventor of the Bidwell Cold Motor.
Inventor of the Water Electric Generator.

I never made an unsuccessful invention. My first invention was the electric fan just as it is run all over this country in hot weather. I didn't get a patent on it, but see what a tremendous success it is.

I next invented the Trolley Car System, just as it is run today. I made it perfect and successful right from the start. It has never been improved since I invented it. Look at the millions of money it has made for the stockholders. The stock in the trolley manufacturing companies sold below 15 cents a share in 1893 and 1894. Poor men could buy that stock then. Thousands of them did buy it and every one who held onto it is a rich man today.

No Man on Earth Ever Lost a Penny He Invested With Me.

Next I invented the Railway Car Telephone System. It is a system by which passengers or train crews can telephone from still or moving cars anywhere the same as if seated in an office. It is a more perfect system in operation than any other telephone you ever saw. This is on the road toward millions for the stockholders.

This Is My Greatest Invention.

Now I have invented something bigger and greater than either of the above. It is called the Bidwell Cold Motor. It is guaranteed not to burn out and is exactly the kind of a motor the steam railroad people have been looking for. It will change all the steam railroad systems over to electric roads, because it will be cheaper to run than steam and can be run faster and more safely than any present method.

The one drawback the railroads have had in changing over to electricity has been that no motor as at present made can be run 150 miles at 60 miles an hour without burning out. It would melt the very wires.

By using the Bidwell Cold Motor a train of cars could be run from New York to San Francisco without a stop at the rate of 60 or 80 miles an hour and not even warm up and without a hitch.

Besides running faster they would be more safe and sure than steam, cost less to operate, and would last longer than any other motor now known.

The Bidwell Cold Motor is the greatest invention out since I invented the trolley car.

The Opportunity of a Lifetime.

I want to give every man and woman a chance to come in with me on this, for I expect to make millions for the stockholders out of this new patent.

The stock will be sold on the square. There will be no hocus pocus about preferred or common stock, nor any other scheme, trick or wrinkle by which anybody can be frozen out.

Every dollar invested will represent one hundred cents of the best stock. Every share will be exactly like every other share. The profit on every share will be the same as the profit on every other share. In short, there will be nothing but a square deal all around. This stock is fully paid and non-assessable.

I have a life-long reputation for square dealing. I will personally see to it that every stockholder gets a square deal on this.

In order to make it possible for every man and woman to get in with me on this big deal I have decided to sell the stock for a short time only at the following prices:

100 shares, $50; 250 shares, $125; 500 shares, $250; 1000 shares, $500; 5000 shares, $2500; not over 5000 shares at this price to any one person.

OUR MONTHLY PAYMENT PLAN.

100 shares, $9 cash, seven monthly payments of $6 each; 250 shares, $15 cash, seven monthly payments of $16 each; 500 shares, $38 cash, seven monthly payments of $31 each; 1000 shares, $60 cash, ten monthly payments of $45 each; 5000 shares, $310 cash, ten monthly payments of $224 each.

Send all money by bank draft, express money orders, P.O. order or registered letter.

Special to Electric Light Men and Manufacturers.

We are now prepared to fill your orders in our own factory. We are now manufacturing the Bidwell Cold Motor. We are taking orders for cold motors and cold generators for arc and incandescent lights on a guarantee not to burn out for 10 years.

Be a Safe and Sane Investor and Get as Much of This Stock as Your Means Will Allow. It Will Pay You a Life Income in Handsome Dividends.

More money is made every day by good judgment in investing money than by all the labor and wages in the country. Safe and shrewd investments in this stock will make fortunes.

You will never get rich on wages. No one ever did. Every man in the world who ever got big money got it either by speculation or investment. Speculation is unsafe. You stand more chance to lose than you do to make. Investments are right the other way. Make a safe investment and it is sure to bring you returns.

Don't hesitate about this stock. It is absolutely safe and sure.

Here Is a Vital Point to Remember!

There never has been a failure of consequence in electrical manufacturing. Stop and think of that. All are immensely successful. All pay big dividends and have made their investors wealthy.

This company will soon be one of the biggest in electrical manufacturing in the world. This is bound to be so, because there is not a place now where a motor or generator is used but it will have to sooner or later change for the Bidwell Cold Motor or Generator. Why? Because we make something better than any other kind now known.

These Are Cold Facts—You Must Act Quickly.

If you want some of this stock at the present low price you must come in now. There is only a small amount to be sold at this price.

I firmly believe that within five years the stock will be selling at $3 a share. This is your opportunity. It is a case of come quick or not at all.

there. He is alderman, judge

or legislator, he ever bought or "made;" he has corrupted himself also with his own money. He is a self-made boodler. But his own depravity is not his chief offense. His crime is that he represents business. And that is the crime of the Senate.

The Senate represents business. Established to represent all men of all States and of all vocations and classes, it represents those special businesses which, having corrupted cities and States, and having bought councils and legislatures for business purposes, have come into possession of seats in the United States Senate; and having those seats in the United States Senate those businesses have sent here their presidents, their counsel, their agents or their friends to represent their business. Those businesses don't have to practice bribery here; this is no common council. But the net result is the same. The Congress stands, like a common council, for business. The Congress represents honestly what the State Legislatures represent corruptly—business. Speaker Cannon is proud of it; Senator Aldrich admits it; nobody denies it.

"What else would you have us represent?" asked Mr. Aldrich.

I thought of the bought voters of Rhode Island and of the Legislature there, which, like the United States Senate, doesn't have to be bought. I thought of the legislators "retained" in Illinois; I thought of the bankers in Cincinnati silenced by deposits of public moneys and of the manufacturers made civic cowards by "protection" everywhere. I thought of able captains of industry, like H. H. Rogers, and Thomas F. Ryan, and Charles M. Schwab, made—well, what they are—by "prosperity." But what was the use of talking about character on Capitol Hill? When I was interviewing the Speaker, I referred to such things, and his "Oh, well, human nature"—showed that such men have no sense of the effects of bribery and corruption and artificial prosperity on the character of a nation of men and women. So long as business is good, all must be well.

So to Mr. Aldrich I meekly suggested that he might represent the shippers, the "little shippers" who can't get cars to ship their coal or rates on oil to enable them to compete with the trusts. And what do you think he answered? He answered that he was looking out for the little shippers at that very moment. It was on account of the shippers, not of the railroads, that he wanted to have put into the Hepburn Rate Bill an amendment providing for an appeal to the courts on the facts! (A bit of news, at last—for the shipper.)

If they represented business generally, it wouldn't be quite so bad, but they represent especially, those Senators and Congressmen, the kinds of business that want license and advantages and that corrupt government from boards of aldermen up to the United States Senate to get their license and to keep their advantages. The present tariff laws are preposterous, and both Senator Aldrich and Speaker Cannon admitted to me that the schedules should be revised. I asked them why they didn't revise them then. The Speaker gave the usual answer, the danger of reopening the whole question and hurting business. Mr. Aldrich was more candid.

"It isn't for us here to do that," he said.

"Who, then, is to do it, and where?" When I asked him that, the Senator shot me a keen glance and said he meant that public opinion must first demand it.

"But you call public opinion, 'public clamor' here in Washington," I said.

"Only when it is excited and unreasonable," he answered.

"Are you going to wait on tariff revision as you have on rate regulaton till the people clamor for what you call 'imperfect and ill-advised legislation?'"

Mr. Aldrich said the Senate hadn't waited, and he cited the Elkins law to show that it had done something. But he had to admit that neither the Elkins law nor the Hepburn bill would solve the problem.

The fact is that they can't act here until the business interests they represent will permit them to act. The Senate, which Senators call the head of the government isn't the head of the government. The Senate, like a political boss, only represents the head of the government which is Big Business. Mr. Aldrich objects to that view. He met it by citing his own case. He referred to the charge that he represented Standard Oil, and he didn't deny it; he said that he never went to see those people or received instructions from them.

"No," I answered, "and if I were they, I'd never send for you or offer to send you instructions. That wouldn't seem necessary. If I had a man like you here representing me I'd trust you to do instinctively what was right for me."

When he grasped the point that I did not mean to charge bribery or anything that he would call corruption against him or the Senate, he admitted all that need be alleged.

"Of course a man is influenced here," he said, "by the business he has been in, by the alliances he has formed and by his environment."

Well, that's all there is of it. There are Senators under suspicion (and conviction) of taking "fees" or "retainers;" the Senate has its retail trade. And, as good an authority as the Hon. Charles H. Grosvenor, member of Congress from Ohio (before reform,) told me the withdrawal by the railroads of passes had had no little to do with the revival in the House of the policy of enforcing certain railroad laws. But I want to disregard all this "cheap," "exceptional," "sporadic" corruption and get down to the bottom truth. And when Mr. Aldrich admitted that a Senator is "influenced by the business he has been in, by the alliances he has formed and by his environment," we were scraping bottom.

Senator Aldrich was a street railway magnate. Ignoring for the moment the corruption of the people of Rhode Island, which enabled him to control his State Legislature, it is enough to say that he, having that power, used it to grant his company privileges which his people opposed and which netted him and his associates a fortune each. Ignoring also his alliance with the Rockefeller family, it is safe to say that his sympathy naturally would be with the Standard Oil or any other business that wanted grants, subsidies or a tariff which would net millions. It is natural that Senator Kean and Senator Foraker or any other Senator in "the business they have been in," should prick up their ears—as they do—whenever a railroad or a land grant, a tariff or a subsidy is suggested in their chamber.

"We represent ourselves," said Senator Aldrich, and pointing across the corridor to the Senate one day, he added, "I venture to say there is not a Senator in on that floor who does not represent himself."

This is an extreme statement and the Senator contradicted it a moment later when he was contrasting the East and the West in the matter of railroad control of States. But let's accept his statement for the moment: The Senators represent themselves. The best of the worst of them do. They aren't owned and they don't have to be bribed. They represent themselves. But when they represent themselves most truly they represent the corrupt Legislatures, the corrupted people and the corrupting businesses of all their States; and they represent those things with conscience clear. But look at the net result:

"UNITED STATES SENATE,
"Washington, D. C., Feb. 9, 1903.

"Dear Sir: Yours of the 19th ultimo came duly to hand. It has happened as I feared; the Interstate Commerce Committee will not report the measure giving the power to the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix rates. It is expecting too much from human nature that Senators whose every association is with the great railroad corporations and whose political lives largely depend upon them, should in good faith approve a measure that would to an extent make the railroads a servant of the people and to be subject to the decision of the commission when a question of rates is raised. The Senate Committee is by a decided majority men who bear those relations to railroads. I hope that some time in the future, the committee will be so constituted that legislation of the character mentioned will issue from it, but I am afraid that you and I will be many years older when that occurs.

"Yours truly,

This is a letter not intended for publication from a member of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce to a shipper. Since the date of it, public clamor and a few changes in personnel, have altered, a little, the tone of the committee, but we have seen that it still is a "Railroads' Committee." It "approved" (though hardly in "good faith,") "a measure that would to an extent make the railroads a servant of the people." But watch the Senate pass that bill as I watched it pass the pure food bill. The pure food bill was directed against the most injurious frauds, but the frauds affected only the health of the nation, whereas the bill affected "business," "important interests," "capital invested in great plants and employing thousands of men." For seventeen years those Senators have held off that bill, and when, this session, "public clamor" got after them, and they had to do something, they hemmed and hawed, discussed the Constitution and "fixed" the bill to protect this "industry" and that; and then, when they had done all that they dared to it, they passed that bill against frauds in foods and drink, with much the same feeling that Gladstone expressed when he disestablished the English church in Ireland.

Meanwhile a ship subsidy bill—a bill to make you and me put up the difference between loss and profit in an unprofitable business, that bill sailed like a ship under full sail on its annual cruise across the waters of the Senate, where scowling seas and contrary winds await the rate regulation bill. I asked a Senator to introduce a bill to subsidize all writers who "exposed" the Senate, but he laughed. That was ridiculous. But the "exposure business" is more worthy of support out of the United States Treasury than that of the Standard Oil Company which has to run its own tank ship anyhow and shouldn't have to be paid for "floating the American flag."

What the Senate, what Washington needs, is a preacher of ordinary ethics, not an exposer of morals. The spirit of the place reminds one of the life insurance officers who really seem not to have known that they were doing anything wrong. Washington isn't as bad as New York; politics isn't as corrupt as big business. Business men are improved by a little public service here. I remember that Paul Morton, formerly of the Santa Fé Railroad, when he was called out of the Cabinet to the presidency of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, asked me if I didn't think that bribery was bad and should be stopped. He apparently had got some light here. And the Union League Club of New York was startled when Elihu Root, having given up the Secretaryship of War, to return to the practice of law, announced in a set speech that business men should stop giving bribes; that they should learn that there were other, better ways to get what they want.

So the spirit of Washington, and of high politics, is capable of raising the tone of New York and high finance. Nevertheless, somebody ought to come here and teach the Senate what corruption is, and that bribery isn't the only form thereof. Let me try to show one point.

Suppose I should find a certain Senator, say Alger, of Michigan, was opposed to the Statehood bill, and, hearing as a reason, that he owned certain property down there which paid practically no taxes, suppose I should run down that clue, and discover and prove with an exhibit of documentary evidence that the suspicion was correct. That would be sensational, wouldn't it? It ought to be, for it is corruption; it is a personal consideration influencing the vote of a Senator. Well, it's true. I don't have to go down there to prove it. Senator Alger won't deny it. He said it himself in open debate on the floor of the Senate, with all the world listening. He interrupted Senator Beveridge, who was advocating the bill, to interject this most statesmanlike argument.

"I will make some investments there that I will sell in a minute if this goes through."

"Oh!" said Senator Beveridge, "after that there is nothing more to be said."

It is charged, and generally believed, that Senator Thomas C. Platt, the president of an express company, represents that business in the Senate. Now, if President Platt should pay to Senator Platt a bribe to beat a bill against the express business, he would know he would be corrupting that Senator and committing a crime. But when the President-Senator himself, without any unnecessary bribery, opposes a bill because it affects the express business, he is as innocent of wrongdoing as Senator Alger or the late John A. McCall. That sort of corruption he has confessed.

Charles W. Post, a business man, devised at his leisure once, a cheap, easy post card for the transmission through the mails of small money orders. He offered it to Congress, and the House Committee liked its ingenious simplicity. Mr. Post's bill started off well. But it stopped. It was stuck, and it wouldn't come out. Why? "Platt," they told him. "The express companies wanted to keep that business." Mr. Post sent two young men to Senator Platt, one to ask questions, the other to be a witness to the Senator's answers. The two young men tell in an affidavit how they called on the Senator, handed him a copy of the bill and asked him if he had ever seen it. They say:

"Senator Platt replied: 'I have seen it. I am against it because it conflicts with my express money order business.' He added, that while he was not in the Senate to represent the United States Express Company, at the same time he could not favor and would fight any measure that seemed against the interests of the express companies."

Now this is a light not only upon Senator Platt, but upon the Senate and Washington, for when the said Mr. Post filed said affidavit, with charges, asking the Senate to expel the said Platt, the town laughed and the Senate did nothing. It was as funny as the first charges against Senator Mitchell, deceased. The charge might be true, but the express business was Platt's graft, and by that unwritten law which is known as the "courtesy of the Senate," no man in that body shall offer to interfere with the graft of any other man in that body, and if some common citizen of the United States "attacks" it, there or anywhere else in the world of graft, the power of all of the other grafts combine to protect him. That's business. That's the system. Politicians have the same law; they haven't any nice phrase for it, but they say that "sewers is Gaffney's, yours is gas, mine is garbage. You scratch me and I'll scratch you, and we'll both scratch Gaffney, who'll scratch both of us. See? What? Oh, well, human nature."

I came down here to find out whether the national government represented the common interests of the country and wise men laughed. I don't blame them. It was funny. They knew that the Federal government stood for just what the corrupted city and State governments stood for—business. And I had my suspicions, of course. But I didn't realize how obvious the whole thing was. I was looking for facts which were common knowledge and when I began to ask Senators and Representatives about them they didn't deny; they confessed; they defended those facts. They don't know how corrupt they are. Washington is corrupt and proud of it. The national government is the ideal of a business nation; it is a business government by business men in the interest of business. And that's what's the matter with it and with all of us. We have a class government and we don't know it. We have a government, not of the people, by the people, for the people, but of the people, by the lawyers, the friends and the presidents of corporations for the special, privileged interest and we want it to keep the corporations within bounds.

It won't. When Senator Aldrich complained of the "Socialist waves," which critics of public men were raising all over the country, I answered that not the critics of the Senate, but the Senate and the interests which the Senate represented were bringing on that discontent.

"How?" he asked.

"By being selfish, by being incapable of rising above your own interests. There is no reason why bankers and corporation lawyers and railroad directors and insurance men shouldn't sit in the Senate, but they ought when there to legislate in the common interests. But you can't. It isn't in you. You'll hang on to all you've got and you'll grab more until you have exasperated a people who, no more honest than the Senate or the railroads, are more patient and much fairer."

"But what would you have us do?" he asked.

"I don't know," I answered. "A people should leave legislation to their legislators."

But I do know what to do, only it isn't anything that can be done in Washington. Washington is only a result, a result of local folly, negligence and our own unconscious corruption. Reform in the United States government must begin out in the United States, and the first thing to do, this fall, is to exercise great care in the selection of congressmen. Don't send here men to run your errands in the departments. Don't return a man because he has got your friend a job or your district a federal building. That's the way they bribe us with our own money. Send here men who have been tried out in some local office and who, you know, will help to break up the Speaker's combine in the House and make that branch of Congress deliberative, like the Senate, and representative.

But the great thing to do is to reform the Senate, and the reason that is so important is because it can't be done except by reforming first the city, county and State governments. Hard? Yes, but there is no short cut to reform and to bawl at the Senate is like baying at the moon. Go for the State legislatures. Make your legislators represent truly the common interest of all the people of your State and they will send here naturally United States Senators who will represent truly and naturally the common interests of all the people of the United States without being driven by a Rough Rider, heeled with "public clamor."

WHAT STATE SOCIALISTS AND TOTEMITES HAVE DONE FOR AUSTRALIA.

By Allen Kelly.

[SPECIAL COMMISSIONER OF THE TIMES.]

XVI.

THE chief of the New South Wales Intelligence Department, an official specifically authorized to speak for the government, said to me: "The trend of government in Australia is toward State Socialism." In the course of a long interview, he said nothing to justify the inference that he regarded the socialistic drift with disapproval or alarm. The remark quoted is, and was meant to be, a simple statement of fact. It is official information, not the theory nor the conclusion of an outside observer or critic of Australian affairs.

The chief also informed me that the Tories were opposing desperately the socialistic movement, from which it is fair to infer that all opposition to the socialistic programme formulated by the Political Labor League and accepted in part by the Deakin ministry as a condition of holding office with the support of the Labor party, is officially ascribed to "Toryism." And yet the present government of New South Wales is not dominated by the extreme Socialists. As the chief of the information bureau explained, the pace set by previous Socialist-Labor ministries was too rapid, and the brake was put on at the last election.

GRAFT IN LAND PURCHASE.

The land-resumption policy went wrong at the start. There was fraud in the purchase by government of the Myall Creek estate. Land officials having the matter in hand were charged with "grafting" and taking "rake-offs," and the programme of land nationalization got a setback, but it is the purpose of the government to pursue the policy of resumption, to adopt drastic measures to prevent the aggregation of large estates and to limit the area of land which a person may own. Many land owners, not reassured by the present government's disavowal of intention to confiscate land, and possibly fearing that the precipitate Socialists may regain control and put their theories into practice, are cutting up their estates and offering them for sale to settlers, and the government is flooded with offers of large tracts.

Another government official with whom I talked—a student of political economy—was not so sure of the trend of Australian politics. "Australia," he said, "is in a transition stage, and where we are going will not be known for a generation. At present we have a federation of States, and the question of State rights is becoming troublesome at the start. In the course of evolution of government, the State must disappear as the Province did in New Zealand."

But the speculations of students and theorists on the future of Australia were not quite what I wanted. Having insufficient time for an extended tour of observation, the best I could do was to find out what Australians knew of the conditions produced by socialistic legislation and what they thought of Socialist-Labor government.

AFRAID OF FREAK LEGISLATION.

One of Sydney's prominent business men, interested actively in banking and insurance, said there was no doubt that capital had been discouraged from investment in Australian enterprises by the freak legislation, but perhaps capital was more frightened than hurt. The actual injury had not been great, but men having capital were deterred from putting it into business that could be affected by legislation. They didn't know what the Labor government might take it into its head to do next.

Notwithstanding the paralyzing effects of erratic government, the country was prosperous. Because of good seasons and big crops, New South Wales was $75,000,000 better off at the close of 1905 than it was eighteen months before. Australia was a land of feast or famine, and in the good years no socialistic legislation could hurt. The great productiveness of the country prevented serious harm.

Government ownership of railroads made operation costly. Some lines did not pay and never would, as they were built through waste country to open up remote mining districts. But the government had to build railroads at first because private capital could not have made them pay without charging ruinous rates and retarding development. The railroads had been beneficial in the concessions to farmers and settlers in hard times. The government did not hesitate to make discriminations in favor of a class that needed help in emergencies, such as the free transportation of stock from arid districts to grass land during the drought.

The banker did not think the Arbitration Act had steadied industries or given confidence to capital. It had not been worked out, and there was no certainty that the unions would abide by the court's awards. The unions asked for more than it was practicable to grant, and demanded rigid application of rules when compromises should be made.

RAILROADS AND POLITICS.

The editor of the leading conservative daily newspaper of Sydney did not think the Socialist movement had gone far enough or developed strength enough to cause serious alarm for the future of Australia. Government management of the railroads was not entirely satisfactory. All government work was low in efficiency and high in cost, but the railroads would not have been built by private enterprise, and possibly the benefits balanced the evils.

Counsel for a large association of business men said bluntly that the government railroads were used as political machines. There was log-rolling in Parliament to get lines built through useless country to placate constituencies, and such lines were frequently of doubtful utility and costly to operate. The public service was overloaded with clerks. Every one wa slooking for an easy government job, and if the Socialists had their way, more than half the population would be in the public service and living on the productive labor of the rest.

OVERLOADED WITH STATESMEN.

Similar views were expressed by a journalist who has taken a leading part in the organization of an anti-Socialist party and in the work of arousing the people of New South Wales from their civic lethargy. No government-owned public enterprise, he said, was managed on sound business principles. The government began operating railroads in 1855, and there had been a deficit in the interest account every year since, with the exception of 1881-2. The railroads of New South Wales had cost $200,000,000, and the deficit amounted to $150,000,000. The country was overloaded with statesmen. Counting the six State Parliaments and the Commonwealth Parliament, there were 671 men making laws for less than four million people. New South Wales would make an effort to reduce the number of legislators and their pay. The salary of $1500 was an inducement to small politicians and labor agitators to seek places in Parliament solely for the easy money.

The class having permanent interest in the prosperity of the country had taken too little active interest in politics, with the result that the government was becoming "Americanized" and the apparent prospect for the future was a mixture of socialism and corruption. Parliaments had been falling steadily lower in character and in public respect, and the tendency of legislation was alarmingly narrow-minded and mischievous. The extreme Socialists had gained control of the Labor party, and, not content to take up one thing at a time and try out their alleged remedies, insisted on putting into immediate operation the whole scheme of collectivism.

THE CLOSED DOOR.

Opposition has been provoked more by what the Socialist Laborites say they mean to do than by what they have done. They have put through an immigration restriction act, which excludes illiterates, Asiatics, Pacific Islanders and contract laborers, and is so administered as to excite much heated controversy. It is asserted that only the dark-skin races can do hard work in the canefields of Queensland, and that the exclusion of Pacific Islanders will prevent absolutely the development of a large part of Northern Australia. Certainly the trades-unionists of Sydney and Melbourne will not go into the tropics to cultivate rice and sugar cane, and if Asiatics and blacks may not be employed, a great area of potentially rich land must remain a desert.

The question is similar to the one raised in the United States concerning labor on the Panama Canal. White men can't do the work, and if the law will not permit the employment of Chinese or blacks under contract, the work cannot be done. A proposed solution of the difficulty in Australia is the establishment of a tropical line, north of which races adapted to the climate may be allowed to work on plantations, but so far the Socialist-Laborites have given no intimation of willingness to modify the restriction law to that extent.

LEGALIZED BOYCOTT.

At the last session of the Federal Parliament, the Laborites succeeded in legalizing the totem, or union label, by inserting into the Trades Mark Bill a clause making the label the property of the unions and providing that it may be affixed to union-made goods only with consent of the union. An employer may run a strictly union shop, but he cannot use the label unless the unions give him permission.

The professed purpose of the unions is to discourage "sweating," but the evident end aimed at is to make the totem a legalized instrument of the boycott. The unions are demanding statutory preference of unionists as a part of the arbitration law, and if they get that in conjunction with the totem, they will have the closed shop with a lead-pipe cinch, and "arbitration" will be a mockery and a farce.

SOCIALIST-LABOR IDEALS.

Another significant performance of the Protectionist-Labor combine in Parliament was the adoption in the Senate of a motion that the refining and wholesale distribution of sugar be made a government monopoly. In New Zealand, when monopolies threaten to become oppressive, the government enters into competition with them to regulate prices in the natural way of trade. The Australian Socialists propose to cure the evils of monopoly by making the monopoly more absolute and forbidding all competition. When the government monopolizes manufacturing and commerce, and the trades unions forbid any man to work unless he is branded with the totem, the ideal of the Socialist-Labor party will be realized in Australia.

A New Vocation.

Half a dozen clever girls in New York are earning substantial incomes as "book digesters." Each of them has for her clientele women too busy with social engagements to find time for reading, yet who wish to keep abreast of current literature. The "digester" carefully follows noteworthy publications in fiction, art, science, history or religion. Once or twice a week she calls at the home of a "client" to review the contents of the books read. She is careful to memorize any epigram or witty saying that her client might introduce effectively in conversation. "It is remarkable how little leisure some women have," said a Vassar graduate who has adopted the new calling. "They can seldom give me half an hour all to myself. I am asked to call at the same hour as the hair dresser, the manicure or the chiropodist, and in specially gay seasons all three of these attendants may be at work upon her while I sit at a little distance and post her upon current books."—[Kansas City Journal.

Tactful Quaker.

Some time ago there lived a gentle man of indolent habits, who spent his time visiting among his friends. After wearing out his welcome in his own neighborhood he thought he would visit an old Quaker friend some twenty miles distant.

On his arrival he was cordially received by the Quaker, who, thinking the visitor had taken much pains to come so far to see him, treated him with a great deal of attention and politeness for several days.

As the visitor showed no signs of leaving, the Quaker became uneasy, but bore it with patience until the eighth day, when he said to him:

"My friend, I am afraid thee will never come again."

"Oh, yes, I shall," said the visitor. "I have enjoyed my visit very much, and shall certainly come again."

"But," said the Quaker, "if thee will never leave, how can thee come again?"—[Black and White.

His Prize.

A Pittsburgh widower, while away from home on a business trip, met and married a lady who, though famed for her goodness of heart, would be spoken of even by her friends as "plain." The man believed that she would be a kind mother to his two children, however, and as she was also possessed of a fair amount of this world's goods, was not inclined to expect the beauty of the peach in a potato.

After his marriage he telegraphed to the eldest of the children, a girl of 15: "Have won a prize. Am married. Will be home tomorrow."

When the bride and groom arrived the children were watching at the door, and at sight of their future mother gave a little gasp of consternation.

The second child, a boy, nudged his sister and whispered:

"Say, Nell, that must have been the consolation prize that pa got!"—[Harper's Weekly.

Gigantic Purchase of Easy Chairs, Rockers and Morris Chairs

Two Carloads at About Half Price

This big shipment was ordered by a local concern for Christmas selling and through delay it did not arrive until after Christmas time. The concern having refused to accept the goods, the manufacturers accepted an offer from Brent's amounting to about 50c on the dollar.

No Other Los Angeles Concern Dared to Pay Spot Cash for so Large a Consignment

The goods in this lot are exceptionally high grade. The prices we quote may seem sensational, but you have our assurance that every reduction is exactly as quoted.

Mahogany; Weathered Oak; Quartered Oak

The stock from which this furniture is made comprises mahogany, weathered oak and quartered oak. There is an immense variety of different styles, including the popular Holland and mission. To illustrate prices:

Big $12 Leather Seat Rocker $7.25

This is not a small rocker, but an extra large size, with a guaranteed genuine leather seat with fine steel springs. The wood is a selected grade of quartered oak highly polished. No Trust store in the city can duplicate this rocker for less than $12. Brent's Anti-Trust Price, $7.25.

Over twenty other rocker bargains in this special purchase, coming in all sorts of material and styles, reduced equally with style mentioned above on sale at $8, $8.75, $9.50, $10 and up.

Massive $15.00 Morris Chairs $8.75

These are not the skimpy, flimsy Morris chairs you usually find at a low price, but big, substantial, roomy chairs made with solid frames, spring seats, high grade throughout. No Trust store sells them for less than $15. Price at Brent's, $8.75.

Other Morris chairs in this special consignment at $9.75, $10, $11 and up. Every chair worth at least 50 per cent. more.

We Request a Little Time for Delivery

Although we have only recently added ten extra teams to our delivery system we are unable to keep pace with the growth of our business and we beg to request patrons to grant us an extra day or so in making deliveries of these special purchases.

THE OPEN SHOP—Rabid Union Trouble-Makers on Promotion Committe

CURRENT COMMENT.

THE Los Angeles Examiner, a few days ago, printed a communication from one D. L. Loughborough of the Puritan Press, comprising a tissue of lies about the Citizens' Alliance and its methods. So long as this tirade was printed nowhere except in Hearst's yellow horror, it was practically harmless. But the San Francisco Bulletin has given it publicity, hence some of its many falsehoods should be refuted, lest the public may be misled.

With a great flourish of headlines, the Bulletin announces that a Los Angeles printing house has "surrendered to save its business;" that "the Los Angeles Typographical Union has received another convert from the Typothetae;" and that "the Puritan Press, whose manager is D. L. Loughborough, throws a small-sized bomb into the camp of the employing printers" by his communication, which the Bulletin quotes entire.

The alleged "bomb" is, indeed, a "small-sized" affair, and its explosion was like that of a kernel of popcorn in a slow fire. The truth of the matter is that the so-called "Puritan Press" is a dinky little job office, whose two union printers walked out at the beginning of the strike, leaving only the two proprietors, both of whom are printers and do most of their own work. They deserted the union at the time of the strike, as a drowning man catches at a straw, for their "business" was in a bad way. Now they have flopped back into the union for a like mercenary purpose—in the hope of securing pecuniary benefit (of which they stand very much in need) from that source. Thus is the "Puritan Press" guilty of double treason—treason to the union and treason to the Employing Printers' Association. The only men at work in the establishment, at last accounts, were the two proprietors, and they were not over busy. There is a well-grounded rumor that the partnership will soon be dissolved, and that the "Puritan Press" will soon be a thing of the past. So much for the great "union victory."

With their usual pertinacity the labor union jawsmiths have secured the introduction in Congress of several bills which would be nothing more nor less than special or class legislation if they were enacted into law, and which are grossly unjust to employers and to the general public in their scope and intent. One of these obnoxious measures is the Gilbert bill (H. R. 9328,) which is also known as the "Moderate Anti-Junction Bill." This bill provides in effect that in labor disputes no injunction or temporary restraining order shall be issued without notice to the defendants. The plain object is to delay the issuance of a restraining order by the court in time to prevent the consummation of a contemplated crime. The person or persons against whom the injunction is asked can evade indefinitely the serving of a notice, while, in the meantime, the crime or crimes which it is sought to prevent may go on unchecked. The measure is vicious in its intent, and is designed to promote rather than to prevent crime. Besides, it is made to apply only to labor disputes, and so it is clearly class legislation.

Another bill is pending which is even worse than the Gilbert bill. It was introduced by Representative Little of Arkansas on December 6, 1905, and provides that in labor disputes no boycotting agreement, picketing or intimidation shall be considered in restraint of trade or commerce, and that no restraining order or injunction shall be issued with relation thereto. This bill, if it should become a law, would permit labor union conspirators to harass their non-union competitors at will. It would confer upon them special privileges enjoyed by no other class of men in the nation. Boycotting, picketing and intimidation would be legalized and protected by the law when committed in the name of unionism. Such a law would create a privileged class, exempt from many of the legal obligations and duties of other citizens. "Of course," as American Industries pertinently observes, "there is no justification whatever for singling out the perpetrators of labor violences for specially favored treatment at the hands of the courts; and, equally, there is no justification for taking away from injunctions, as applying to all kinds of disputes, their essential element, namely, promptness of action."

Wrong cannot be transformed into right by a legal enactment. Actions which are in truth "in restraint of trade" would not be less so if a law were enacted declaring them to be in promotion of trade. Conspiracy would still be conspiracy if this bill were passed declaring it not to be conspiracy. The eternal verities are above and beyond the assumed power of human laws to change them. The enjoining power of the courts is as old as law itself, and as necessary to the administration of justice. It seems incredible that Congress could so abase itself before the threats of trades-unionism as to enact these vicious and ex-parte laws. But there is no telling. Politics and supposed expediency make strange bedfellows.

A correspondent writes from Minneapolis that the so-called strike has now been on in that city for six months, that the open shop was firmly established during the first month of the trouble. Fully 25 per cent. of the men who went out on strike at the behest of the leaders in Indianapolis have apologized to their employers for the action they were compelled to take. The union leaders assured them that they would all get their old jobs back within a week or two—that they had full control of the situation, that already a number of the members local Typothetae were on the run, etc. Misled by these false statements, many workmen severed connections that had been harmonious and pleasant for five, ten, and fifteen years. Only six union men had the backbone to stand pat with their best friends—the employers. This number was increased to ten in the course of about three weeks, and now there are seventeen men working in open shops who were members of the local union in September of last year. Besides these seventeen local ex-union men (some of whom are proprietors, but who were not allowed to operate their own plants) about twenty men who were formerly members of other Typographical Unions, have said good-by to the union, and are now well satisfied to work in open shops.

About 140 men were affected by the strike last October. Within two weeks 87 men were working, within a month 103 were working, and within two months 128 men were accomplishing more than were the 140 men who went out on strike. The inconvenience of having new men forced many proprietors to take hold of their composing rooms and do some heavy hustling themselves. They thus came into possession of their own in a double sense. The condition of things as they were gradually uncovered in many shops was enough to make the proprietors stagger. Hundreds of forms were found standing that foremen or workmen had hidden, and had had jobs reset time and again to keep the force as full as possible. The proprietors found many instances of confidence misplaced in union foremen. The cry went up from all the members of the Typothetae: "Whatever settlement may be made, we will have non-union foremen from this on." All this in the first month of the strike. After the first month it began to dawn upon the members of the Typothetae that there could be no such thing as a compromise—that there could be no "settlement"—that the union men were not the indispensables they made themselves out to be—that new men showed more willingness and determination to "make good" than had been expected possible. After the first month it was seen that most of the hundred men working were grasping the opportunities they had never had before, and were determined to win out with the employers. Some were weak, of course, some were made weak by the pickets who filled them with whisky and dope, and still others were overpowered by numbers and frightened into weakness. But a large proportion made the most of their new-found opportunities, and have fought the fight shoulder to shoulder with the members of the Typothetae.

The Minneapolis Typothetae consists of about thirty firms—there are only two fair-sized plants outside the Typothetae, and possibly forty-five one-man shops which have signed the eight-hour contract, but whose owners work ten, twelve or more hours, as they did before the strike. The Typothetae members pay about 90 per cent. of the wages paid to job printers in Minneapolis. Their shops are now all fully manned with competents, the work done is in all cases equal, and in some instances superior, to that turned out by the union men. The proprietors have secured a freedom from obnoxious shop rules they never dreamed possible, and they fully appreciate their liberty from the shackles they had almost involuntarily permitted the union to forge upon them from time to time in the past ten years. Not more than two members would now take back any of their former workmen on any conditions whatever, and not one member of the Minneapolis Typothetae will discharge a present employé to make room for the best man that walked out at the behest of the union last October.

And the cost of the strike. When all the records are in, it will be found that Minneapolis will be the banner city in the Union on three counts: (1) The brief period that elapsed between the strike call and normal conditions; (2) The low financial cost to the Typothetae; and (3) The determination of the employers to stand by the men who stood by them during the first troublous weeks of the strike. The open shop is now firmly established for all time in the composing rooms controlled by members of the Minneapolis Typothetae.

"The Grapple," by Grace MacGowan Cook, published by L. C. Page & Co., Boston, is an intensely interesting story of the most momentous question of the day: "Shall the industrial world have an open shop?" With a clear, comprehensive knowledge of the claims and the rights of both employer and the employed, capital and labor, unionism per se and its antithesis, poverty and crime, the deductions of this virile author must be commended for their sound reasoning, utter impartiality and tender sympthy. These teachings, if heeded by all parties concerned, would assure industrial peace to the world at large, happiness and plenty in the home of the toiler, proper remuneration to him whose wealth has been the fuel in the fire of progress, political equality for all, and stability of our strength as a nation, that the greatest birthright of the American generations yet unborn may be the "open shop."

It is not prosy, dry reading by any means, for there is a delicately woven love story that has a happy ending after the vicissitudes attendant upon the strike in the Illinois coal region several years ago. The main character is Mark Strong—successively miner, mine boss, superintendent and operator, the delineation of whose character and actions is the basis of the author's reasoning in the questions involved. Rioting, the district under martial law, and the importation of negroes as strike-breakers give plenty of spirited action. Considered in its entirety, the book is an excellent study in sociology for the lay reader who has given but little heed to the questions between capital and labor; and its principles will well apply to all such troubles of the present.

GROSS INSULT TO CALIFORNIA.

Totem Knockers Placed on Promotion Committee.

Purposes of the Committee Thereby Perverted.

Prospect That It Will Soon Be Disrupted.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—Another insult has been tendered California and the city of San Francisco by the action of the California Promotion Committee in appointing on its Executve Committee that notorious labor agitator, Pinhead McCarthy, and on its San Francisco Affairs Committee, Mayor Schmitz and O. A. Tvietmoe, a rabid anarchist and secretary of the San Francisco Labor Council. The election of this unsavory bunch has aroused the indignation of the respectable element who are donating large sums to keep Rufus P. Jennings and his corps of money-eaters at work. Jennings has made an unfortunate mistake (as far as he is concerned) in allowing this disgraceful aggregation of three to obtain a foothold on the Executive Committee of an organization which claims to have the welfare of the State of California at heart.

A PERVERSION OF PURPOSE.

Just what purpose the management of the Promotion Committee had in view in naming Pinhead McCarthy and Anarchist Tvietmoe as members of the California Promotion Committee, is not quite clear to any one except perhaps the management itself. The California Promotion Committee is supposed to be an institution calculated to promote the best interests of the State and to bring people into the State. It is supposed to advertise the State in the East, with a view to placing her attractive features before people who desire to leave the East to take up their abode on the Pacific Coast.

The Promotion Committee is maintained by the mercantile and manufacturing interests of San Francisco. The money these people put up every year is supposed to be expended intelligently, and now comes Manager Jennings with a proposition to name three of the most notorious disturbers and agitators in the State to honorary places upon the committee, and that, too, in the face of the fact that every paper published by organized labor throughout the United States today is carrying advertisements warning people to keep away from California, claiming that there are already more mechanics than there are jobs. The same interests are carrying paid advertisements in the Hearst papers and such other community-destroying institutions as will accept their money, warning everybody to keep away from California.

HOW THEY PROMOTE.

The following circular letter, spread broadcast through the East by the California State Federation of Labor, shows how the crowd, to which McCarthy, Schmitz and Tvietmoe belong, attempted to prevent Easterners from settling in California:

"Brothers and Sisters: This circular is sent to you to make known to you the true condition of labor on the Pacific Coast. The Citizens' Alliance, the California Promotion Society, and the ever-ready agents of the enemies of trades unions—the employment agencies—have for some time been flooding the Eastern States and foreign countries with lying and misleading advertisements regarding the Pacific Coast, and California in particular. The transport companies, eager for profit, have aided greatly in these frauds perpetrated upon the working people. The Convention of the California State Federation of Labor, held in Fresno, Cal., January 4-9, 1904, having in view the facts of this important matter, adopted the following resolution and ordered its circulation among the workers of the country:

"Whereas, Through scarcity of work there are at present hundreds of workingmen in Fresno and thousands on the Pacific Coast who cannot obtain employment; and

"Whereas, By the false representation of real estate brokers, railroad companies, the Merchants' Exchanges and other boomers and promoters, there is a constant influx of workingmen from the Eastern and Middle States, often consuming all their limited means to reach the Coast, relying upon the alluring misrepresentations above referred to; they expect to find immediate and remunerative employment, but instead they are in the sad plight of strangers without money or work; and

"Whereas, Said deceit works great injury, both to our brothers of the East, as well as to the overstocked labor market on the Coast; therefore, be it

"Resolved, By the Labor Protective Union of Fresno, that we call the attention of the State Federation of Labor, now in session in this city, to this evil, and request said honorable body to take such action as in their judgment is necessary to counteract this imposition, which is working untold injury to labor east and west.

"This resolution, emanating from the central labor body of California, is an expression of the sentiment of the workers, and brings forcibly to the reader the true condition of affairs in the industrial field on the Pacific Coast. There is nothing to encourage working people to come to California except the misrepresentations of those who wish to break up unions on this Coast, or make a profit by supplying and transporting help for that purpose. By order of the convention.

"Yours fraternally,

[Signed]

"C. B. BENHAM,

"Secretary-Treasurer California State Federation of Labor."

A prominent business man of San Francisco, who was elected on the Executive Committee of the California Promotion Committee at the same time as were McCarthy, Schmitz and Tvietmoe, was surprised when told by The Times correspondent that the three union agitators were also on the committtee. He said: "A representative of the California Promotion Committee requested me to become a member of the executive board along with several other business men, among them being James D. Phelan, Andrea Sbarboro, I. W. Hellman Jr., and Richard Tobin. When I agreed to serve I did not know that I would have to associate with such a gang as you mention. I can assure you that the election of McCarthy, Schmitz and Tvietmoe will mean the disruption of the committee within ninety days."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

VIEWS ON "MOLLY MAGUIREISM IN THE FAR WEST."

General Condemnation of the Western Federation of Assassins—"An Outlaw Organization"—"A Conspiracy Against the Freedom of Every Man to Work."

Under the title of "Mollie Maguires in the West," the Literary Digest for March 10 contains an interesting resumé of press opinions on the subject of the Moyer-Haywood arrests, as follows:

"The press of the country, and especially of the West, are fully aroused over the charges implicating the Western Federation of Miners in a series of assassinations and murderous plots that the New York Globe thinks borders on nihilism, and which the Hartford Courant likens to the 'reign of terror established in the Pennsylvania coal regions by the Mollie Maguires, more than thirty years ago.' The present crisis in the affairs of this labor union, which many newspapers have without reservation held largely responsible for the disorders and crimes in Colorado in the strike of 1904, is due to the confession of Harry Orchard, who acknowledges murdering ex-Gov. Steunenberg of Idaho on December 30, 1905, and dynamiting fourteen non-union miners at a railway station at Independence, Colo., on June 6, 1904. Steunenberg, it will be remembered, had been active in attempting to restrain violence and sustain the law in the Coeur-d'Alene mining riots of 1889. Of this confession Gov. Gooding of Idaho says that 'when it is made public in detail, it will shock civilization.'

"In what is published of this confession Orchard charges that he was hired to kill the ex-Governor by the 'inner circle' of the Western Federation of Miners. He claims to have attempted to dynamite Justices Gabbert and Goddard of the Colorado Supreme Court, former Gov. Peabody of Colorado and many others, including militia officers, and charges the leaders of the federation with a long list of crimes. 'The confession is a recital of as hideous a story as the annals of crime have ever produced,' says the Louisville Courier-Journal, which regards the confession as the truth, since many of the details have been verified by the police, even to the finding of bombs in the places described. As a result of this confession William D. Haywood, secretary-treasurer of the Federation of Miners; Charles H. Moyer, president, and George A. Pettibone of the same union, have been arrested in Denver and taken to Boise City, Idaho, to stand trial. The union is reported to be determined to fight the case to the end.

"Many of the papers are reserved in their discussion of these arrests, fearing to prejudice the case, yet they are loud in the denunciation of such acts of violence. 'A very few such occurrences,' says the New York Globe, 'would cause a popular uprising and sweep the country clean of unionism for many years to come,' and the Portland Oregonian remarks that 'it is now a fight between every American citizen who believes in right, justice and freedom and the fiends who, with bomb, stiletto and pistol, seek to make it impossible for any American citizen to enjoy these blessings.' If conviction should follow, the Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman-Review declares, the Western Federation would be regarded by citizens 'as an outlaw organization,' and the Louisville Courier-Journal calls upon the authorities to 'search out every member of the band and prosecute him mercilessly.'

"Colorado has probably suffered more than any other State from the alleged crimes of the Western Federation of Miners, and in looking over the newspapers of that State we find that most of them are not prejudging the case, but anxiously awaiting the outcome of the trial. 'What the people desire more than anything else is that the truth relating to the horrible crimes in Colorado and in Idaho shall be made known,' says the Pueblo Chieftain. So, too, thinks the Colorado Springs Gazette. But in Denver we find three of the dailies trying to settle the case among themselves. The Republican accuses the News and the Times of trying to shield the accused federation officials. This the News and the Times deny emphatically. The Times denounces the action of Gov. MacDonald in permitting the accused men to be taken from the State 'without due process of law,' and the Republican says that the Times is furious because the prisoners did not have the opportunity to find some technical flaw in the procedure 'which would furnish a pretext for discharging them on habeas corpus and thus effectually prevent a trial on its merits.' The News prints the story that Orchard was not a union man, but the tool of the 'Mine Owners' Association,' the bitter opponents of the miners, and it adds that it will refrain from any editorial opinion until all the facts are known. The Republican holds them responsible for a good many of the crimes in Colorado, and declares that they attempted to 'establish the will of the association as the law of every mining camp in the Rocky Mountains.' To quote:

"'The last act in the terrible tragedy of Colorado's attempt to maintain its authority against the conspiracy of the Western Federation of Miners to rule in Cripple Creek, Telluride and other mining districts has been begun. The conspiracy of murder, by which some members of the federation hoped to reëstablish their power and to wreak vengeance upon judges and other officials who maintained the law, has been exposed, and it now remains to determine what punishment shall be assessed against the conspirators.

"'The Western Federation of Miners is a conspiracy against the freedom of every man to work when he sees proper to do so and an attempt to establish the will of the association as the law of every mining camp in the Rocky Mountains. The Cripple-Creek strike was called for the purpose of forcing recognition of the authority of the Western Federation and in no sense to improve the condition of the men who were at that time working in the mines of the district. Because it failed in this particular, murder was resorted to as a means of intimidating working men and their employers, and later for the purpose of punishing the officials and others who maintained the dignity of the State and enforced the law.

"'The federation having been overthrown completely in Colorado, its members retained no hope of regaining their footing except by establishing a reign of terror through the use of explosives. This was the conspiracy, and it extended over the entire Rocky Mountain region. . . .

"'It was a conspiracy against the freedom of every citizen, and especially against the right of every man to work without waiting for the consent or approval of any organization. Colorado gained a great victory for civil liberty when it suppressed the disorderly element in Cripple Creek and Telluride and demonstrated that the law was stronger than any criminal organization or conspiracy. But the fruits of that victory would be lost were the conspirators to be permitted to revenge themselves upon the officials by whose courage and devotion to duty this campaign for law and order was won.'"

PERSONAL—HAVE YOUR HANDS HONestly read and the many future events of your life accurately prognosticated by the celebrated, skillful SCIENTIFIC PALMIST.

PROF C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE, acknowledged by hundreds of the best intellects—his patrons—as the finest and most remarkable reader of hands in the country, and pronounced superior to Cheiro.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common whatever with the fictitious readings of illiterate, unreliable, humbug palmists, "psychics," fortune tellers, etc., who, by their vile and disgraceful practices of these sciences, having never given them serious study, degrade and drag them into the mire of charlotry, fortune telling and fraud. This is greatly to be regretted, as it is largely on account of these humbug readers—and their dishonest lives—that the TRUE PALMIST AND GENUINE READER has been made to suffer, regardless of the splendid ethical and humanitarian work he may do, or the benefits that a right use of these sciences—the sublimest and noblest studies that ever engrosed the attention of mortals—may be made to yield. PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, TOO, LIKE OTHER LEGITIMATE PROFESSIONS, ARE NOT ADVERTISED IN A SENSATIONAL MANNER. THE TRUE READER HOLDS HIS PROFESSION AS SACRED AS THAT OF YOUR FAMILY PHYSICIAN.

A SATISFACTORY READING can only be had from one possessing high intellectual and moral attainments, and who has thoroughly mastered the laws of these wonderful sciences through years of critical study, large experience, trained judgment, etc. All kinds of diseases can be accurately diagnosed. Careful advice given in domestic, love affairs, etc.; also of financial success or failure, changes, deaths, investments, vocation in life, and many other important things you should know, which cannot be mentioned here.

PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of his profession, having read, FROM LIFE, more celebrated people than any other palmist. He does not deceive the public in this respect. E. H. Sothern says: "I find your reading coincides with Cheiro's." Frederick Warde says: "Your reading of my hands was most satisfactory. Your knowledge and skill in palmistry is REMARKABLE, and gave me a much more exalted idea of that science than I have hitherto entertained." Paul Gilmore, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading; it is by far the most scientific I have ever had." Juliet Crosby, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Valerie Bergere, actress, says: "I am greatly pleased with your reading; with you, palmistry is not only a science, but an art." PROF. ALTHOUSE also read Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, Gov. Pardee, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, Joaquin Miller, Louis James, Ysaye, Sousa, Innes, Chiaffarelli, Susan B. Anthony, Nance O'Neil, Calve, Modjeska, Julia Marlowe, Caruso, Sembrich, Gadski, Jefferson, Edison, Chas. B. Hanford, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Lillian Russell, Anna Held and hundreds of others. Intelligent, high class patronage solicited—those capable of appreciating the superior qualities of a fine reader. ALL READINGS ARE STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.

ASTROLOGY AND HOROSCOPE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE has also given many years of critical study to, and is an experienced practitioner in, the science of MODERN ASTROLOGY, the casting of horoscopes, etc. The horoscope is decidedly a guide in life, showing remarkable things when PROPERLY CAST—from the position of the planets at your birth; in fact, tells everything about one's self worth knowing, being in truth, one of the best investments the world offers. YOUR HOROSCOPE is also a key to the character of others, and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you.

SCIENTIFIC PREDICTIONS—EMBRACING ALL QUESTIONS OF LIFE—new undertakings, or information desired for the present, immediate future and events up to the close of life, as calculated through these sciences and the trained judgment of PROF. ALTHOUSE WILL STAGGER THE SENSES. PROF. ALTHOUSE, IN HIS LARGE AND SUCCESSFUL PRACTICE, has acquired a varied experience of his fellow-men in life. HIS WONDERFUL PROFICIENCY IN HAND READING AND CASTING OF HOROSCOPES ENABLES HIM TO SEE FOR THE FUTURE, BOTH THE GOOD AND EVIL. THE MOST PRIVATE CONFIDENCE ARE REPOSED IN HIM, AND HIS ADVICE IS SOUGHT IN THE MOST DIFFICULT AND CRITICAL CIRCUMSTANCES. Daily and evenings. Sunday 11 to 3. STUDIO PARLORS, 245½ S. Spring st. 18

PERSONAL—
MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST., Suite 17, by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND RELIABLE HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

Mrs. Masson's knowledge of palmistry is founded upon SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES, aided by years of EARNEST STUDY and PATIENT PERSONAL INVESTIGATION; Her statements do not consist of vague generalities, which tell you nothing, but are EXACT, PRACTICAL AND TO THE POINT—give PAST as well as FUTURE events, and cannot fail to be of the greatest benefit to you.

They will assist you in the struggle for recognition by teaching you your possibilities and limitations; save you years of fruitless struggles in the wrong vocation by pointing out the line of work you are best fitted for, and LEAD YOU TO WEALTH THROUGH INFORMATION AS TO INVESTMENTS AND ENTERPRISES QUITE UNOBTAINABLE THROUGH OTHER SOURCES.

Changes of business, losses and gains, lawsuits, deaths, marriages, separations and in fact all that life holds for you is plainly written in your hand; it is simply a question of correct interpretation.

(Mrs. Masson's methods of hand reading do not require that the names of her patrons shall be disclosed, nor does she seek to discover the identity of her clients; they may, therefore, rest assured that no publicity whatever attends upon her readings, and that their confidence will be maintained inviolate.)

to give every one an opportunity to test his powers and to demonstrate to the utmost satisfaction of all that he has no equal as a life reader.

Those who wish to take advantage of this low fee must call at once.

NO CHARGE UNLESS SATISFACTORY.

Prof. Avondale will positively make no charge for his services unless you are entirely satisfied and find him superior to any palmist or psychic who has ever visited the city; tells your full name, what you called for and when you will will marry.

HE WILL TELL YOU
HOW TO ATTAIN SUCCESS.

Whether your present business investments will be successful; he tells you everything, good or bad; you hear the truth and nothing but the truth. If you are discontented, unhappy, discouraged, unsuccessful or in ill health, call on Avondale and he will aid you in life's greatest blessings—health, wealth and happiness. Satisfaction guaranteed or no fee accepted.

HOW TO OVERCOME TROUBLES.

Your past, your present life and your entire future and everything can be told by consulting Prof. Avondale, the world-eminent psychic, greatest master of occult science and psychic force the world has ever known.

His predictions are always correct, and never fail to come true, as thousands of people will testify.

Does everything seem to go wrong and has fortune ever smiled on you? Has your life been full of "ups and downs?" Do not despair, as you can learn the true road to success and happiness, for both await you if you will only know how, when and where to find them which will be revealed to you.

How to live happy and contented the rest of your life and be fortunate. How to obtain the money you want and what you are best adapted for. Tells what you have done, what you are doing now, and what you are going to do. All told without asking a single question.

SEE PROF. AVONDALE.

If you have already made a mistake, thrown away your money and lost confidence through dealing with much-advertised and self-styled palmists and psychics and their cheap claptrap methods, start from the beginning and consult Prof. Avondale. He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect, if nothing can be done for you he will not take one cent of your money.

PROF. AVONDALE HAS MADE A LIFE STUDY OF HIS WORK, AND IS PREPARED TO ADVISE AND ASSIST YOU, NO MATTER WHAT YOUR TROUBLES ARE; IN HIS CAPACITY THERE IS NO GUESS WORK; EVERY PROCEDURE IS DEFINITE AND EXACT, AND THE RESULT IS CERTAIN.

A SECRET YOU SHOULD KNOW. THE POWER OF CONTROL—HOW TO B EMASTER AND RULER OF YOUR OWN HOME AND AFFAIRS. HOW TO OCCUPY THE POSITION IN LIFE YOU ARE QUALIFIED FOR. KNOW THE SECRET OF CONTROL—THE POWER TO INSPIRE SUCCESS IN BUSINESS, SOCIAL AND FINANCIAL LIFE? "ARISE, THROW OFF THE SHACKLES." EXCHANGE SORROW FOR JOY, DARKNESS FOR LIGHT. "BE MASTER OF YOUR OWN DESTINY."

"Opportunity, Master of Human Destinies am I."

The three propositions here listed today are more than good investments. They are rare opportunities seldom met with. They will warrant the most searching investigation. If you mean business, come to see me.

$1100 buys practically a one-quarter interest in a good paying manufacturing concern, with the position of secretary and treasurer, at a salary of $25 a week. The proposition will warrant the strictest investigation.

$10,000 secures a working interest in one of the most practical inventions on the market, that if properly handled will be the leading article in its line, in the world, and without doubt in a few years will become a million dollar property. The $10,000 now desired will be used in the business, and the party furnishing the funds can have direct supervision of its expenditure. This opening appeals particularly to any man with judgment in practical mechanics.

SPLENDID OPENING FOR SALESMAN.

$10,000 would be used in advertising a patented remedy now meeting with ready sale wherever introduced. Has been on the market five years, sales steadily increasing from the start, and last year paid a profit of 6 per cent. over and above all expenses. This remedy has been introduced on the Coast only. This additional money is to be used for developing further territory, and to a capable salesman, it would be a splendid opening.

WOULD YOU INVEST $2500 IF CONVINCED that you would receive 50 per cent. on your investment yearly, besides your money back for a period of three years? This is no "wild cat" scheme, but a proposition of GENUINE MERIT, open to the most searching investigation. Your money secured by deed to real estate; no services necessary. We would advise any one with this amount of capital to invest, to at least take the time to call or address us upon this proposition; you will not be disappointed. REMEMBER, it is no speculative scheme or mining deal, but a business proposition in the strictest sense. For full particulars see Investment Dept., F. D. PARKER CO., Room 6 Orpheum Theater Bldg., 227 S. Spring st. 18

WE HAVE A PROPOSITION REQUIRING the investment of $2500, without services, that will positively return over 100 per cent. yearly, besides investment back, for a period of four years. Money secured by deed to real estate. This is no scheme, but a bona-fide business proposition that will stand thorough investigation and indorsed by Chamber of Commerce. Investment Dept. F. D. PARKER CO., room 6, Orpheum Theater Bldg., 227 S. Spring st. 18

UNEQUALED SERVICE.

PACIFIC COAST MINES
BUREAU ARE THE ONLY LOS ANGELES
BROKERS WHO FURNISH QUOTATIONS ON NEVADA
STOCKS, BY WIRE, TWICE A DAY, FROM SAN FRANCISCO.

COMMENCING WEDNESDAY, MARCH 21, WE WILL RECEIVE DIRECT TELEGRAPHIC REPORTS FROM THE FLOOR OF THE MINING EXCHANGE AT SAN FRANCISCO, GIVING PRICES OF ALL STOCKS AT CLOSE OF MORNING AND AFTERNOON SESSIONS OF THE EXCHANGE. WE ARE THE ONLY BROKERS IN LOS ANGELES PROVIDING SUCH SERVICE AND WE SEND YOU OUR DAILY QUOTATION SHEET FREE ON REQUEST.

In order to meet the demands of our clients and the public, we have installed an unequaled report service on all listed and unlisted Nevada mining stocks; our information is authentic, disinterested and of the profit-making kind; we are in touch with men on the ground in the camps of Goldfield, Tonopah, Bullfrog, Manhattan and Searchlight, Nev.; we know the best stocks to buy and are competent to guide your investments into avenues of profit; we charge a uniform commission and handle the following forms of accounts—

First—Cash purchases or sales where the client instructs us what to buy or sell and when.

Second—Margin purchases of any of the listed stocks; you can buy or sell on 30, 60 90-day contracts and the margin required is 33 1-3 per cent. of the purchase price.

Third—Discretionary accounts which are our specialty. In this form of accounts the client deposits from $50 to $5000 to be invested in such stocks as in our judgment will yield the greatest profits; we have made large sums for clients on these discretionary accounts, for we follow the market closely and know when to get in and when to get out; the profits on discretionary accounts are remitted weekly to the investor and you have the right to call for all of your money, plus accrued profits, at any time.

STOCKS WE RECOMMEND.

Tonopah district—Tonopah-Midway is good for a heavy advance and is paying quarterly dividends of 5c a share.

Montana Tonopah can be bought with assurance that it will soon reach $5 a share; several million dollars worth of ore is blocked out.

We also recommend Golden Anchor and Jim Butler; among the ground floor buys, Tonopah-Wall Street is a sure profit-maker; it will be listed in San Francisco and New York very soon.

SEARCHLIGHT.

Buy Cyrus Noble at 60c and Parallel at market; they are reliable companies and both stocks are money-makers; there is something big on in Parallel; watch it climb.

If you are interested in securing further information, we will gladly furnish you with maps, facts and other data.

MANHATTAN.

Buy Greater Manhattan Consolidated on the ground floor at 3 cents. It's a sure winner and will make you money fast.

Granny at 24c to 25c is another splendid buy. It will go higher.

BONDS.

We advise when these securities reach par to sell them, especially when such bonds are only bringing 4 to 5 per cent., as bonds mature you cannot receive more than the principal in any event. Sell your bonds and buy the shares in the same corporation; the shares pay higher dividends generally and then you get the advance besides, which sometimes double in a very short period.

SEARCHLIGHT—

We advise all holders of Searchlight-Parallel to keep their shares in this active company; the stock has advanced several points the past week, and we predict a steady advance right along for some time to come.

STOCKS.

Royal Quartz Mining Company, mines in Sierra County, California.

50,000 shares or any part, at ten cents per share, in a developed mine, not a prospect. $728,000 taken out by former owner; $150,000 is a safe estimate of thirty thousand tons free milling ore now blocked out, ready to mill. This is a certainty, not a chance. The company has water power, and timber, roads built, two 1200 ft. tunnels in; also foundations for mill and buildings. Now want money to equip the mine with modern machinery and commence crushing ore to put property on income basis. Remember we offer those first shares of treasury stock at ten cents, for equipment purposes, with development work done and the mine a proven property. Your opportunity is now. Send for particulars. A postal will bring it. WM. N. HOLWAY, 211 Grant Bldg., Los Angeles.

OPPORTUNITY TO MAKE 400 PER CENT. sure, on investments of from $100 to $1000; I own producing gold mine ready to pay dividends; I own producing gold mine ready to pay dividends as soon as little more machinery is added; willing to take in few parties on bedrock basis; only need a little money; you can see bullion, ore, maps, reports, photographs, etc., by addressing B, box 73, TIMES OFFICE. 18

"AN UNEQUALED OPPORTUNITY."

You can get in with a syndicate of the best representative business and mining men in the city on ground-floor terms. THIS DESERVES YOUR ATTENTION, whoever you may be, a banker, lawyer, doctor or merchant, or the man with a few hundred dollars. Here is the best place to make your dollars grow, and do it in a very short time. You can buy a small interest in a business that we believe will make every man in it a comfortable income for life. We can give you facts and explain this to you by causing you very little trouble in calling at our offices. You will only have this privilege until the 24th of March, then it will cost you just 150 per cent. more. We explain the reasons why nothing was ever offered in this city at such reasonable figures that has the merit and the great profitable future and sure of success as this. We furnish the best of reference as to our ability, integrity, etc. Call at 327-28 PACIFIC ELECTRIC BLDG.

A GUARANTEED INVESTMENT.

$250,000 has been spent in development work on the TABER MINE.

The mine will be producing in three months.

We are making strong representations as to the richness of this mine.

We are selling stock conditional on the truth of our representation.

We will pay all expenses of your examination.

For full particulars call and see our fiscal agent.

PAN-AMERICAN LINE INTERESTS CAPITAL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DENVER (Colo.) March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Denver millionaires are interested in the plan to build a railroad from Seattle to Bering Straits, as a part of the scheme of Andrew Carnegie to establish the Pan-American Railway system. Homer L. Mechlenberg of Seattle is on his way to New York to consult with Carnegie's engineers regarding the Pan-American Railroad.

"I am not at liberty," said Mechlenberg, "to divulge the names of the capitalists interested in the plan, but I will say that a $50,000,000 company will be incorporated. Agents of this company are in Russia seeking permission from the Czar to tunnel Bering Straits. The object is to continue the proposed railway to join with the Trans-Siberian system."

POLITICAL.

WILL SCHWAB TAKE HOOPS OFF?

THOMAS NOONAN HAS SENATORIAL SENSATION.

Says Ex-President of the Steel Trust Will "Tap the Biggest Barrel Ever Seen in the West" in Campaign for Senator Newland's Seat. Has Purchased Mine and Home.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OMAHA (Neb.) March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Charles M. Schwab, ex-president of the steel trust, will be a candidate for the United States Senate from Nevada, to succeed Senator Newlands, and will "tap the biggest barrel that ever was unhooped in the West," according to a statement made here today by Thomas Noonan, a mining man and politician from Bullfrog, Nev., who is in Omaha. Noonan said:

"Mr. Schwab, on his recent trip to Nevada, you know, bought the Montgomery Shoshone mine at Bullfrog for $5,000,000, and he gave it out to some of his friends then that he was going to run for the United States Senate, to succeed Senator Newlands next winter.

"Now, mind you, while I am thoroughly convinced Schwab will run for the Senate and will tap the biggest barrel that ever was unhooped out there, I don't think he will be elected. Nevada is for Nevadans. We don't have to import men to put in the United States Senate. Senator Newlands will not be a candidate again, and the very reason is that he couldn't possibly be elected because he is no longer a resident of Nevada, but of California. He has established a home at Oakland; his wife is a California woman.

"Money will flow like water out in Nevada when Schwab turns loose. But it won't get Mr. Schwab anything. We have plenty of men of our own with barrels, who ain't afraid to spend it, either, and we will put one of these fellows in Newlands's place. I don't just know who it will be. It'll be a live one, all right.

"We are glad to have Charley Schwab out there with us, and maybe in time we can hand him something in the shape of political office, but he must get his feet toughened first."

"Has Mr. Schwab bought a home yet?" was asked.

"Has he bought a home? Well, now, I guess he must have; he gave a fellow $250,000 for a little thing he called a home, and said he's going to make the only real place in the State."

PARKER'S SUGGESTION.

SOUTHERNERS DUBIOUS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Justice Alton B. Parker's suggestion that the time has come when the Democratic party should go South for a Presidential candidate has not produced a chord among the southern members of the House of Representatives that strikes in thorough harmony with the utterances of the recent candidate of their party. From some members of the House who discussed the subject, today, the impression was gathered that they looked upon Judge Parker's statement as an effort to head off any sentiment that might be in process of formulation favoring the choice of either Bryan or Hearst as an available candidate in 1908.

SENATOR BAILEY SUGGESTED.

While many members deplore the idea that Judge Parker or any other should inadvertently perpetuate the theory that the party is divided by geographical lines, they all admit that, within the boundaries of the section known as the "South" there are many men of sufficient caliber to make them candidates of their party in a national campaign. Judge Parker's utterances came as such a surprise to the Democrats that they have hardly had time to consider them in connection with the southern men who might be the best candidates, but if there is any one so far who leads in the mind of these members, that man would appear to be Senator Bailey of Texas.

BRYAN FAVORED.

One of the most prominent Democrats in the House made the statement that if a nominating convention were to be held within the next fortnight, he believed that Bryan would undoubtedly be the choice of the Democrats. This member, while declining to permit his name to be used, has positive views on the subject.

"The trouble with Mr. Bryan is," said he, "that, good Democrat though he is, he fails to realize the changed conditions and to see what is apparent to every other member of his party. He does not believe to this day that he ought to abandon the idea of free coinage of silver. Mr. Bryan never modifies an idea when he once gets hold of it; he clings to it from time to eternity, and his refusal to see that the money question is settled, for a long time, at least, whether wisely or not, would make him a candidate who would undoubtedly handicap the party were he to be nominated again.

"If the South has an available candidate, let him go into the convention on an equal footing with the others, not as a southern man, but as an American and a sound Democrat. The talk of candidates at this time is inopportune. What we should do is to bend every energy to electing the next House of Representatives, and after we have secured it, to conduct public business so as to prove our ability to administer the affairs of this government if the people intrust that duty to us."

SKIRMISH WITH THE PRETENDER.

MOROCCAN TROOPS KILL TWO AND WOUND SEVEN.

Aspirant to the Throne Preparing to Make Attack Upon the Capital. No Meeting at Algeciras Yesterday. Switzerland Not Willing to Furnish Police Chief.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ORAN (Algeria) March 17.—The forces of the pretender to the throne of Morocco have had another skirmish with the Moroccan troops, the former losing two men and seven injured. It is reported that the pretender is preparing to make an attack upon Fez, the capital.

SWITZERLAND NOT WILLING.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PARIS, March 17.—Official advices show that Switzerland has not been consulted and does not approve of the Austro-German plan for placing a Swiss commander over the Franco-Spanish police in Morocco.

ALGECIRAS (Spain) March 17.—Neither the Moroccan conference nor the committees met today. Everything has been deferred until the French and Germans agree on the remaining details.

GERMAN INSISTENCE CRITICISED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Advices received at the State Department from Algeciras contain criticism of the German insistence on the adoption, especially without modification, of the Austrian proposal for the policing of Morocco. Although not voting on any question involving European politics, this government is averse to the complicating of the system for the policing of the Moroccan territory, and provided the simplicity, of the scheme can be preserved, is well content to entrust the mission to a force of French and Spanish officers who would be responsible to the Diplomatic Corps at Tangier for effective service in caring for the interests of all nations. There is authoritative information that eventually Germany, having assured herself of the internationality of the police system, will assent to modifications of the Austrian proposal.

TRAIN JUMPS TRACK.

Five Passengers and Baggagemen Injured When Cars on Monon Go Over Embankment.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LOUISVILLE (Ky.) March 17.—Train No. 6 on the Monon, which left Louisville for Chicago this morning was derailed at Horseshoe Bend. Five passengers and the baggageman were injured, according to the official report, but no one killed.

The engine and tender jumped the track while the train was rounding a sharp curve and the entire train went down an embankment.

Demand for Moderate-Priced Homes.

The month of March promises to be the busiest in the building line ever known in the city. During the first ten days the permits issued amounted in the way of cost to about $850,000. There was one item of a concrete building at $60,000, one of a steel structure at $100,000, and two asylums costing nearly $250,000. But in this list of March building, as in the list for each month in the whole year past, the remarkable item has been month by month that of moderate cost homes. Cottages, bungalows of one story and one and half stories, and houses of two stories, costing all the way from $1000 to perhaps $3500, have vastly outnumbered and surpassed in cost all the other items in the list. This is a thing to regard with much satisfaction. It indicates that the working people and people engaged in business in a small way, are to a very great extent securing their own homes. The more citizens we have who are home owners the better the city will be in every respect. It counts for the stability, morality, and the intelligence of the community. The man who owns the roof which shelters his family will be found in most cases to be a law-abiding, thoroughly moral, and intelligent person, as compared with the average non-home owner. The children who grow up under their own father's roof, and that a separate house, have a better opportunity to grow up right than the one which must make the best of conditions in the densely congested sections of the city, in flats and apartments. Such a family will be better intellectually, morally, and physically.

The Acre Lot.

The real estate agents who are handling subdivisions where the lots are an acre or nearly that in area, report an increasing demand for this class of property. Of course such subdivisions must be in close proximity to electric car service to the center of the city. Not only people of very moderate means, who look upon an acre lot as an opportunity to prduce a large portion of the food consumed in the family and so reduce the expenses of living by a very appreciable amount, but well-to-do people are looking to these acre lots as the ideal place for a home. It gives such ample breathing space, such an opportunity for effective landscape gardening, and also such a certainty of increased value in the time to come, that it is attracting a great deal of attention. In many of these subdivisions the acre of ground can be obtained for from $600 up to $1000. Whatever may be the drawbacks or setbacks in business and the reactions in real estate, a piece of ground of this ample area close to the city of Los Angeles is not likely to be cheaper again. It may not double in value in a year or two; but the way the population is increasing in Southern California there is nothing risked in guessing that five years from today, in the most desirable of these subdivisions, the acre lot will be worth five times as much as it is today.

Magnificent Developments.

What is going on in the San Gabriel Valley is worthy of very careful attention. H. E. Huntington and his associates control an exceedingly large portion of that beautiful valley. On Oak Knoll and on the old Shorb place some of these associates and friends of Mr. Huntington's are just beginning the erection of most magnificent homes. On Oak Knoll last week half a dozen of these modern palaces were begun. The cost of the houses runs from $15,000 to $30,000. In other parts of the San Gabriel Valley, notably just below Alhambra, the Huntington Land Company have hundreds of acres subdivided into five-acre plots, held at $5000 per plot. All over the valley homes of this type are going to swarm in the next five to ten years. There will be a dense population there of people of great wealth. Owners of property not classed as "fancy" in that valley are not uninterested in this promised development. With a dense population of people of such great wealth, the land all over the valley will become highly desirable for the production of fruit and vegetables, hay and grain, for which there will be an immediate market every day in the year, right at home.

Building Restrictions.

There is a great deal of inquiry about the effectiveness of building restrictions in given subdivisions. There is a great deal of confusion about these building restrictions in many instances. Persons seeking a home desire to have such restrictions suitable to their own conditions in life. One home seeker is not satisfied unless the building restrictions set the house 100 feet back from the street, and require the building of a home to cost not less than $20,000. People in moderate circumstances are content with having houses 15, 20, to 30 feet back from the lot line, and the cost fixed at from $1500 to $5000, according to their ability to build for themselves. New purchasers in any subdivision should look well to the exact conditions of these restrictions. In many subdivisions there are general restrictions put upon nearly all the lots, but here and there will be left perhaps one, two, or more lots, dotted all over the subdivision, on which there is no restriction at all. This is a manifest injustice to those who buy lots under the impression that the restrictions apply to every lot in the subdivision. A subdivision laid out more than ten years ago is working now great injury and injustice upon property owners there because of these very conditions. Building restrictions are placed generally upon the lots in the subdivision. But in two or three instances there are from one to two lots here and there in the subdivision uttterly unrestricted. Home seekers have bought lots in the subdivision and put up handsome houses under the restrictions, thinking that all lots were subject to the same conditions as to building. Recently it has developed that these certain lots were left unrestricted. The injustice is evident. A person buying a lot and building a house, at a total cost of $8000 or $9000, under the impression that the lot adjoining must be similarly improved, is naturaly indignant to find that a livery stable, Chinese wash house, or butcher shop may be erected on the lot next adjoining them. It would be well if certificates of title were made to show whether the building restrictions applying to the lot apply to all other lots in the neighborhood. Otherwise the person whose lot is restricted is at an evident and great disadvantage compared with the person who owns the lot next adjoining.

THE NEW JEVNE HOUSE.

The building to be erected by Maj. John H. Norton, from plans by Parkinson & Bergstrom, at the southwest corner of Sixth street and Broadway, will be one of the best structures yet erected in the city of Los Angeles, and will be a class "A" building, with a steel frame and terra cotta arch floors, with all structural steel thoroughly fireproofed. The steel and foundations are all prepared for a ten-story building. The building will be six stories at the present time, but the seventh-story floor will be put in place, and all columns extend above the seventh floor, ready for proceding with the remaining four stories without interfering with the business of the occupants.

The building has been leased by Maj. Norton to the H. Jevne Company for a long term of years, and the entire building will be used for their business, making one of the finest and largest buildings for the purpose in the world.

The building is being built of the very best material throughout. The exterior will be of Matt finished terra cotta in two colors, a cream-white and light buff. The base of the building will be polished granite, the terra cotta will extend from the granite base to the top of the cornice, showing the quality of the building, as it is not usual to build the cornice of terra cotta.

All windows on Broadway and Sixth street will be plate glass, except the transoms over the store windows, which will be Luxifer Prism glass.

The ground floor will be finished with a Mosaic tile surface throughout, and the upper floors will be finished with a concrete surface. There will be no wood used of any description, except for the door and window trim, in the building. All stairs will be of reinforced concrete and encased in tile walls.

There are to be three elevators. The size of the building will be 145 feet on Sixth street, 80 on Broadway and 80-foot frontage on Vincent Place, Vincent Place being 40 feet wide, gives practically a frontage on three streets. The building will be lighted by electricity, and provided with steam-heating apparatus and be thoroughly up to date in every detail. H. Jevne came to Los Angeles in 1883, and opened a grocery store in a modest way on Spring street, opposite Franklin. Later he moved to the elegant store in the Wilcox building, as fine as any in America. This will be continued, the new six-story building here being used for the enlarged business of the firm. A wholsale department will be conducted at the new place.

THESE ALL ACRES.

Buy to Subdivide.

Robert Marsh & Co. buy from Leslie F Gay twenty-five acres between San Fernando street, Idell and Cypress avenues, and between the Cottage Home tract and the Jeffries tract, for $50,000. The firm are to improve and subdivide the tract at once and put it on the market for sale. The tract is to be subdivided into 200 lots, and is to be one of the finest medium-priced tracts in the city. The Cottage Home tract, immediately adjoining on the north, was put on by the same firm and holds the record for the large number of houses being built in six months.

Buy Orange Groves.

Charles L. Hubbard & Co. report the sale of a five-and one-half-acre orange ranch at Corona for J. Coleman to a local investor, for $4000. Also a ten-acre ranch in Corona from H. M. Gould to J. S. Turner, for $6000.

Glendale Acres Bought.

Oliver & Miller report the sale of twenty-five acres lying north of and adjoining the "Glendale Home Tract," from C. E. and B. C. Thom, to L. L. Bowen and W. C. Norman for a consideration of $800 per acre. They also report the sale of fifteen acres about one block west of the Pacific Electric depot at Glendale, bounded by First street on the north, Second street on the south and Central avenue on the east, from L. C. Brand and H. E. Huntington to L. H. Mitchell and W. E. Brown for $850 per acre. This tract is being subdivided by Oliver & Miller into fifty-foot lots to sell at from $350 up, including improvements, as the "Glendale Home Tract."

Big Acreage Deal.

Among the big real-estate transactions of the past week was the sale, through W. I. Hollingsworth & Co., M. E. Post to Elmer E. Cole, of 1300 acres adjacent to Athens, the consideration being in the neighborhood of $275,000. This property lies along Western avenue between the Huntington-Redondo lines. It is understood that it is the intention of the new owners to place the land on the market in smaller tracts in the near future.

For Further Subdivision.

A syndicate is reported to have bought the Cunningham tract of seven acres between Irving and Florence avenues, Huntington Park for the quoted price of $125,000. It will be cut into 318 building lots.

One-Hundred-Acre Deal.

Lloyd F. Lewis and Frank K. Rule report the sale of 100 acres at Ocean Park, from Robert F. Jones, to a local syndicate comprising Col. J. M. Green, E. J. Daniels and others. This property lies directly east of Ocean Park on a high mesa from fifty to sixty feet higher than the adjoining property and commands a sweeping view of the surrounding country. It is nineteen blocks from the ocean, fronting the National boulevard and adjoining the Burkhardt property and the Erkenbrecher Syndicate Tract. It will be subdivided and placed on the market in acre and half-acre lots by the agents above named. Consideration $60,000.

$7500—Do you want the swellest bungalow in the city? Well, here it is, and it has oak floors, beautiful large living-room, with artistic mantel, built-in bookcases; the drawing-room is white enamel and very pretty; there are many features embodied in the construction and arrangement of this house that should be seen to be appreciated; there are 7 rooms; 2 bedrooms, and it is an east front on Normandie near Adams. Terms to suit.

$7800—This beautiful home has 8 large rooms and is an east front, with flowers and vines. Oak floors, rich paneling and artistic buffet. Attractive combination fixtures. Porcelain bath; 2 toilets; woodwork downstairs, Flemish oak finish; upstairs, white enamel. On Romeo near Adams. This is a delightful house for receptions, on account of the liberal arrangement of the rooms. It is very cheap for price. Lot 50x150.

$8500—On Arapahoe, east front, between 12th and Pico, 8 rooms with 4 bedrooms; beautifully decorated walls; natural wood finish; all in fine condition; basement cemented and bricked; splendid furnace; you know what lots are worth here, and when you see the house you will be convinced that it is a bargain. 60x150 to alley.

$15,000—Facing Sunset Park; swell home of 10 rooms; hardwood floors; 5 bedrooms; this is one of the elegant homes of Los Angeles and without doubt would please any one wanting a home of this magnitude. It is in the midst of beautiful surroundings on Wilshire blvd.

$18,400—On W. Adams Heights; east front; grand view of the mountains and city; this house has 12 rooms, 6 bedrooms; hardwood floors; in fact, every appointment of elegance and convenience; this is a superb place, 75x200.

$20,000—On W. 28th in the swellest location; one of the handsomest homes of Los Angeles is offered for sale at a very reasonable price; oak floors throughout; easy and beautiful oak stairway; large sunny rooms; 3 bathrooms; 3 toilets; broad, beautiful upper and lower halls; spacious and elegant rooms on first floor; large sunny bedchambers on second floor, with bath and toilet, the entire upper part accessible from back stairs without going through front hall or using main stairway; the ground space between this and the other homes insures plenty of sunshine at all times; any one interested in a home of this magnitude should see it at once, as it positively will be sold; lot 115x172, together with 60x172 on 27th.

$25,000—On South Figueroa near Adams; this elegant home of 12 rooms is just the place for entertaining. The spacious drawing-room, library, dining-room and den are all entered from the grand hall. The walls are delicately tinted; the wood work all natural finish, the floors polished. There are 4 baths, 3 toilets, 7 lavatories; the chambers are all large and sunny and are on the second floor. The barn is large enough for four horses and several carriages; also servants' quarters above. Owner would take lots up to $10,000, and make satisfactory arrangements as to balance. Lot 60x190 to 20-foot alley.

$28,000—This beautiful home, located on one of the most exclusive streets in the Westlake section, can be had for a price that is way below what it could be duplicated for. It is new, elegant, substantial and aristocratic. Another advantage is that there are no vacant lots around it, as all are improved with handsome homes. It has hardwood floors, oak woodwork, spacious and beautiful rooms, and every other appointment that is to be found in a thoroughly up-to-date house of 15 rooms. The price is ridiculously low, and it will undoubtedly be sold very soon. Lot 100x150 to alley.

THE VERY BEST
HIGH-CLASS RESIDENCE PROPERTY,
WEST AND SOUTHWEST.

PRETTY COTTAGE HOME.

On W. 37th st., one block from the University of Southern California, this large and especially well-built cottage of 6 rooms, besides halls, may be had at a very low figure; all rooms are large and sunny; beautiful floors; strictly modern throughout; one year old; lot 50x135; finely improved; price $3400.

ON HOBART BOULEVARD.

We want to emphasize the fact that this home is an extraordinary offering. There are 8 charming rooms, 5 below stairs, 3 above; all large, all cosily arranged and all with full-height ceilings, completely planned; hardwood floors in reception-room; large living-room; paneled dining-room; very handsome built-in appointments; 2 verandas and an upper balcony. Lot 50x133 to alley; terraced with cement retaining wall, almost new, and a bargain, at $4200.

AN ARTISTIC HOME.

But the outward beauty of this house is only one point in its favor. It is attractive, clear through, especially so to the woman who likes to care for her own home. The rooms below stairs are roomy reception hall, parlor, library, dining-room, pass pantry and kitchen with also a cemented basement; oak floors and handsome built-in appointments; above stairs 3 large bedrooms, bath, linen and ventilated clothes closets, etc.; price only $4750 at terms of $1000 cash.

ATTRACTIVE CORNER HOME.

This 8-room house has just been completed, and for modern ideas and complete detail of construction we have never seen its equal. There are 4 rooms and reception hall below stairs, 4 fine bedrooms, bath, immense closets, etc., above. Oak floors throughout below stairs; flemish oak finish; buffet, seats, outside chimney, etc.; combination fixtures; pass pantry, basement cemented and furnace pipes; lot 50x131, on quiet S.W. corner; price $5000; on terms of $1000 cash.

ON HARVARD BOULEVARD.

The high western mesa holds no better built, completer or more comfortable home than this. The 8 rooms, besides halls, impress one at once with their air of staunch and substantial construction. The frontage is easterly, on a fine lot, half a block from 3-minute car service. Oak floors throughout below stairs, basement, furnace pipes, pass pantry, barn, etc., etc. Above stairs 4 large sunny bedrooms and a fine bath. To duplicate this today would cost $500 more than $6250 necessary to purchase.

NEAR UNION AVE.

This is close-in property, near 3 car lines, the biggest outlying market in the city, and the house is one of those large, well-planned handsome-appearing homes that bear fine value on the face of them. It's strongly built, ready to move right into without doing a thing to it, and every one of the 8 large rooms look bright and cheerful and convenient. It's an easy house to take care of. There are oak floors, a handsome brick fireplace, modern built-in appointments, small barn, etc., etc. Lot 50x150, in a neighborhood that can't be beat. Price only $5350.

ON CAMBRIDGE ST.

This handsome house is pointed out every day by strangers as a type of our attractive homes. It is finely constructed, built like an eastern home by the owner, who sells only because he is leaving the city. There are 4 large sunny bedrooms, one below stairs, a very unusual bath, extra lavatory, trunkroom, living-room 14x22, handsome dining-room, large balcony. Splendid closets, etc. The price has been reduced greatly for quick sale; only $5750.

HOOVER AND W. 28TH.

Do you like a broad brick veranda with cement floor and steps? Do you like a living-room 18x22 feet with stone fireplace? Do you like a dining-room 14x18, paneled; a den with separate outside entrance, and a private little veranda? Do you like oak floors upstairs as well as down, beamed ceilings, massive fixtures, the Flemish oak finish, an outside chimney, a downstairs lavatory, and a pantry with all closed shelving? Do you like bedrooms that measure 15x17, 14x16, 13x16, etc., etc.? Then why look farther? The house is new and complete to the last detail of comfort and elegance. It's worth $7500. Circumstances make it necessary to sell for $6750. You are the gainer.

A SPLENDID RESIDENCE.

Here is a beautiful home near Adams st. that is safe to say, hasn't its duplicate for sale in the city. Many people have admired this property from the broad street and wondered if it could be purchased; only the last few days have seen it placed on the market, and the price is low. There are 10 rooms and an attic; oak floors below stairs, rock maple above; basement and furnace, of course, and the arrangement of the rooms throughout is ideally complete. Auto barn, covered balcony, and a hundred small points about this house are such as are usually overlooked, but cost money to perfect. To crown all the house sits on a fine corner and has a handsome pressed-brick entrance. Price $8000.

FOR SALE—

We want to impress upon your mind the fact that we do the best class of building in the city; the fact of it is we do not know how to do cheap work. We have made a study of high-class building, and we defy anyone to point out a single building that we have constructed in this city that is not just right in every sense of the word.

A decided advantage in dealing with us is this, that in drawing up our specifications to meet your requirements we do not point out and suggest the cheapest way to complete the different details, but we talk to you the same as your banker does, and advise you as to the best and most artistic way of finishing the different rooms and the exterior of the building.

When you take into consideration the fact that we compete with other builders in the city, and that we build for cash or will furnish the entire cost of your building, we believe that you should at least have a talk with us, and if we cannot convince you that what we tell you is correct, we will not expect to get the opportunity of building for you.

The money that we advance can be repaid by the month, or pay the interest every three months.

Yours for artistic homes,

FOR SALE—
READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

IT IS TRUE.

If you want what I call the best bargain in the city, an up-to-date 8-room residence, examine this, it has ben built about four months, and has the very best of plumbing, large rooms, a living-room 16x20, finely paneled, with beam ceilings, large dining-room, buffet kitchen, four bedrooms, large sun room, large front porch, gas and electricity all over the house, burglar alarms, large brick cellar, cement walks, and 50-foot lot; no better neighborhood in the city.

ALL OF THIS FOR $4750

and I will guarantee that no better home can be had in the city for less than $5500; would make good terms to a responsible party. Call and see it.

FOR SALE—VACANT LOTS.
If you are looking for a good buy in vacant property, carefully look over this list; it will interest you. Every lot a good building site or a good investment.

N.E. corner of 21st and Normandie, 52x130, at $1250. This is the cheapest corner in the rapid-growing section.

West front on Harvard blvd., 150 feet south of Pico, next to 20-foot alley, 50x112, at $1350; and the east front lot just across Harvard and facing this lot, 50x138, $1850. Go look at these lots; they are good buys.

East front on Harvard, just north of Washington st., 50x116, at $2100. Also an east front on Hobart, middle of block, between Washington and 16th sts., 50x162, at $2100.

And another beautiful building lot, very cheap, fifth lot east of Hermosa on 21st st., north front, 50x165; a snap at $2000.

West front on Western ave., third lot north of 21st st., 50x130. You can buy this lot for $2600 and there is not another lot in this block for less than $3000. Go look at this lot, it's a bargain.

Look at this buy, northeast corner of 25th and La Salle, 100x135, at $2650.

And here is the best buy on W. Adams st. Southeast corner of Adams st. and Hobart blvd., 95 feet on Adams by 150 feet on Hobart to a 20-foot alley. Small church now on it. This is a fine business corner and can be bought for $3500. The northeast corner of same streets, 75x150, is held for $4500. Go look at this lot, investigate relative values in this section, and if you are in the market for a bargain you will buy it.

Here is a snap if you are looking for an investment in vacant business property. 300 feet west of Main st. on north side of Jefferson, 50x150. You can buy this big business lot for $3600. Do you know of anything this cheap as close to Main st.?

Every one of the above lots will bear investigation.

OPENING DAY POSTPONED.
ON ACCOUNT THE WEATHER.

The unsettled weather has greatly interfered with the progress of the work in Walnut Lawn, as men could not work as rapidly in the rain. This sets back our opening day; but gives every one a chance to still secure their lot at the original prices.

The most beautiful suburb on the market.

Walnut trees, the finest in the State.

Large full-bearing 15-year-old walnut trees worth alone the price of the property. The streets are lined with them and every lot has its share. An 8-foot parkway between the cement curb and sidewalk. Every feature to render the lots desirable. In the midst of a delightful section where houses are of a very superior order. Schoolhouse on the tract. Stores and church and P.O. adjacent. Fire hydrants everywhere.

No other lots so fine. Get free tickets and go today.

Call at office for map and free ticket at any hour. Special assistance to parties expecting to build. Lots similarly improved in safe section selling for a third more. This is the biggest chance of the year. 5c fares by book.

LOTS $500 AND UP.
ON INVITIN GTERMS.

Take Long Beach car, get off at Florence ave. And buy of the owner.

TIONAL BUYS

Andrew Carnegie's chief financial representative during his recent visit to this city said, "You Angelenos hardly realize the magnificent future this fair city has before it; when I look at your city, I think of the word 'buy.' Your papers heralded the sale of a building downtown for $270,000, as a BIG THING. In 5 years a sale of this magnitude will have to be in the semi-suburban districts of Los Angeles."

What do you think of that from one of the greatest financiers in America, Mr. Henry Phipps, ex-steel king, philanthropist and multi-millionaire?

The moral is—BUY BUSINESS PROPERTY NOW.

The properties listed below are the very cream of Los Angeles business buys.

NORTHEAST CORNER OF FOURTH AND HILL STREETS.

$13,000.

One of the most conservative investment propositions that we have ever listed, property is occupied by a substantial 2 story brick building, well rented.

Frontage on Fourth street is 76 feet and on Hill street, 65 feet. Great improvements are contemplated for this section, among them, the Fourth street tunnel, we'll be glad to give you specific information about this excellent buy. See us bright and early Monday.

SOMETHING ATTRACTIVE ON OLIVE STREET.
FACES A PUBLIC SQUARE.

You couldn't find anything better if you searched the lists of every real estate operator in Los Angeles. Lot has 60 feet frontage, can be secured for a few days for $90,000. From a speculative standpoint this is certainly worth investigation.

EXCELLENT LOT ON OLIVE ST.
ONLY $1100 PER FRONT FOOT.

Values are soaring in the vicinity of this select piece of business property, it is 53x165 feet and is located between Sixth and Seventh on the west side of Olive. The future of this property is brilliant.

SOUTHWEST CORNER OF SIXTH AND HILL STREETS.

60x132
60x132
60x132

The potential value of this excellent corner is apparent at a glance. Look at this property today. Note its strategic position, destined to be one of the strongest business locations in the downtown district.

FINE INCOME PROPERTY ON FIFTH STREET.

This fine buy is located on East Fifth near Los Angeles, improved with 2 story modern brick building; present income is $347 per month. The future of this property is as bright as you could wish it. This bargain will appeal to any conservative man.

40x114½

ON WEST SIXTH STREET.

This property can be secured now for $30,000, a price that seems absurdly low in consideration of rapid enhancement of values in this section. Size is 40x100; near Grand ave., improvements consist of good 2 story building.

NORTH-EAST
SEVENTH AND MAIN

This property is today producing a handsome income. The frontage on Seventh is 147 feet, and on Main 145½ feet; good 3-story building on the property; you're bound to make a strong profit on this property in the near future if you buy at today's reasonable figure; Seventh st. is forging to the front as a commercial thoroughfare.

A double-track trolley system to Boyle Heights is one of the projected improvements on this street. The new 10-story Express building will be established at the corner of Seventh and Spring.

Watch this thoroughfare on Monday or any week day. Note the enormous volume of traffic.

Consider the wisdom of buying on this great business artery.

Call at our office tomorrow morning for detailed information pertaining to this admirable buy.

FOR SALE—

HERE THEY ARE.

$2500—30 feet on Jackson st., with 5-room cottages. This is in the warehouse district, and very close in. All other property on Jackson is $100 per foot.

$11,000—A splendid income property on 11th st., near Figueroa st., pays $97.50 per month; it is new and the location is right. Buy this property now, and make $4000.

$30,000—One-third cash, income $310 per month, guaranteed for 3 years; lot is 40x165, and the building is new; location is only one block from Sixth and Olive. This is the best buy in city, and when it goes there will be some wailing, sure.

$18,000—Half cash, 37½ feet frontage, in choice close-in location, with income of $120 per month. This has been reduced from $25,000 for a quick sale. It is actually cheap at $25,000.

$700 per foot—HILL STREET, 97½x150 feet, on Hill st., between First and Second streets. This will not be long in reaching $1000 per foot, as there will be some thing doing in a few days which will make a great difference in values in this immediate vicinity.

$100,000—Hill st., income $500, 75x155 to alley, in good side Hill st., close in. Hill-st. property is hard to get, and large frontages like this are exceedingly scarce at any price.

FOR SALE—

We are offering a few close in, gilt-edge properties at prices that will assure the investor a handsome profit; they are all located where property is advancing rapidly in value; there is no better property in Los Angeles today for investment or for speculation than Hill st. and Central Park property; the next few years will astonish the most conservative; we believe that within that time Hill st. will be a close rival of Broadway.

Anything (and by "anything," we mean property north of 7th st.) that you buy on Hill st. today at prevailing prices (and there are very few pieces for sale,) will make you a big profit within a very short time.

We firmly believe that Hill st. property, north of 7th st., within a very few years will command twice what it does today.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY
HILL ST. PROPERTY,
OLIVE ST. PROPERTY,
CENTRAL PARK PROPERTY.

YOU WILL NEVER BE ABLE TO BUY AS CHEAP AGAIN AS YOU CAN TODAY.

HILL STREET.
42x145 TO ALLEY.

Between 3rd and 4th sts.

One of the very best buys on Hill st. today. The improvements consist of a 3-story and basement brick building; would cost $25,000 to duplicate; building is now being remodeled, and when completed will rent for $6600 a year.

IT'S A BARGAIN AT
$84,000.
WILL PAY ALMOST 7 PER CENT. NET.

HILL STREET.
55x115.

Between 3rd and 4th, contains a 2-story brick building, renting for $4000 a year; it's near 4th st. and is a bargain at $2000 a foot.

$110,000.

HILL STREET.
60x165.

Between 5th and 6th.

This property faces Central Park; the improvements are nominal and pay $1500 a year; it's a splendid investment at $2000 A FOOT.

CENTRAL PARK FRONTAGE.
CENTRAL PARK. CENTRAL PARK.
A CORNER.
A CORNER.

One of the very best corners facing the park.

S.W. corner Olive and 5th sts.

90x155.
$180,000.

The northwest corner is to be improved immediately with a 7-story steel building; the immense auditorium building is being erected on the N.E. corner; the S.W. corner is practically the only corner available of the 12 corners surrounding the park.

A corner with a grand future.

FOR SALE—

W. NINTH STREET BETWEEN BROADWAY AND HILL, lot 50x95, next to alley, on the east side, being part of my southeast corner of Ninth and Hill, $50,000.

I will make party wall and light-court agreements with the purchaser, and also agree to begin at once the erection of a three-story brick building on the remainder of the corner.

Watch the transformation on W. Ninth st. within the next ninety days. All of the electric companies are laying conduits there now, and presently their wires will go underground; the old improvements will be moved back to the new widened street line; the street will be sidewalked and paved for its full width and lighted from Main to Figueroa with electric lamp posts identical with those on Spring street.

Think it over. Is there any reason why W. Ninth st. property, within a couple of years, should not be worth as much as W. Seventh st. property in the corresponding block today? Compare prices and you will find that there is nothing for sale on W. Seventh st., between Broadway and Hill for even $2500 per foot.

There are big things planned for this district that will make property owners jump for joy and they can't keep it quiet much longer. The Fourth-st. Tunnel alone will make values double in price, so why don't you get in and make some easy money. Only four blocks from 3rd and Broadway, on paved streets, surrounded with fine business buildings, size 55x120 feet, for only $24,000; it's the best thing unsold in this rapid growing section, and we cannot assure you of many days at this exceedingly low price.

$175,000 was offered last week for property 734-736 S. Spring, 50 feet extending to Main st. (two fronts) but cash payment offered ($40,000) was insufficient. About $75,000 cash payment would have secured it. Now watch this property jump to $200,000 by May 1, and will be cheap at that. Meantime $175,000 considered this week with about $75,000 cash and terms. THOS. B. HENRY, 638 S. Alvarado. 'Phone North 282. 18

FOR SALE—BY NEVIN & TAYLOR.

A good buy on Gladys ave. near 5th st., 27 feet improved with 2-flat building renting for $45 per month; this is a good speculative buy as the price is only $3000 and the terms are good.

On W. 22d st. between Figueroa st. and Grand ave., a house and lot now renting so as to show 11 per cent. net on the $2500 necessary to handle same; this is a live one.

Third st. through the tunnel is booming now. We have a 30x120 foot lot improved with cottage renting for $20 per month near Figueroa st., at the ground floor price $6250; some easy money for a quick buyer.

On W. 16th st., where an unusual activity has raised prices, we have 50 feet near Grand ave. at the original price of $7500, now renting for $30, and you can't lose on this buy.

Figueroa st. between 7th and 8th sts., 60x165, renting for $27.50 and the price is $400 per front foot; this is an inside figure and you must be quick as the option expires Tuesday and then the price goes up to that of adjoining pieces; this buy is just $50 a foot below the market.

FOR SALE—
Are you posted or interested in business property? If I should agree to deliver a lot improved with a brick block for less than ½ what the property has sold for 3 times in 5 months, directly across the street from this lot, would you buy it? Now be careful, because, here it is. This lot fronts on the famous Flatiron that lies between 8th and 9th sts., and Spring and Main sts., that recently sold for 30 per cent. more than it sold for 5 months ago. Well, you no doubt will say the flatiron has 2 frontages; grant that it has, and that it is worth double, we will cut our price in two, and then discount our price 20 per cent. When we do this we say to you frankly that we are convinced that here is the cheapest business property in this city and that there will be more money made on property fronting on the Flatiron than anywhere else in this city. If interested address J, box 1, TIMES OFFICE. 18

CORCORAN.
CORCORAN.

Reader, if you want to make money in stock, dairying or fruit growing, do not fail to investigate
CORCORAN.

We have been dealing in country property for over 20 years, and we tell you there is no better place on the Coast today than lands around Corcoran. If you wish to raise stock, alfalfa, kaffir corn, or go into the dairy business or deciduous fruits, especially peaches or grapes, we do not believe you can do better, or as well any place in the State as at
CORCORAN.

Good soil.
Fine flowing artesian wells.
Two cheese factories near.
Largest creamery in State to be erected.
Cannery to be erected.
Good towns going up rapidly.
Only brick buildings on business street.
Telephone, waterworks and electricity.
No saloons allowed.
50 houses today, where there were but about six months ago.
Junction of railroads.
CORCORAN.

Will be a model town. More activity than any other community in State of its size. Improvements and planting everywhere.
One mile west of townsite of
CORCORAN.

We have placed on the market Section 16—640 acres—here subdivided into 40-acre tracts. Whitley avenue, the business street of Corcoran, runs through our tract for one mile, thus giving us two miles frontage on the main avenue and business street, which is 90 feet wide. Trees will be set out this season at the company's expense the full length of Whitley avenue, 4 or 5 miles. Through the townsite one mile a double row of trees. Will sell these 40's for $45 to $80 per acre; one-fourth cash, one-fourth 6 months, balance 1 and 4 years. 2 per cent. discount for cash. We have on this section a fine large flowing artesian well and abundance of gas for lighting and cooking. Just think of it! No gas collector to bother you each month. This well has been flowing water and gas for 18 years, and still no let up.

Reader, all we ask is, if you are looking for a good place to make money, or as an investment, go with us next Tuesday and see
CORCORAN.

Excursion rates $10.60 round trip.

FOR SALE—BY SERVICE BROS.,
302 FROST BLDG.,
WALNUT .... LAND.
ALFALFA LAND.
TRACT NO. 1.

This beautiful tract of land is located in the celebrated El Monte walnut district, and about midway between El Monte and Covina. It is convenient to four railroad depots. The soil is a deep sediment loam, and is second to none in the San Gabriel Valley. Investigation will prove the assertion. Alfalfa, walnuts, vegetables, berries, peanuts and lima beans flourish in this fertile soil. Water for irrigation is supplied by the La Puente Cooperative Water Co., one of the best equipped and up-to-date systems in the country, and is guaranteed to pump 1000 inches of water at a cost not exceeding 50 cents per hour for 150 inches of water delivered in pipes to each lot. Subdivisions of 5 acres up. Price $225 per acre up, including water right. Terms, one-fourth cash, balance on or before three years at 7 per cent.

TRACT NO. 2.
WALNUT AND ALFALFA LAND.

This excellent tract of land was purchased recently by a Los Angeles syndicate for subdivision purposes. About 550 acres is reserved for the present but will be subdivided into acreage lots and placed on the market in a short time at an advanced price. Of the remainder, 700 acres, the greater portion is sold to actual settlers. We have a few lots of the very choicest land in the tract that we can deliver for the next few days at $250 per acre up, including water for irrigation, which is to be in heads of 150 inches, delivered to highest corner of each lot. The quality of the soil is second to none, and for alfalfa, walnuts, fruit, vegetables, peanuts, has no superior.

This tract is only 14 miles northeast of Los Angeles, adjoins the town of Monrovia on southwest and is convenient to the Monrovia branch of the Pacific Electric R. R.

Remember the price, $250 per acre up, only one-fourth cash, balance on or before 3 years at 7 per cent.

SERVICE BROS., sole agents.

Lake County.

FOR SALE—

IN LAKE COUNTY—
Self-supporting homes can be bought for less money than in any other section of the State. Comparing land values with other counties, the homeseeker will find here the best lands cheaper and the cheap lands better than elsewhere.

IN LAKE COUNTY—
All the typical products of California can be grown. Deciduous fruits of all kinds reach a perfection found nowhere else. Apples, pears, prunes and peaches are grown largely and sold at high prices. Lake county pears command a substantial premium over all others. No blight or insect pests here. Among things grown and sold at good prices in our home market are berries of every kind, melons, table and wine grapes, figs, almonds, walnuts, and garden vegetables of every description. The field crops are those common to every section of the United States. And no irrigation is used or needed to bring these fruits and crops to full maturity and perfection.

IN LAKE COUNTY—
There are no fogs, no cold winds, no extremes of temperature, either in winter or summer. Thirty inches rainfall; 300 sunny days in a year. There has never been a crop failure in the history of the county. Not a foot of alkali or "hardpan" in Lake county. Streams run the year round, and the valleys are green far into the summer.

IN LAKE COUNTY—
There are beautiful lakes and streams, alive with trout and other game fish. In its forests are thousands of deer, and its valleys swarm with quail and small game, while wild ducks and geese frequent its lakes in season. The county lies 1500 feet above the sea, and its climate and numerous medicinal springs and health resorts attract thousands of visitors every summer. It is a natural sanatorium and pleasure ground.

IN LAKE COUNTY—
Homeseekers of either large or small means can find paying investments and homes that will support them. There is hardly any line of business that does not offer a good opening at some point in the county. A pamphlet entitled "Lake County in a Nutshell" gives a fair and honest description of our resources and advantages, and will be mailed, with any other information asked for, to those desiring it by the undersigned, County Supervisors.

FOR SALE—
A bureau of information for and about LAKE COUNTY has been established at 703 Trust Bldg., Second and Spring sts. Illustrated folders, maps, lists of property for sale, on hand. The railroad (the first in the county) will be electric. It will start from San Francisco, and be completed to Lakeport by April of next year. The time between the two points will be three hours, or less. Now is the time to buy. More productive land than that in LAKE COUNTY doesn't exist. Everything that grows here flourishes there, WITHOUT IRRIGATION. And a big farm can be bought there for what a very small one would cost here. S. R. HENDERSON, 703 Trust Bldg., Los Angeles.

HIGH-CLASS SUBDIVISION
This is Alhambra's best chance; the natural beauties are so many that only an examination of the tract will show the desirability of the purchase; 6½ acres on the finest 80-foot boulevard.

One of the finest subdivisions in the county now, under way adjoining.

SALES IN ALHAMBRA
the last three months have been OVER $250,000.

This talks better than anything we can say. It is phenomenal, but only what we have known was Alhambra's due when her attractions were known. For five years we have been saying so, and now "the people" are making our prophecies good.

WHY DON'T YOU
CHOOSE YOUR HOME HERE?
We have the best list, and can show you lots at prices that cannot be duplicated in the county; $660 for lots on Garfield blvd., with the best of cement street improvements and sewer in and paid for.

$375 for 50x150 lots on 60-foot street, with cement walks, gutters and curbs; glorious view of valley and mountains, near car line; and new High School; these lots are moving fast, and you will miss a big saving if you wait.

HOUSES.
1 1-2 acres on one of the best drives, fine new modern house, east front, with beautiful view of mountains and city; lot set to full-bearing navels; will exchange for Los Angeles or will sell for $3250; can get more land if wanted.

$3000 for fine new 9-room house on a beautiful corner, acre lots set to bearing oranges; this is on a beautiful drive, and near Alhambra's automobile boulevard.

$2300 will buy the cosiest home in Alhambra, ½ acre set to 22 kinds of fruit trees, 90 oranges, berries, flowers or ornamental trees, 7 room house, bath, near car line, and fine neighborhood; this is choice.

$750—Two chances at nice home places at this price, small cottages; 50x150 lots; street work done with one.

We have a 7-room house, not modern, but just right to make inexpensive alterations and make fine home or good rental investment; lot 54x150, on fine boulevard, with all street work done; beautiful ornamental trees and palms; this is to close an estate, and you know what this means; price $1800.

Get free tickets at 116 S. Broadway and let us drive you around our beautiful city.

FORCED SALE

OF THE

FINE 10-ACRE TRACTS IN THE

FISHBURN SUBDIVISION.

South two-thirds of the S.W. one-fourth of Section 19, 3 South, Range 11 West, in Los Angeles county.

$130 TO $135 PER ACRE.

TERMS ½ CASH, BALANCE EASY.

This subdivision is 18 miles from Los Angeles on the Pacific Electric R.R. and 10 miles north of Alamitos Bay, and lies 1 mile south of Norwalk and about a mile north of Artesia. Norwalk is 15 miles from Los Angeles on the Southern Pacific R.R.

A bank in each of the above towns has been incorporated by Los Angeles capitalists, and they are now erecting modern 2-story brick buildings at Norwalk as well as Artesia.

Both towns have good churches, schools, rural mail delivery.

The tract is splendidly situated in a live thriving, populous section, half way between such towns as Los Angeles, Fullerton, Anaheim and Santa Ana.

IT'S AN IDEAL DAIRY COUNTRY.

DO NOT DELAY.

BEST LAND IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY

OFFERED AT A SACRIFICE.

Post yourself on prices of land and you will be convinced that our prices are only 50 per cent. of real value. Deep, rich, warm sandy loam, only 10 feet to water, 140 feet for flowing well. This land has produced various good crops, one year in beets paid $87.50 per acre, and will pay 10 per cent. on $500 per acre if put to grapes. For berries, potatoes, corn, beets, alfalfa, none better.

You gain by this FORCED SALE. It has been deeded to the Title Insurance and Trust Co. of Los Angeles, who will give title and certificate. They have constituted me the exclusive agent for same. I have had it plowed, graded and cut into 10-acre tracts, and seeded to barley. Lands adjoining are held at $300. This land is worth that amount, but as it has been placed in the hands of a trustee to close out, I have cut the price to a figure that no one can fail to admit is cheap, and have placed the price at from $130 to $135 per acre, one-half cash, balance easy. Lands not so good are selling from $300 to $500. Thirty minutes from center of city, on new Santa Ana electric line. For a productive home it has no equal, as an investment it will double this year. Present crop of barley will pay 12 per cent. interest on the investment. Alfalfa costs $10 per ton in the field.

One 12-in. artesian well 165 ft. deep, costing $366, including casing, was put down just across the road from this property.

FOR SALE—

ANNANDALE HEIGHTS.

Selections of lots may now be made in this beautiful foothill tract, located on Eagle Rock ave. at an elevation of 900 feet above the sea. Like all our tracts, the lots are large, full-sized lots for actual homes and not toy lots, nor seaside size, nor two-thirds of a lot masquerading as a lot. These lots are 50 feet or more in width and of good length. Many of them are over 200 feet long. The terms are easy, one-tenth down and balance $5 or $10 per month. Prices from $100 up. The location in the beautiful foothills between Garvanza and Eagle Rock, is unexcelled for home building.

Buy before the car line is completed and reap the benefit.

Our office is open Sundays.

FOR SALE— Suburban Property.

FOR SALE—

FORCED SALE
OF THE
FINE 10-ACRE TRACTS IN THE
FISHBURN SUBDIVISION.

South two-thirds of the S.W. one-fourth of Section 19, 3 South, Range 11 West, in Los Angeles county.

$150 TO $195 PER ACRE.

TERMS ½ CASH, BALANCE EASY.

This subdivision is 18 miles from Los Angeles on the Pacific Electric R.R. and 10 miles north of Alamitos Bay, and lies 1 mile south of Norwalk and about a mile north of Artesia. Norwalk is 15 miles from Los Angeles on the Southern Pacific R.R.

A bank in each of the above towns has been incorporated by Los Angeles capitalists, and they are now erecting modern 2-story brick buildings at Norwalk as well as Artesia.

Both towns have good churches, schools, rural mail delivery.

The tract is splendidly situated in a live thriving, populous section, half way between such towns as Los Angeles, Fullerton, Anaheim and Santa Ana.

IT'S AN IDEAL DAIRY COUNTRY.

DO NOT DELAY.

BEST LAND IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY

OFFERED AT A SACRIFICE.

Post yourself on prices of land and you will be convinced that our prices are only 50 per cent. of real value. Deep, rich, warm sandy loam, only 10 feet to water, 140 feet for flowing well. This land has produced various good crops, one year in beets paid $87.50 per acre, and will pay 10 per cent. on $500 per acre if put to grapes. For berries, potatoes, corn, beets, alfalfa, none better.

You gain by this FORCED SALE. It has been deeded to the Title Insurance and Trust Co. of Los Angeles, who will give title and certificate. They have constituted me the exclusive agent for same. I have had it plowed, graded and cut into 10-acre tracts, and seeded to barley. Lands adjoining are held at $300. This land is worth that amount, but as it has been placed in the hands of a trustee to close out, I have cut the price to a figure that no one can fail to admit is cheap, and have placed the price at from $150 to $195 per acre, one-half cash, balance easy. Lands not as good are selling from $300 to $500. Thirty minutes from center of city, on new Santa Ana electric line. For a productive home it has no equal, as an investment it will double this year. Present crop of barley will pay 12 per cent. interest on the investment. Alfalfa sells $10 per ton in the field.

One 12-in. artesian well 140 ft. deep, costing $600, including casing, was put down just across the road from this property.

FOR SALE—
ANNANDALE HEIGHTS.

Selections of lots may now be made in this beautiful foothill tract, located on Eagle Rock ave. at an elevation of 900 feet above the sea. Like all our tracts, the lots are large, full-sized lots for actual homes and not toy lots, nor seaside size, nor two-thirds of a lot masquerading as a lot. These lots are 50 feet or more in width and of good length. Many of them are over 200 feet long. The terms are easy, one-tenth down and balance $5 or $10 per month. Prices from $300 up. The location in the beautiful foothills between Garvanza and Eagle Rock, is unexcelled for home building.

Buy before the car line is completed and reap the benefit.

Our office is open Sundays.

LONG BEACH.

FOR SALE—
Fortunes are being made in real estate in Long Beach; splendid new buildings are being constructed in all directions. The tide of values keeps steadily rising on every side; the beautiful young city is plunging ahead by leaps and bounds, only 2000 people 5 years ago, over 20,000 today; what will it be 5 years from today? If you want to find the best spot on the American continent to plant your money where it will grow fast come down to Long Beach; never before have so many Los Angeles people been investing here as in past 2 months, and they are all making money. Yes, and doubling their money. Ask anyone about Long Beach or come down and see for yourself. They have just started work on the great tourist hotel which will be the grandest on the Pacific Coast, and we are offering for sale, a magnificent corner, 65x100, with two houses on it, right close to the hotel; the finest site in Long Beach for swell rooming-house; the price is $10,500, $6000 cash, and no more for two years: this place will be worth $15,000 less than 1 year from now. Yes, and perhaps, $20,000. For this and other great money-making investment in Long Beach see

FOR EXCHANGE—
M'DONALD & STOTT,
309-310 Lankershim Bldg.,
(Cor. 3rd and Spring.)

We have to announce to our clients and to the public by reason of the vast expansion of our business, our inability under our present facilities of handling all of our business in a manner satisfactory to ourselves, as we would only be pleased to do, and this condition compels us to immediately make arrangements enlarging our facilities to meet the demands made upon us.

We are, therefore, organizing our business into a corporation under the name of "McDonald and Stott Company," with an authorized capitalization of $50,000, $40,000 of which will be paid in. Our Messrs. McDonald and Stott will remain with the new corporation, and Messrs. M. L. Orcutt, James A. Seelye and James E. McDonald will constitute the new blood and energy infused into the new company. All of these gentlemen are men of broad business experience and up-to-date in their methods. We are, every one of us, hustlers, and we will give value received. Our word will be as good as a United States bond, and we solicit the continuance of your business and confidence. We will now have the material to develop each and every department in the real estate business, and it shall be done on scientific broad business lines. We will add to our business a fire insurance department. We expect to secure office rooms sufficient in number to accommodate our new business at our present location, the Lankershim Building, corner of Spring and Third streets, but this will be determined shortly, when we shall make further announcement bearing on the matter of location.

To our clients and the public we wish to say those characteristics which have been peculiar to McDonald and Stott shall continue with McDonald and Stott Company. You who have been pleased with our methods the manner of doing business, will not be disappointed under the new and enlarged aggregation. Vim, vigor and victory will be our watchword. We want you to remember that we have and will retain in our employ the best trader in the United States. If you have not yet made his acquaintance, it is to your disadvantage. Come in and do so. He will make you money while you wait. As usual, we have some choice things to offer you today, in exchange for your property, and hundreds of other properties that are not advertised for want of space. If you don't see in this column what pleases you, write, send in a list of your property with full description, and tell us what you want. We have it.

We have a lot 56x165 near the corner of Spring and Eighth streets, on Spring. Now contains a two-story frame building, renting for $180 a month. Building is unimportant. Price $125,000. Corner of Fifth and San Julian, containing two stores on first floor and lodging-house above, in two-story house. Also eleven-room two-story flat building on same lot, which is 50x123. Rental income $265 per month, $65,000. The adjoining lot 50x150 on Fifth st. has eight-room residence, rents for $60 per month. Also 56½x165 feet on Hill street, between Eighth and Ninth; rental income $110 a month. Building unimportant. Price $112,000. Corner of Hill and 18th sts., 10-room frame house, unimportant. Rents for $40 per month. Price $22,000. Temple street, near Hope, 50x150 ft. lot, containing an eight-room cottage, building unimportant, price $10,000. Corner of California and Figuero, 119 feet on Figueroa, price $5500. These properties are for sale at the above quoted prices, and are very choice business propositions. Nothing better for the money in Los Angeles. The owner will accept exchange in attractive property. The value of these properties is in the ground, and not the buildings. No choicer list of properties can be had from one owner in the city.

We have a building fitted up for a laundry, on a lot 50x100 ft., on Santa Barbara street, Santa Barbara, California, containing all machinery, boilers, engine and everything necessary for the laundry business. This is very cheap at $3750 to anyone wishing to engage in business. We can exchange this for Los Angeles or Santa Barbara property that is clear of incumbrance, or where we can get some cash with the property.

We have two five-room cottages on Fifty-first street not far from the car barns, $700 equity in each property. Will exchange this equity for Los Angeles or good country property, or sell on easy terms, monthly payments. These are good properties. Investigate them.

We have 78 vacant lots beautifully located eight blocks from the center of Chanute, Kansas, with a population of 15,000, in the center of the great oil and gas belt of Kansas. Large manufacturing center. To exchange for anything in Southern California of value, that is worth $12,000. Here is a chance to clean up $12,000 profit by handling these lots. The owner is in California for his health and unable to give the lots the attention they need.

Here is a group of promising gold-bearing claims considerable development work, ledges from 1½ to 5 feet wide, with good assay value, cheap at $5000, which the owner wishes to exchange into a ranch, as he is getting too old for mining. This is an excellent opportunity for a young man, or one with push.

120 acres of unimproved land in the Muddy Valley of Lincoln County, Nevada, and water rights, for exchange for Southern California.

20 acres of as fine a ranch property as lies in Southern California; 6 acres in walnuts, 6 lemons, 1 oranges, 1 deciduous fruits and 1 eucalyptus grove, balance grain. House stands on a commanding eminence, consists of seven rooms, all in good repair. Plenty of water and pumping plant. 60,000-gallon cement reservoir. All tools, horses, cows, etc. Want general merchandise or city property in exchange. Worth $10,000.

We have a 20-room house on a 55x160 ft. lot, with a 10 ft. alley, on North Daly street, Los Angeles. Now we would like to exchange this for an acre or more of ground, containing a house with 14 or more rooms. We prefer South Pasadena, Garvanza or Alhambra, but any healthy, suitable locality within cheap car fare of the city of Los Angeles would be satisfactory.

We have 160 acres improved farm, 2½ miles from Balaton, Lyon County, Minnesota, 100 acres under plow. Four-room house, small barn, room for eight horses; improvements; priced at $45 per acre. Rented for one-third grain rent to good tenant. Farm located in the best section of Minnesota. We prefer a modern house located in Los Angeles, and will pay a good cash difference. Will not object to a country home in Southern California. This is one of the best things we have had to offer. Now investigate this and get a fine farm at a low price, and the balance in cash for your city or country home.

We have a fine 30-acre grove at Pomona; 10 acres in oranges, navels and Valencias, full bearing, ten acres walnuts, balance in grapes. Well improved, at $20,000, and worth every dollar asked. A good money-maker. We will take up to as high as $12,000 in good Eastern property or Los Angeles property for this value. Here is a snap.

We have a stock of goods invoicing at $13,000 in one of the best localities of Southern California, for retail business. The owner of this stock wishes a stock ranch in California or Oregon, and will assume or pay some cash difference.

We have 20 acres of finest alfalfa land, excellent improvements, with two flowing artesian wells, cement reservoir, the most valuable twenty acres in the San Jacinto Valley, and we want to exchange this for a ten or twenty-acre orange grove in good condition. Don't offer it unless it is in good condition and frostless, and will pay or assume a cash difference.

189-acre ranch near Ramona, San Diego County, worth $12,000. We can give somebody that wants a good ranch a fine deal for any property of value. This party will take Eastern or California.

12 houses and lots ranging in price from $700 to $3500, located at Barberton, one of Ohio's best manufacturing cities, six miles from Akron and 35 miles from Cleveland. Practically all clear, to exchange for California. This is a fine proposition, and one you can make money with. It will move quickly.

We have a four-year lease and furnishings of one of Los Angeles' popular and new house-keeping apartment houses, free and clear of all incumbrances, which we wish to exchange for an orange grove worth $10,000. If you have such and desire a good, permanent paying investment, look into this.

We have $4000 equity in a good flat building on Gratton street, between Tenth and Eleventh, fine neighborhood, to exchange for Los Angeles or nearby property.

Two lots at the corner of 39th and San Julian, in which there is an equity of $1000, to exchange for Los Angeles cottage.

Do not overlook the fact, as we have often told you, our advertising column contains but a very small percentage of the good things we have to offer. We can find an exchange for any real estate on earth. Send in your description, state what you have for sale or exchange, including the legal description of your property. State what you want. We have it, or we will get it for you. All properties we offer will bear investigation. If yours will come in or write and tell us about it. Do not forget, the best trader in the United States is always working at our offices. He will be glad to see you.

We still own and offer for sale $700,000 of the three million dollars of municipal bonds, which we have offered in previous advertisements, bearing 6 per cent. interest. We collect accrued interest without charge on all bonds we sell. We will loan the face value of any bonds we sell at the rate of interest such bonds bear.

FOR EXCHANGE—

We offer for exchange a highly improved property at the Palms, which is on the Short Line between Los Angeles and Santa Monica. This property consists of about 20 acres. The situation is the most sightly of anything between the city and the ocean. 9 acres of it are in lemons in good condition; 6 years old; 2 acres are in olives and 4 in oranges. There are in addition numerous peach, plum, fig, apricot, apple, walnut, guavas and loquats. A considerable part of the property is planted to barley, potatoes, pumpkins and corn. A pumping plant on the property which taps the largest underground body of water of Southern California, makes it almost invaluable. The cost of the pumping plant, reservoir, pipes and hydrants, which run in all directions, was over $7000. The property occupies a commanding position, overlooking the ocean and the country for miles around.

We can deliver this property for $40,000. For villa sites it cannot be excelled in Southern California. We believe the water possibilities alone are worth all that is asked for the ranch.

Will accept half its value in good property.

Men Only

Until March 25 We will Treat Any Single Ailment Except Rupture and Blood Poison for $12.50

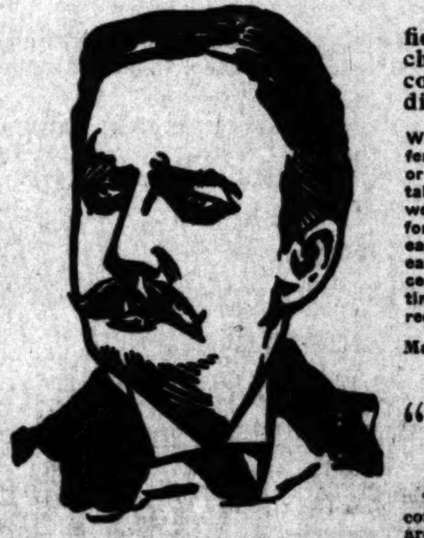
You Must Come to Us Sooner or Later; Why Not Now? Refuse to Suffer Any Longer on Promises of Others.



We are ever advancing.

The combined knowledge of the most eminent physicians of the world is ours—and we are still studying.

As specialists to men we acknowledge no superiors. We cure to stay cured.

It is no unusual thing for us to cure cases of nervous debility, varicocele, contagious blood poison and special troubles after the patient has been pronounced incurable by other physicians.

The diseases of men due to the abuses of youth are an open book to us.

We will wait for our fee until patient is cured.

We cover the entire field of private and chronic, deep-seated, complicated, difficult diseases.

We want every man who is suffering from any special disease or condition to come and have a talk with us. No man whose weakened system is crying out for help through contracted disease, or who has been guilty of early indiscretions or later excesses, is safe in life until such time as his errors have been corrected.

Many Men Treated for a Weakness which Never Existed.

"WEAKNESS"

Due to a Simple Cause.

These functional disorders commonly termed "weakness" are readily curable when treated upon scientific principles and with a full understanding as to their cause. In an experience of fifteen years, during which we have treated thousands of cases, this ailment has yielded to our treatment promptly and completely. The truth is that "weakness" is not a nervous disorder, nor is it due to any impoverished condition or lack of vitality, exceptng, of course, cases of general debility, where the entire system is broken down. Practically every patient who comes to us to be treated for this disorder is strong and robust, which is evidence of the correctness of the statement just made, and proves conclusively the folly of resorting to stimulants, tonics and electro-medical combinations, etc., which can only excite the functions temporarily, to the positive detriment of the real ailment. The prostate gland, being the vital center of the sexual system, and very sensitive to abnormal influences, becomes chronically swollen and inflamed, as a result of early dissipation, improperly treated contracted diseases, strain, injury or other cause, and the condition is manifested by disordered sexual functions. Therefore, the "weakness" is only a symptom of prostatic trouble and is not the condition demanding treatment. Our method of curing "weakness" is to restore the tender and swollen prostate to its normal state. We employ local measures only, and the results we obtain are prompt, complete and permanent. Like results can be had from no other treatment, because no other can be in accordance with scientific requirements.

Not a Dollar Need Be Paid Until Cured.

You do not pay us until satisfied and you are restored to health. Can we say more? You may consult us free of charge and get our opinion without any cost to you. Call and let us explain our methods of treatment. We cure Varicocele, Hydrocele, Rupture, Stricture, Prostatic ailments and All Diseases of Men. PRIVATE DISEASES—Newly contracted and chronic cases cured. All burning, itching and inflammation stopped in twenty-four hours; cures effected in seven days.

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND PROSTATIC DISEASES.—We cure all irritation, frequent desire or stoppage, pain in back and catarrhal conditions.

CONSULTATION FREE AND INVITED. Our reputation and work is not of a mushroom growth, nor is it the experience of one man. In complicated cases the entire staff consult without extra charge, thus getting the knowledge of five instead of one. We are incorporated and chartered by the State of California, and our reliability cannot be questioned.

Write, if you cannot call. All correspondence strictly confidential and all replies sent in plain envelopes. Inclose two-cent stamp to insure reply. OFFICE HOURS—9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Evenings, 6:30 to 8. Sundays, 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

DEATH OF E. F. KUBEL.

Man Well Known in Local Musical and Newspaper Circles Dies Suddenly at His Home.

E. F. Kubel, well known in local musical and newspaper circles, died suddenly yesterday at his home in South Pasadena, heart disease being given as the cause of death. Mr. Kubel was 52 years old and his surviving family includes the widow and two sons, Fred and Philip. No arrangements have been made as yet for the funeral.

Mr. Kubel had been engaged lately as assistant chief operator in the Los Angeles office of the Postal Telegraph Company, prior to which he had been employed on various Los Angeles newspapers and having at one time published a paper.

He had suffered recently with a severe cold, which became so severe on Friday that he was compelled to go to his home from the office. Yesterday morning he appeared better; so much so that he left his bed and spent some time in the living-room. He was forced, however, to take to his bed shortly afterward.

Some time later, his wife, after caring for him and leaving him alone, returned to his room only to find him dead. He had passed as if in sleep.

Members of an old Washington family, his father for many years having been in the employ of the government map department, Mr. Kubel engaged in his youth as a member of the United States Signal Service. He was an expert telegrapher and for some time was employed in the laying of ocean cables. He was sent to the Puget Sound country about twenty-five years ago by the Signal Service and it was in that section that he met the woman who became his wife.

Shortly afterward he came to Los Angeles, where, in the course of time he acted as clerk to Mayor Workman and again to Mayor Bryson.

In his early days he had been educated in Germany, being interested particularly in music. His library at his handsome country place on Magnolia street, South Pasadena, contains an extensive and valuable collection of Beethoven works and matters pertaining to that famed composer.

CHINA SHOP WARMS UP.

Parmelee-Dohrmann Company Dedicates New Building With Dance and Banquet.

The Parmelee-Dohrmann Company gave a house-warming in its elegant new building on Broadway last night. The whole fourth floor was set apart for the entertainment, and if it it had been constructed for social purposes it could not have been better appointed. The main feature was the large ballroom, almost 100 feet square, and it was here the festivities of the evening took place, the 150 guests being all employés of the establishment and their ladies. A large orchestra provided the music and dancing continued until 10 o'clock, when dinner was served in the dining-room adjoining the ballroom. Another large room was set apart as the pantry, and still another as a cloakroom.

F. Dohrmann, Jr. acted as toastmaster at the post-prandial festivities, and after words of welcome to the guests, introduced C. A. Parmelee, who gave the history of the Parmelee-Dohrmann Company from its small beginning in a "doby" shack in 1878, to its magnificent six-story building just completed, and which will be opened to the public on the last day of March.

A. B. C. Dohrmann followed with an inspiring talk on the future of the firm, outlining his ideals for the greatest china shop in America. It was claimed by Mr. Dohrmann that theirs will be one of the largest stores in the United States devoted to this line of business, and without exception the very finest in its appointments and interior arrangement.

"Our Veterans" was the subject of a response from W. D. Byram, and H. B. Tuttle responded to "Our Juniors."

The whole company united in singing several songs, specially written for the occasion, and all jingling on the business of the Parmelee-Dohrmann store.

GLADIATORS AND MARTYRS.

Charles A. Payne of Milwaukee will deliver an illustrated lecture tonight in Magnolia-avenue Congregational Church, corner of Washington street. His subject will be: "Rome: Its Gladiators and Christian Martyrs." His views are said to be the very finest in existence.

GOSPEL CONVENTION.

The Christian and Missionary Alliance will meet in what they term a "fourfold gospel convention," on Thursday and Friday, March 22 and 23. The meetings will be held in Gospel Tabernacle, No. 1705 South Hope street, at 10:30, 2:30 and 7:30 each day. Among the speakers will be W. E. Blackstone of Chicago and G. D. Watson of Pennsylvania.

CAMBRIDGE A SURPRISE.

Looks Like the Winning Crew in Coming Race.

Makes Three Miles Easily in Record Time.

Crew Trained on Eggs Is the Latest Talk.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Is Cambridge to win the 'varsity race this year, and are the eggs to give the Light Blues the victory?

This is the question which is now being discussed with animation on the riverside. The situation which has arisen is interesting as well as amusing. From the time that the rival 'varsity crews began practicing the riverside experts were almost unanimous that there was this year only one crew in it, and that was Oxford. But that idea has got a rother rude shock since the first startling performance by Cambridge, that crew rowing on Wednesday from Marlow Point to Cookham Bridge, a distance of three miles and a half, in the record time of 16m. 7s., which knocks off the previous best Cambridge "mystery" performances of 1896, especially the report states that eggs are responsible for this remarkable row. The pro-Oxford chorus which was loud enough at the outset, became more pronounced on the news that the light blues had thought it wise to depose their original stroke in favor of a young man who had made an aquatic name on the lower reaches of the Thames as a sculler pure and simple.

But this remarkable practice spin of Wednesday has quite changed the tone of the critics who now recognize that the Light Blues are already heavier, brighter and a more cheerful set of men than the crew which left the banks of Cambridge last Monday morning while the Oxford crew appear to have become rather listless and stale.

HOPPE AND SLOSSON. ARE PRACTICING HARD.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Both Hoppe and Slosson are practicing hard for their world's championship billiard match at 18-inch balk line, one shot in balk, which is to be held at Grand Central Palace on March 27.

Hoppe at his billiard parlor last night defeated Wilson P. Foss of Haverstraw, former amateur champion, by a score of 400 to 163. Hoppe played 18.1, while Foss played 18.2. Hoppe averaged 19 1-21, and made a high run of 130, while his opponent averaged only 7 16-21, with a high run of 25. Hoppe later defeated Peterson, and tonight will begin a match with Gallagher.

Slosson is playing with Cline, Morningstar and other experts at the Saratoga Club, where he went that he might not be interrupted in his practice.

Fair Grounds Events.

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—Guiding Star realized all of the talent's expectations when he led his field home in the Crescent Derby at the Fair Grounds this afternoon. The race was worth $7250 to the winner. Of the eight who elected to start Guiding Star opened favorite at 2 to 1, with Ellison's pair, Lady Navarre and James Reddick, second choice, at 5 to 2. Lotus Eater and Ben Bodder were at fours and the others at longer odds. At the close Lotus Eater had been backed down to 13 to 5, and was favorite. Guiding Star at the same odds was a strong second choice, while the Ellison pair had good backing at 9 to 2. Redfern sent his mount away ahead and opened a big gap. Martin handled Guiding Star with the utmost skill. He kept at all times within striking distance and the moment Ben Bodder showed signs of tiring sent his mount to the front and won cleverly by half a length. Lady Navarre, who ran a grand race, was driven to the limit to best Lotus Eater for the place. Results:

Six furlongs: Tom Mankins won, Arabo second, Fenian third; time 1:15.

Four furlongs: Frank Lord won, Colloquy second, Lucie Marie third; time 0:50.

Mile and twenty yards, handicap: St. Valentine won, Blennenworth second, Goldsmith third; time 1:42 2-5.

Mile and seventy yards: Besterling won, Celebration second, Louise MacFarland third; time 1:47.

The Crescent City Derby, mile and an eighth: Guiding Star won, Lady Navarre second, Lotus Eater, third; time 1:54 2-5.

Six furlongs: Southern Cross won, Rapid Water second, First Premium third; time 1:13 3-5.

Mile and seventy yards: Prince Salm Salm won, Fred Hornbeck second, Lemon Girl third; time 1:47 2-5.

City Park Card.

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—Fred Cooke's filly, Minnie Adams, fairly smothered her field for speed in the City Park Derby today. Nichols scent her to the front at once and she set her rivals a killing pace. She was never reached and won easily by a length from Kerchival, who was second all the way. It was practically a two horse race. In the betting Minnie Adams was always favorite at 5 to 2, with St. Joseph second choice at 5 to 1, Kerchival having some backing at 10 to 1. Kargut, St. Joseph and Debar all suffered from crowding and interference, insufficient, however, to affect the result. The Derby was worth $6450 to the winner. Results:

Three and a half furlongs: Odd Trick won, King Leopold second, Beau Brummel third; time 0:42 2-5.

Two miles: Bradley's Pet won, Eclectic second, Hymettus third; time 3:34 2-5.

Steeplechase, full course: Ohio King won, Blue Mint second, Gould third; time 4:00 2-5.

One mile: Monochord won, Ice second, Ponsoluca third; time 1:40 3-5.

Mile and a quarter, City Park Derby: Minnie Adams won, Kerchival second, Orbicular third; time 2:06 2-5.

Seven furlongs: Capitano won, Percy Clark second, Marco third; time 1:27 3-5.

Six furlongs: Emergency won, Meadow Brooks second, Airship third; time 1:14.

Union Trust Wins.

The second game of the series of baseball of the Abstract League was won by the Union Trust and Title Company from the Title, Insurance and Trust Company yesterday afternoon at the St. Vincent's ball park, before a large and enthusiastic crowd of "rooters," the score being 5 to 1. The game was highly exciting by reason of the interest displayed on the part of the fans, and the score will vouch for the fact that good ball was played by each team. The batteries were Rook and Acker for the Union Trust, while Lyon and Orndorff officiated for the Title Insurance. Each pitcher had ten strikeouts to his credit. The percentage now stands as follows: Union Trust and Title Company, 1000; Title Insurance and Trust Company, .500; Title Guarantee and Trust Company, .000.

Empire Ranch

—On Kings River, Kings County—

Is one of the famous old ranches of the San Joaquin Valley, formerly known as the Miller, Baker and Davis rancho. The soil is a black sediment loam, that for ages has been deposited by Kings River. It is deep, level, rich and productive to a wonderful degree. In its wild state it produces a heavy growth of natural grasses that are very nutritious for cattle. The land yields readily to cultivation, and with the application of water the variety and quantity of production is surprising.

19,000 ACRES

$40 PER ACRE... in tracts to suit, from twenty acres upward, at this exceedingly low price, including perpetual water right with each acre, that cannot be separated from the land. Own a farm where it pays to farm. EASY TERMS

Water is King in California

Water is the one important necessity to which the intending ranch owner should give attention. Land requires water. One of the grandest irrigation streams in the West flows through the Empire Ranch from north to south for nine miles. A large canal system insures delivery of water, of which there is an ample supply. In addition, the Lower Kings River Canal system covers over seven thousand acres of this property. Also, within a belt that yields abundant artesian water. Flowing wells already on the ranch prove an unlimited supply from this source. Water from Kings River is furnished at an annual maintenance cost of only 75 cents per acre.

Excellent Alfalfa Land

Empire land is in the most successful alfalfa section of California. It is especially adapted to the growth of this forage plant. On Empire Ranch alfalfa grows luxuriantly, and five crops are harvested annually, averaging eight tons per acre. Dairying is highly profitable. Hogs and poultry are clear profit. This plant furnishes green pasture continually. One acre will carry one cow all the time, and in addition will feed several head of calves and hogs.

Gold Teeth or Bridge Work

This method does away with plates and, while more expensive is certainly much more satisfactory. You can bite and masticate with these teeth just as you could with natural teeth. We do so much of this work and save more time by the Schiffman Method that we are enabled to save you about 25 per cent. In delicate work like this, where pactice is such an element in success, does it not seem reasonable to suppose that a dentist of natural ability, wide experience and unusual practice, can do better and cheaper work than others of less experience and small practice, even if they have the same natural ability? Reason answers for us.

It is with pleasure that I state that I have had several teeth filled by Dr. Schiffman, and that he removed the nerve and filled the root of one of my teeth, and put on a porcelain crown which cannot be distinguished from a natural tooth, all of which was done without pain. JUDSON R. RUSH, of Davis & Rush, Attorneys, 217 New High st.

I have had porcelain crown work and some filling done, and also had ten teeth and roots extracted by Dr. Schiffman, and take great pleasure in recommending his method to any one wishing dental work done without pain.

MRS. C. F. W. SCHRAMM,
Mother of Paloma Schramm, corner of Austin and Wadsworth.

I had my upper and lower teeth extracted by Dr. Schiffman without any pain. I have since had an upper and lower set made and they fit fine. They fit so tight that it is with difficulty that I can remove them. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Schiffman and his work; and advise every one needing work done to patronize him.

MRS. F. J. KELLOGG,
146 W. 14th st.

On account of some unfortunate experience I had in the extraction of my teeth, I became a great coward in this respect. Today Dr. Schiffman extracted one of my very refractory teeth without causing me one particle of pain. D. K. TRASK, Judge Superior Court, Los Angeles county.

West Naples

Thirty minutes spent in careful, thoughtful investigation will prove that West Naples is destined to become the premier watering place of the South Pacific.

Go down today and see what money, brains and unparalleled natural advantages are creating on the banks of the placid Alamitos Bay, the beautiful San Gabriel River and the rolling Pacific.

Go down and see WHY beach activity is concentrating at this point—WHY shrewd investors are picking West Naples as a logical "winner" from a speculative standpoint.

West Naples will have two majestic canals—2100 feet long and 100 feet wide—these marine thoroughfares will connect with 14 miles of navigable waterways—the only natural system on the Pacific slope. Ten-foot walks will border the canals and the latter will be spanned by beautiful bridges.

An esplanade 80 feet wide will be established. Other public improvements include a perfect water supply, gas, electricity, sewers and telephone systems.

Don't wait until the "beach buying" season is at its height when prices will be far in advance of what they are now. Early investments always bring the biggest rewards and West Naples will be no exception to this rule. Get busy NOW. You'll have to be content with smaller profits if you wait until improvements are farther advanced.

Remember that West Naples includes all the desirable features of other beaches and has a DOZEN EXCLUSIVE ADVANTAGES TO SPARE. West Naples is less than 40 minutes' ride from Los Angeles on the Pacific Electric line--commutation fare for the round trip is only 26c. Go down today and see the beach resort that will add to the fame of Southern California.

WILL YOU LET ME PROVE IT?

If You Have Any Kidney, Bladder or Uric Acid Disease (No Matter How Serious) I Will Send You Trial Treatment of a Medicine That I Believe Will Permanently Cure You. I Will Send You Needed Advice and I Will Send You a 2-Cent Postage Stamp, by Mail, Postage Paid.

ABSOLUTELY WITHOUT ANY CHARGE WHATSOEVER.

I know that I have perfected the one remedy that really does cure and cure permanently a large per cent. of Kidney, Bladder, Uric Acid and Urinary Diseases. I want every suffering man and woman to also know this FACT, consequently I say, and say in naked language, PUT ME TO THE TEST and make me prove it. All you need to do is just fill out the following coupon and send it to me. I will then send you sufficient medicine to prove that I have a REAL CURE. I will send you a book of proof. I will at any time give you my best advice, and I will send a good, unused, United States two-cent postage stamp to make good what it cost you to prepay postage in answering this notice, all of which I will send you ABSOLUTELY FREE AND PREPAID.

Remember, there is no expense to you now or forever ofter for all this and neither does this offer entail any obligation on your part. If I was only moderately successful I wonder how long it would take to bankrupt me in carrying out the provisions of the above offer? Not long, I warrant you, though I am by no means a poor man.

My cure used as directed POSITIVELY WILL NOT HARM the most delicate person in the world, and it HAS CURED CASES nothing else could touch.

You ask "why it will cure you when everything else you have used has failed?" I will tell you my conclusions.

When there is any disease of the Kidneys or Bladder there is always a leakage of vitality from a system either through the urine or by absorption by poisonous matter, or both. The vitality thus lost is absolutely necessary to the support of the cell structure of the kidneys, and to the keeping clean of the bladder. Most any good kidney or bladder remedy will restore to the blood and fluids some of this peculiar though absolutely necessary vital element, but not enough to give these vital organs a sufficient chance to gather themselves for the complete overthrow of the disease. My cure DOES THIS. At least it has for hundreds, yea thousands of others, so why should it not for you?

My cure gives back the necessary vitality, it helps to restore healthy tissues, it cleans and heals the kidneys and bladder. It expels the poisons which may be rotting the kidneys and stupefies and casts out germ life. Just try it and let it CONVINCE YOU as I think it will, that all the pains, aches and misery you are suffering from are entirely and absolutely UNNECESSARY.

Not every neglected or wrongly treated case leads to premature death, but a very large per cent. do, and you should bear in mind that by taking my treatment now this element of danger is reduced to a minimum. Therefore, to escape your present suffering and what may become an incurable disease attended with suffering more intense, more awful, than anything you can now imagine, just fill out coupon below and send to DR. D. A. WILLIAMS, No. 71 P. O. Block, East Hampton, Conn.

(I presume no sufferer cares for the free stamp, but it is my pride to PROVE I have an ACTUAL cure at not one penny of expense to the sufferer.)

This coupon entitles you to free trial treatment, free advice, and a free postage stamp.

Give your name and full address plainly and send to Dr. D. A. Williams, 71 P. O. Block, East Hampton, Conn., and receive same by return mail.

PURSE FOUND—EMPTY.

Lady Tourist is Minus Cash and Jewelry—Stock Certificate Story a Yellow Fake.

The purse belonging to Mrs. M. O. Hastie, of Des Moines, Iowa, which was stolen by sneak thieves while Mrs. Hastie was in the store of Howland & Co., on Broadway, Friday afternoon, was recovered shortly after midnight yesterday morning.

It was found by a patrolman in a flush tank in a saloon on Main street. It had been rifled of its contents with the exception of a few valueless trinkets and a pair of gloves.

Mrs. Hastie yesterday morning identified the purse at the police station. She said that it had contained $100 in cash, jewels valued at $200, and a letter notifying Mrs. Patterson and herself of the final adjustment of the estate of Mr. Patterson, and that they had been left a sum of money, said to be about $1500.

The sensational report promulgated by the Yellow Howler about the $150,000 stock certificate for shares in the United States Steel Corporation being among the lost articles was laughed at, and was stated to be without the slightest foundation.

According to the police Mrs. Hastie thought so little of the missing letter that it was considered not worth while to postpone her daparture to El Paso, Tex., for one day.

Mrs. Hastie said that she recognized two men who had stood near her while in Howland's store as having followed her from the station. These men are thought to have stolen the purse while Mrs. Hastie was in another part of the store.

The police have an excellent description of the men, and detectives are at work on the case. Mrs. Mastie said she wanted the jewels returned as they had considerable intrinsic value. She said the lost letter was utterly valueless to her or any one else.

LIBERAL ALLIANCE.

Plans Made for Two-Day Celebration in This City at the End of the Month.

The Liberal Alliance is planning for a two-day celebration to be held at the Chutes on the 31st inst., and on April 1.

A number of prominent speakers are to deliver addresses. In the afternoon of the first day there is to be a juvenile ball and in the evening there will be exercises at the theater.

On the second day there will be athletic games in the park and in the afternoon an international parade for which an attendance of 10,000 is predicted. Each nationality is to have its flags displayed prominently, and is to be represented by two young women beauties.

PRESENTATION TO KLINE.

A special meeting of the Builders' Exchange was held at noon yesterday, and Jack Kline, secretary, was called "on the carpet." Jack on many occasions has exhibited a watch which he carries and which he declares has been in the family for 200 years. Col. W. S. Daubenspeck, as spokesman for the exchange, arraigned Kline for guiding himself by this ancient timepiece while living in such a modern city, and then handed to the astonished secretary a beautiful twenty-three-jewel gold watch, handsomely engraved, as a token of the appreciation of the exchange for his services, and as a memento of Kline's thirty-eighth birthday anniversary.

Whole Acres on High Ground With Every Desirable Home Feature — Never Affected by the Rains

SUNNYSIDE HEIGHTS

On the Gardena Branch of the Redondo Electric Railway and the San Pedro Inter-urban Line

Sunnyside Heights, platted in whole-acre lots, satisfies a want long felt by many homeseekers who find the ordinary sized lot all too small for their home ideals in this land of sunshine. Sunnyside Heights was especially planned to please this large and constantly growing class. It occupies a beautiful eminence fronting on Western avenue and traversed by Harvard and Normandie avenues, through thoroughfares, popular and desirable.

The improvements are of a character surpassing all others similarly platted. Graded and oiled streets and water in large mains add to the advantages and conveniences. The land is level and the soil of a fine quality.

The transportation facilities are very satisfactory, assuring easy access to and from the city, being furnished by the Gardena-Redondo electric line and the San Pedro Interurban. Another line is also in prospect out Western avenue, which would tend to directly enhance the values.

Another desirable feature lies in the fact that all the lots are platted in acre size, thus inviting a class of people seeking the ideal Southern California home and creating a neighborhood distinct, individual and select.

LITTLE TRIBE MOST ANCIENT.

Coming of Emperor Awaited by the Otomis.

President's Reception to the American Ambassador.

And There Is Likewise Joy Among the "Scientists."

BY EDWARD C. BUTLER.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.)

CITY OF MEXICO, March 9.—Recent discussion as to the boundary between the Federal district and the State of Mexico has affected land titles and fee-simple holdings of a little tribe located 20 kilometers west of this city, a tribe whose history, if learned men would agree, reaches back into the morning of Time. These Otomis are a tribe of the most ancient Mexican Indians, who are scattered to the number of about 600,000, throughout the States of Queretaro, San Luis Potosi, Guanajuato, Mexico, Michoacan, Puebla, Tlaxcala and Vera Cruz. There is a group of them living in and around a village on the Mexican National Railroad, twenty kilometers west of this city, called Huixquilucan, and it is supposed that there are about 5000 of these Otomis living in the valley of which the village is the center.

There are a number of hamlets such as San Bartolo, San Francisco and Agua Bendita. In the valley is a prominent hill, among the incidental foothills of the western ranges that lift their broken backs between the old volcano of Ajusco and the historic mountain of Las Cruces. This hill that rises from the Otomi Valley is called Tumabete. Iit is a sacred spot for these peculiar little people and one of their legends is that Moctezuma II is asleep in the heart of that hill of porphyry, and that some day he will make his way from his sleeping place to the center of the City of Mexico, through an underground passage supposed to connect with the once sacred hill of Chapultepec. According to the harmless belief of the Otomis, their long-sleeping Emperor will issue in the midst of the Plaza, full helmed with his green penache of plumes, his armor of quilted cotton and his javelin edged with obsidian.

These simple folk do not pretend to explain why the Emperor delays his coming for so many centuries, nor do they attempt to throw light upon this singular case of suspended animation. In the spring time and in the fall they have special observances in connection with their sleeping demigod, and although they are ostensibly Roman Catholics, many of them are pagans in practice.

The Otomi, who are supposed to have combined in the fifteenth century under the King of Acolhua, founded Zolatepetl and Huitzapan. Then and ever thence this people have had a difficult and different language from all other Mexican tribes, one that is buttural and full of nasal sounds. They are presumed to have reached Mexico in the time of Chimalpopoca, the third King of Mexico. First settling at Xaltocan, a flourishing Aztec village, they then moved to the north and northwest of this city.

One of the most curious questions that surrounds Mexico today is: What was the origin of man in America? Scientists have affirmed that the American continent, including Mexico, was settled by the Phoenicians, or the Egyptians, or Greeks, while others claim as the first settlers the Jews that were banished by King Salmanazar. All these opinions are more or less held to, but many among the most learned Mexicans are beginning to incline to the opinion that the first human beings upon the American continent were Otomis. The Nahuas, with their seven tribes, the Mixtecas and Xicalancos, the Zapotecas and Ulmecas, and even the famous Toltecs and the still mere famous and ancient Mayas, must then yield the palm of precedence to the Otomi. This race is now being conceded to have superseded the Yucas and the Moundbuilders, and even the fantastic race of giants that flourished on the Mexican continent and that their predecessors were the first to populate even North America.

Their legendary history would, therefore, run back according to Haechel 100,000 years. The Otomi of today is probably a dwarfed representative of the first Americans. They are small people as a rule, about the size of a well-grown girl of 12 years, while the old women, gray-haired and wrinkle-faced, seem to be growing still smaller, like "She," in Rider Haggard's African novel. None of the little tribe is handsome, and they are very self-centered.

They never marry among other Indians but keep to themselves, carrying along with them a family pedigree beside which no royal house on earth can claim peerage. They are usually brown-skinned people, suspicious to the extreme, sad-faced people and old even when young. The eyebrows are heavily haired and often meet across the nose, the hair growing low upon the forehead. The nose is flat, broad and depressed at the root, while the lip is flat and wide. The eyes are dark brown and the hair black and coarse.

Most of these Otomis wear the white cotton trousers and shirt common to the Mexican Indian generally, but some of them have older costumes. As a people they are very fond of pulque drinking and their food generally consists of corn with a scant allowance of meat. They drink, however, two or three times as much pulque as they eat meat.

THE AMERICAN MINISTER.

The reception of the new American Ambassador, David E. Thompson, by President Diaz yesterday noon knits anew the diplomatic chain in Mexico. For many months the United States government has been represented here by Hon. Fenton R. McCreery, Chargé d'Affaires. Mr. Thompson being the only Ambassador in Mexico, becomes ex-officio dean of the Diplomatic Corps, a precedence which is gratifying to Americans as it puts their country foremost in the diplomatic circles of Mexico. Mr. Thompson first visited Mexico in the years 1876 and 1877, years of trial and trouble for the republic which was being rehabilitated by President Porfirio Diaz who had just been elected for the first time. Sixteen years ago Ambassador Thompson again visited this country, and each time has witnessed the marvelous advance made by Mexico.

He has rented the handsomest house in Colonia Roma for his residence and proposes to sustain the dignity of his country, not only diplomatically, but socially. He is accompanied to Mexico by his wife, who is a very graceful and beautiful woman, and who is fast making friends in the colony. She is an enthusiastic Christian Scientist and attends the services of that church in this city.

This summer Ambassador and Mrs. Thompson expect to have a house party of about half a dozen friends and relatives from Nebraska, most of whom are also Christian Scientists.

And she's my wife.

THE CONSERVATIVE BUYER

appreciates the value and money-making quality of the article he is buying. This principle applies particularly to REAL ESTATE. The VALUE of and future prospects for OCEAN FRONTAGE at a place like OCEAN PARK and VENICE, are at once appreciated by the most CONSERVATIVE INVESTOR.

WE all can see a great future value in OCEAN FRONTAGE, and we know the quantity of it is very limited. WOULD anyone have thought ten years ago that OCEAN FRONTAGE in ATLANTIC CITY would be worth its present value per front foot? But it is a fact—it has sold at fabulous prices within the last two years. WHO knows how high the OCEAN FRONT PROPERTY here will go within the next few years? Here where we have an all-year season, compared with the three or four months' season on the ATLANTIC COAST.

WE have some very CHOICE pieces of OCEAN FRONTAGE between WINDWARD and PIER AVENUES, that are bound to more than double in value within the next two years. THEN why are they not good buys, at anything like present prices?

WE can offer some specially fine pieces, right close in, either BUSINESS or RESIDENCE, at money-making prices. Also finely furnished beach homes. STOP IN and see us about our real "money-making" SNAPS.

Gold Blades Sharper Than Steel

Factory in Los Angeles Now Marketing Gold and Copper Instruments.

AN industry of very great importance in its probable effect upon the demand for copper has been started in Los Angeles, as a result of the discovery of Mr. Z. F. Vaughn of means to temper gold, silver and copper.

Gold surgical instruments, such as knives, hypodermic and suture needles are now being manufactured here in quantity. The delicate gold blades are as keen as the sharpest razor. Thrown point downward they will stick into a hard table-top and stand there quivering.

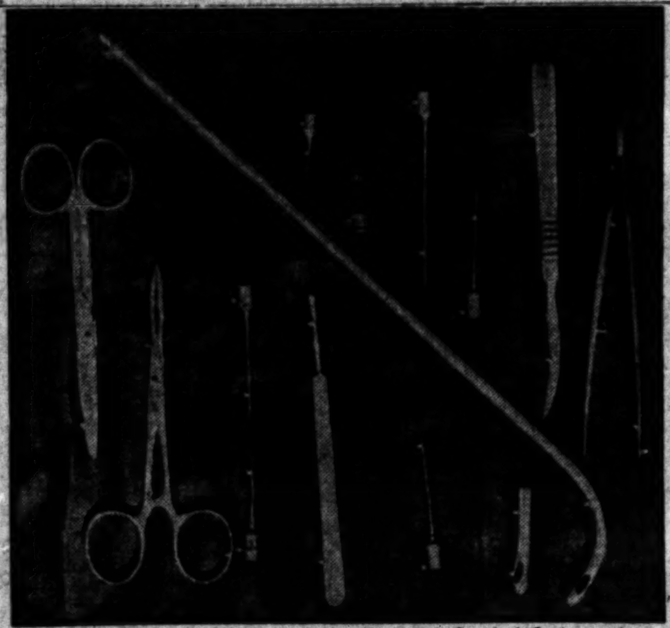
The Mining Review has made a careful investigation of the plant and the results attained. Samples of tempered gold and copper have been submitted to assayers and by thorough tests have been proven to be gold and copper.

Samples of tempered gold, silver and copper have been sumbitted to Dr. Julius Koebig of the Los Angeles Chemical and Metallurgical laboratories. He finds that the claims made by Mr. Vaughn for these tempered metals are fully sustained by the results.

Mr. Vaughn began his investigations in 1888, and has been steadily at it ever since. He does not claim to have discovered a lost art, but to have invented means whereby gold, silver and copper, either separately or in alloy, can be taken through the various degrees of crystallization which correspond to the several tempers known in the arts.

By the process used, these ductile metals are not only hardened but their density and homogeneity are brought to such practical perfection that a cutting edge is effective because of its absolute and microscopic fineness and smoothness. It does not tear—it divides; and for surgical purposes instruments of tempered gold are said to be superior to those of steel because no microscopic speck of rust can harbor dangerous germs.

Interesting and important as the tempering of gold is from metallurgical and surgical points of view, the great commercial value of the discovery lies in its application to copper, and the widely extended use of that metal which is thereby promised.



Tempered Hypodermic Needles and Other Tempered Surgical Instruments—14-Carat Gold.

It is stated by Mr. Vaughn that tempered copper is not subject to that crystallization through vibration, which limits the life of steel. That springs of tempered copper have not only as great elasticity and strength as steel springs, but that, owing to the extreme slowness of the process of crystallization, they will retain the spring temper for a practically indefinite period. Furthermore that owing to this quality of tempered copper and its great tensile strength, all metal parts of machinery which are subject to vibration may be be more profitably, and as in the case of propellor shafts, more safely made of copper than of steel.

It is thought that the most immediate and possibly the most extensive use of tempered copper, will be for journal bearings. It is stated that owing to the great density of the metal, it takes a perfect polish with use and makes an almost frictionless bearing, free from danger of over-heating and long outlasting either babbit metal or brass for the purpose.

It is thought by scientific men that tempered copper, owing to its hardness and density, will solve several important problems of electrical engineering with the result that usefulness of electrical machinery will be materially extended, with corresponding increase in the use of copper.

At 223 West First street, Mr. Vaughn has established his factory, and is working a force of men in the manufacture of gold surgical instruments, for which there has arisen an insistent demand. Gold hypodermic needles are particularly sought for, because a number of remedies, such as those containing acids, or the mercurial salts, which could not be used with steel needles, may now be introduced directly to the blood. Furthermore, tempered gold needles are perfectly aseptic if reasonably well cared for, and steel needles are not so, because of the incessant liability of steel to corrosion.

The whole effort of Mr. Vaughn's present force is directed to the manufacture of the instruments here illustrated. He is, however, about to add a copper tempering plant of sufficient capacity to turn out the metal on a commercial scale. Later, silver will likewise be tempered for use in the manufacture of cutlery.

A company has been incorporated in Los Angeles under the style of the Tempered Ductile Metals Company, to finance necessary and very considerable enlargements of the enterprise. The success attained so far in the manufacture of tempered gold surgical instruments has by the testimony of metallurgists and surgeons of standing, been most notable. The samples of tempered copper suitable for springs, for bearings and for rigid bars, which have been submitted for expert examination, promise a like success in a much more extended field.

The officers of the new company are: Mr. Wm. V. Holley, president; Mr. H. Howard Douglas, vice-president; Mr. Jacob E. Meyer, treasurer; Mr. Wm. A. Alderson, secretary; Mr. Z. F. Vaughn, superintendent.

I have been using gold hypodermic needles manufactured by Mr. Vaughn in Los Angeles for the past two months, and have been greatly pleased with their efficiency and would regret very much if I were compelled to do without them. They do not rust after boiling or after using mercurial salt; their lumen remains the same; they do not break off and can be readily sharpened. Those who are in the habit of using hypodermic needles frequently will certainly appreciate the gold needles. There is no comparison to be made between the steel and the gold needle. The steel needle is simply not in it. R. WERNIGK.

F. Parmentier, plans for a three-story frame building, with plastered exterior, fronting 120 feet on Aliso street, 132 feet on Summit avenue and 74 feet deep. It will contain four stores on the first floor and fifty rooms, divided into suites, on the upper stories.

Charles E. Shattuck, drawings for a two-story eight-room residence on Brand Boulevard between Berchum and Doran avenues, Glendale, for Price Brown.

Kavanaugh & Barnes, plans of a part one and two-story factory building 150x300 feet, in the Industrial district, for the Railway Axle Mfg. and Machine Co. It will be of brick, frame and plaster construction and have railway trackage through it with moving cranes for handling rolling stock.

F. P. Burnham, plans of a three-story frame hotel building 40x80 feet, at Huntington Beach, for Mrs. Ruth A. Williams of Santa Ana; also plans of a two-story, eight-room residence, purely colonial in style and finish, at Covina, for B. L. Reynolds. Extensive porches will give the building a width of 60 feet by a depth of 40 feet.

S. Tilden Norton, plans for three frame buildings, each to contain two six-room flats. These buildings will be erected on the southwest corner of Westlake avenue and Sixth street for A. B. Cohn.

Scott Bros., plans for a store and dwelling at the corner of Temple and Figueroa streets for Mrs. Jessie A. Ogg; also drawings for a modern California style frame residence at Gadsden, Ala., for Mrs. M. W. Duke of Pasadena.

Morgan & Walls, plans of a three-story brick bank building 75x100 feet, at San Pedro, for George H. Peck. The front will be faced with glazed terra cotta and have plate-glass windows, marble staircase, tiled lobby, concrete vault and general fire-proof construction.

A. L. Haley, plans for a two-story, eight-room frame residence to be built at San Diego for the Bartlett estate. Also plans for a two-story building to contain two six-room flats, to be erected at Long Beach for F. G. Wood. Also plans for a large fourteen-room residence to be constructed for M. W. Everhardy, at the northeast corner of Eleventh street and Elden avenue. Also drawings for a convent in Bisbee, Ariz. It will be two stories high, 93x72 feet, and mission in style. Also plans for a fifty-room hotel and a dining-room 100x40 feet, at the mining camp of the Lowell Mining Co., at Palmdale. A fifty-stamp mill will also be added to their plant in the near future. Also plans for a three-story building to contain twelve three-room apartments, on the east side of Westlake avenue, near Seventh street for H. E. C. Webb.

G. H. Ashby, plans for a modern five-room cottage to be built for Felix Hess.

O. E. Goodale, plans for the addition of three large classrooms to the Sawtelle school, making it, when finished, an eight-room building; also plans for a one-story and basement store building, 51x60 feet, at Sawtelle, for C. B. Tibbetts; also plans for a two-story, ten-room frame residence on Kensington Road for Mrs. Lowe; also plans for a railway station and waiting-room at Belle Vernon station, on the line of the Southern Pacific Co.

A. B. Benton, plans for a four-story-and-basement building, 60x160 feet, on the west side of Hill street north of Third street, for the Young Women's Christian Association. It will be of fire-proof or slow-burning construction; of the Spanish type in style, with large interior court; also plans of an orphanage on a fifteen- acre tract at Toluca for the Florence Home. It will be a two-story and basement frame structure with dormitories for the accommodation of forty inmates.

F. S. Allen plans a seven-room bungalow at Alhambra for S. K. Sewall.

It will cost about $3000; also plans of an eleven-room patio residence at Altadena for J. T. Caulston to cost about $10,000; also plans of a twelve-room residence at Altadena for J. B. McPherson to cost about $10,000.

C. F. Driscoll, plans of a five-room bungalow for William Krug, at La Crescenta Cañada; also plans of an eight-room residence for George W. Adams to be built on Grant street, Pasadena.

EMBOWERED CALIFORNIA HOMES.

The illustration used today on this page of The Times is for the purpose of showing how the simplest homes in Southern California are embowered in a beauty of abundant foliage, flowering shrubs, and flower beds. One section of the picture shows the porch of a modest home in the city of Los Angeles. It is a type of thousands of such homes in all parts of the city, adorned with a wealth of trailing vines, graceful in their tracery and green as emerald, with beautiful palms of many varieties, and with shrubs, whose blossoming beauty are as various as the colors of the kaleidoscope.

The other section of the picture shows two cottages at Sierra Madre, one owned by Mrs. Sinsabaugh of Los Angeles and the other the cottage home of A. D. Hawks. The trees around these two cottages are largely orange groves, and when the photographs were taken in December the trees were hanging full with fruit as yellow as burnished gold. Scattered along the walks are seen the feathery tracery of palms and also a great many flowering shrubs, roses climbing nd wandering in every direction, which all winter long, as well as through the summer months hang laden with beautiful bloom.

This wealth of foliage and of bloom is as rich as could be found even in the tropics. The advantage of Southern California over the tropics is that we have here a temperature conducive not only to perfect comfort by the absence of extremes, but also to healthfulness. Although the foliage is as bright as June in the Eastern States, and the bloom as rich as midsummer there, yet the air is cool, bracing and invigorating.

THE HARWOOD BUILDING.

The Harwood Building, on the northwest corner of Sixteenth and Main streets, has recently been completed, and is said to be the finest structure of its kind south of Ninth street. The building occupies a ground space of sixty feet frontage on Main street and 100 feet on Sixteenth. It is a modern three-story-and-basement business block, constructed of pressed brick and terra cotta. The second and third stories contain thirty-four large rooms arranged for offices, and rooms in suites, provided with baths, closets, lavatories, hot and cold water, gas and electricity. The large twelve-foot corridors are handsomely finished in lincrusta, and for light and ventilation the building is unsurpassed. The entrance to the second and third stories is finished in terra cotta and paneled oak. The building throughout is provided with plate glass. The first story is arranged for stores, the fronts of which are finished in copper and heavy plate glass, surmounted by Luxifer prisms. A well-lighted concrete basement covers the entire building area. Morgan & Walls are the architects. The building is an ornament to this part of Main street, and is indicative of its rapid growth. Cost $36,000.

BY OWNERS AND DEALERS.

THE MARKET PRETTY ACTIVE IN SPITE OF RAIN.

Business Property, Cottages, Houses, Building Lots, Flats and Country Property Bought in All Parts of the City and in the Country Close in.

Ceres Avenue Flats Sold.

The Title Insurance and Trust Company sold to P. Duran and associates, through the agency of Black Bros., 100x110 feet on the west side of Ceres avenue, about 250 feet south of Fifth street, improved with four frame flat buildings, Nos. 527 to 535; consideration, $37,500.

On Moneta Avenue.

Calderwood & Gleasner report this sale: A lot on the west side of Moneta avenue, forty-eight feet south of Thirty-seventh street, 42x144 feet to alley, vacant, from John P. Knoff to Lee Gammon and Matt Conway; consideration, $4200.

On Fremont.

The Van Vranken-Hunter Realty Company report the sale of a lot 60x165 feet, on the east side of Fremont street, just south of Third, from H. H. Welch to George H. Rector for $8000.

Flat Investment.

Charles O. Goodwin has sold to Walter Holst for Lillie Lawrence, a lot 82x120 feet on the south side of West Second street, between Figueroa and Flower, improved with two flats and seven-room house; consideration, $13,500.

Coronado Street Deals.

Isaac Milbank, who owns and lives in the Sterry mansion, on the corner of Wilshire boulevard and Coronado street, some time ago bought the second lot north of the Sterry premises for $3500. He has just purchased the next vacant lot north of that for $3650. These lots are 50x130 feet, both unimproved. Nicholas Milbank, a brother of the one just named, has bought No. 615 Coronado street from S. A. Butler, for $7500. The lot is of the same size as of the two just mentioned, and it is improved with a good ten-room house, including the reception hall. Mr. Butler bought this property and improved it two or three years ago at a cost of about $5500. The Milbanks will divide between them the lot immediately south of the Butler place, and Nicholas Milbank will enlarge the house he has just bought, making a large mansion of it. The vacant property between this new building and the Sterry house will be used as a tennis court, rose garden, and for similar purposes. Mr. Butler keeps possession of the house he has just sold, rent free, until August. He has bought a lot in the same block, on the southwest corner of Sixth and Coronado streets, 50x125 feet to an alley, from R. S. Saunders. The price is not made public. Just as the deal was closed Mr. Butler was approached with an offer of an advance over $4000 for the lot, but he declined to part with it, as it is his intention to proceed at once with the construction of a very good house for his own use upon this lot.

For Business—Many Homes.

J. W. Rice reports the following sales: William Saulsbury to Prentice Lebus, 45x165 feet on the east side of South Grand avenue, about 200 feet south of West Seventh street; consideration, $34,500. J. W. Pinney to D. L. Campit, 25x110 feet with a six-room cottage, Ruth avenue, between Sixth and Seventh streets; consideration, $4000. Lawrence R. Sevier to J. W. Rice, lot on Berendo between Seventh and Eighth streets, 50x150 feet; consideration, $2500. Bradshaw Bros. to Harry R. Friedgen, a lot on west side of Vermont avenue between West Eighth and Ninth streets; consideration, $1800. Nancy M. Musselman to Walter E. Brode, lot on Vermont avenue 200 feet south of Seventh street; consideration, $2000. Mrs. J. O. Marsh to Bertha M. Townsend, 50x145 feet on Catalina street, 100 feet south of Eighth street; consideration, $1900. A. V. Stavnow to Edwin H. Clark, 50x150 feet on the west side of New Hampshire, south of Seventh street; consideration, $2500. Nancy M. Musselman to Mrs. Joseph Merrill, 50x145 feet on the east side of New Hampshire street; consideration, $2000. J. W. Rice to Dr. L. R. Sevier, 50x135 feet on the east side of Juliet street, 200 feet north of West Twenty-fourth street, on which purchaser will erect a beautiful home. To E. Clem Wilson, 50x135 feet on the west side of Juliet street, 300 feet north of West Twenty-fourth street; consideration, $1750.

On Washington.

W. J. Burt & Co. report the sale of a lot on Washington street near Vermont, 100x135 feet, unimproved, for $6500.

RANCHES SOLD.

A syndicate has been formed composed of G. S. Marshutz, Dr. E. C. Manning, Phil A. Newmark and G. C. Maughlin, and these associates have formed what is to be known as El Reposo Land and Water Company. They have bought El Reposo Rancho at Sierra Madre. The property consists of 105 acres, and is nearly all improved. There are good hotel buildings on it, which have been used as a country resort. The price paid to Dr. Manning was something less than $30,000. The new owners will proceed at once to develop an additional supply of water. The water supply at present is liberal, but the improvements planned will require more. A good deal of the land is already in orchard.

This land lies at the very base of the Sierra Madre range, just east of Sierra Madre, looking out over the whole valley, including the course of the San Gabriel River throughout its whole length, and the beautiful hills lying just east of the stream. Far off, the great mountains rise in a circle on the horizon. The background of the scene is the mountains themselves, which tower thousands of feet right over the hotel.

With the development of the larger water supply, the lands will be put under a still higher degree of cultivation, and the hotel buildings will be very much enlarged and improved. The purpose is to make this an ideal country resort for winter and summer visitors. The effort will be especially towards attracting the attention of the thousands of tourists who visit this part of the country every month in the year.

The Workman, or what is sometimes called the Griffin Ranch, situated on Verdugo Road, one-half mile south of the Verdugo store, has been sold to Arthur Hawes of Los Angeles for $58,500 cash. The ranch contains about 200 acres of beautiful rolling land, and was purchased for an investment. This land will have a frontage of more than half a mile on the Verdugo Park Electric line. The sale was consummated by J. A. Gates of Eagle Rock.

Oliver & Miller sold for C. E. Thom twenty-five acres on Central avenue, near the West Glendale Schoolhouse, to Los Angeles capitalists for $850 per acre. This tract will be subdivided into building lots.

Frank Simmons of Glendale sold for the Glassell estate 146 acres fronting east on Central avenue and north on Fourth street, for $92,500, to the Erkenbrecher Syndicate. The survey is now being made, and the whole property will be placed on the market at once. Streets will be graded and oiled and cement curbs and sidewalks put in. There will also be building restrictions. It is to be made a high-class property. is two blocks from Brand boulevard and the electric line, and is known as the Glassell Vineyard.

ALADDIN'S LAMP.

Charlie McFarland's Fairy Tale in a Big Real Estate Deal on Main Street.

It is hard to get real news about fortunes made in real estate in Los Angeles these days of the big boom. But Charles H. McFarland has a story to tell which makes those in the Arabian Nights seem dull.

About three years ago Charlie went down on the corner of Main and Ninth streets, and blew about $85,000 into a big, square piece of property. All the friends he has, and they are many, surrounded him, pushing, pulling, threatening, and pleading, to prevent him from risking his little competency in such a wild speculation. He paid no attention to anything but his own judgment, and blew his money in on the big venture. About a year ago or less, he sold off the rear end of this lot a slice for which he received just the amount of money he had paid for the whole piece.

Then he contemplated with a smile the larger part of the piece of property which was still his, and had not cost him a nickel. But he smiled still more brightly ten days ago when he closed up a deal by which he banked just $250,000 profit on his little venture. The syndicate which conducted the negotiations sold the property for $270,000. They had an option at the even $250,000. They made their little nest egg of $20,000, and turned over the option price to the lucky investor.

The Chino Land and Water Company report an active demand for farm land, 2500 acres having already been sold to actual settlers this year. Land is selling for $100 and $150 per acre.

[illegible] FOREIGN MISSIONS.

[illegible] the subject of this article ought to be [illegible] Foreign Missionaries." From the stand- [illegible] the churches, foreign missions are essen- [illegible] life of the churches. They would not be [illegible] true sense of the word if they did not [illegible] work. But there is something to say [illegible] missionaries, and any criticism aimed at [illegible] in a spirit of sympathetic kindness and [illegible] What we would draw attention to is [illegible] missions are managed.

[illegible] how this is done. Three or four or more [illegible] wholesome, intelligent, young American [illegible] with a zeal for their Master's cause, are [illegible] into the missionary field with nothing [illegible] elementary, superficial and theoretical [illegible] their work. At the head of these is gener- [illegible] and generally not overconservative [illegible] This little company is sent not to some sea- [illegible] where there is more or less of the society of [illegible] to be had, but far afield into the in- [illegible] China or Japan, where the work lies almost en- [illegible] the peasant class, who in a majority of [illegible] never heard the name of Jesus Christ before [illegible] of the little mission. The plan of attack is, [illegible] the language is learned sufficiently to put the [illegible] into imperfect communication one with an- [illegible] to the heathen that they are all [illegible] their relations have been long wrong, that [illegible] race has been wrong for a thousand genera- [illegible] there is nothing good in their religion, noth- [illegible] in their habits, that the whole thing must [illegible] forthwith. This little band of missionaries [illegible] mass of adamantine ignorance, [illegible] spectral superstitions. The inert [illegible] of the uncultivated savages or semi-savages [illegible] they live are impregnable against any [illegible] of reason or argument the inexperienced girls [illegible] have at their command. What igno- [illegible] to prevent the entrance of argument into their minds, hoary superstitions and race prejudices accomplish by closing their souls against the possible entrance of any thought contrary to the influences they have imbibed from their fathers and grandfathers.

What would you do? Follow the example of the first missionaries of the Cross. Let us take the greatest of all missionaries who ever undertook to preach Christ and Him crucified to the unbelieving world, St. Paul, the great apostle of the Gentiles, certainly deserves as much as that to be said of his character and his work. What was his mode of procedure? To go to the largest centers of population and of intellectual thought in the world. St. Paul's work was done at Jerusalem, at Antioch, at Ephesus, at Athens, at Corinth, and at Rome. It was before the Sanhedrin at Jerusalem and in the synagogues daily that he delighted to discuss the merits of the Christian religion. It was before a Festus or a King Agrippa, or upon Mars Hill in the presence of the Areopagite court, that he delighted to deliver his message.

Another thing. How did he go about it? When with the Jews, he took their scriptures, and from prophecy and psalm he led down step by step until he set Jesus on a pedestal as the promised Messiah of the Jewish nation. On Mars Hill, with this intellectual gathering around him, he carefully abstained from telling them they were all wrong, that they were utterly mistaken, that they were going straight to perdition, and that he had the only key to salvation in his possession. What did he say to them? He looked around the city, where at every street corner stood an idol to a god. He says in the most diplomatic and friendly manner: "Ye men of Athens, I perceive that you are a very religious people." A pretty good way of opening their minds to any further discussion he should have before them on the subject of religion. Again he says: "As I went through the city, I saw an altar inscribed 'To the Unknown God.' The God whom you yourselves are worshiping without knowing His name, I have come to make His name known to you."

Well, what can the churches do? They can sit down and think right hard for a long space of time. And if they will, they are likely to reason out some such plan of campaign as this: Send out to one of the treaty ports a strong and thoroughly equipped mission. Let this mission plant itself securely in the treaty port. Let it go out, not to convert China in a day, in a year, nor in a generation. Plant this outpost of Christianity there in the most intellectual center of Chinese society. Let it carefully, diplomatically, and judiciously ally itself with the highest intellectual life of the city. As for the poor, forlorn outcasts, establish a school to teach the children. Establish a hospital to take care of the sick. Establish an asylum to take in and nourish the orphan. Relieve poverty, and want, and sickness, and affliction every moment of the day. Set them an example of a living Christianity in their midst, aim at converting the men of highest intellectual influence in the city, wait patiently for a generation, for a century, and let this leaven which is placed in the lump work its own results out in the course of long years.

There is another thing for the missionaries to learn, and for those who support the missionaries to insist upon being learned. It is this: The missionaries that go out from the continent of Europe particularly are politicians as much as they are religious teachers. In every country on the continent religion and politics are closely related. These missionaries go into China and pursue the very same tactics that they do in France and Belgium. They gradually begin to mix themselves up in the politics of the empire. It is unwise, and it is as un-Christian as it is unwise. The founder of Christianity never yielded for a moment to the numerous temptations that were placed in His way to mix himself up with the politics of the Jewish people or of the Roman empire. "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's."

Now, the plan is a very simple one. Let them follow the example of St. Paul, the first missionary, in preaching Christ and Him crucified and keeping their hands out of politics. Let them aim at the great intellectual centers, and let the fellow on the heath and the chap far away in the village, stolid, ignorant, and full of prejudice, go his own way for the time being, until Christianity gradually envelops him, as the rising tide covers the shore. At the head of these central missions in these treaty ports there ought to be a man of the broadest spirit of tolerance, of the mellowest wisdom, of the ripest experience of all the religious teachers of the day.

A GAME STORY.

They were spinning yarns of the great north woods, and finally it came the old major's turn.

"Gentlemen," he began, "you have all told stories of close calls in the great forests of the north, but I think my yarn will eclipse them all. Would you believe that I was once treed by one of the most ferocious bull moose that ever walked the woods? Well, gentlemen, I was, and to make matters worse, my ammunition gave out. As I thought of the loved ones at home, tears came in my eyes, rolled down in the palm of my hand and froze hard as marbles. A happy thought flashed through my mind. Taking the frozen tears I rammed them in my gun, blazed away, killed the moose, and then, gentlemen, and then——"

But just then the picture of Ananias fell off the wall.—[Chicago News.

PRACTICAL ETHICS.

COST OF WORKING FOR A CAUSE.

IT is small wonder that so few are willing to consecrate their lives to the work of a cause when we consider the cost of such consecration. Yet, nor calumny, nor obliquy, nor ridicule, condemnation to death has deterred brave spirits of true heroic type from following their life purpose. They are impelled by a force greater than any motive power of their own creation, and hence, whether they will or not, they must needs enter upon the scene of battle; victor or vanquished, however that may be, the cause beckons, implores, and by it, those firmly enlisted will stand or fall.

"O my country," cries the loyal patriot, "for thee I have lived, for thee I die!"

"O my cause,'" exclaims the brave warrior fighting in the cause of righteousness, for the elevation, the clarification, and salvation of the soul of man, "to thee have I dedicated my spirit, do with me as thou wilt. Though men shall rob and betray me; though they strip me of my own soul, and vaunt in the sight of the world what they have filched from another; though they ill-use and despise me for the good I have sought to accomplish; though in the end they revile me because I have loved and given of my love, my life and thought without stint to thee, all this will I suffer, inasmuch as I have given myself to a cause which is eternal. Then what matter though I go under, so long as I am faithful to thee, serving thee with all my heart, my soul, my strength!"

This is practically the pledge that one must take, the conditions to which he must subscribe, who would serve unremittingly through both troublous times and smooth, a commanding cause. Such is the price of working for a good without end, that he must be ready to feed the multitudes, yet prepared himself to know penury and want while others are nourished by his blood. Himself observant of the laws of justice and of truth, he must meet injustice and wrong as a portion of his lot. Ready like the tender-hearted poet:

> "To dry each tear of sorrow,
> To stifle every groan,
> Yet lonely, and forgotten,
> In sorrows of his own."

To work for a cause is often to take the place of servant when we might well be master; to see pigmies on the throne erected by giant hands while shaping and furthering the one supreme object—the ever-living cause! One must stand by in silence and submission to see the perpetration of crimes not yet morally or legally catalogued as such; to see hailed with trumpet sound of heraldry traitors and miscreants; to catch the fragrance of flowers strewn in their pathway to be trodden under foot even as the noble ones were trod upon who dared to cross their purposes for righteousness's sake.

Moreover, he must learn to be patient when the warm words scarcely out of his mouth are caught and uttered as another's. He must conquer the painful sensation which seizes him on seeing the children of his brain claimed and acknowledged as legitimate offspring of false pretenders; a target for the shafts of scorn, a footstool for the ease-loving to rest upon; a host for never-failing parasites who cling to him, maturing in his substance, then suddenly drop away elsewhere to repeat their degenerate life process.

"When my genius calls me," somewhere in his essays remarks Emerson, "I leave wife, child, home." The same price must be paid when following with one's whole being a really high and mighty cause. A cause that demands the establishment of truth and justice in the world, the practice of the larger righteousness—the bringing in of love for healing and redeeming a people, a race or humanity—then the tax is, Supreme Allegiance to the Cause.

"When the nation's life's at hazard, we've no time to think of men." When a world cause cries for champions, the one, the few, are sacrificed to the many.

The cost of working for a cause is therefore much more than paying membership dues, or affiliating with a body of avowed adherents. It is personal, public and private devotion to its progress, the price exacted, staunch support, through good and evil report, of the principles upon which the cause reposes. It means endurance of peril and hardships as well as enjoying the fruits of prosperity. There are those who eagerly come to join the reapers, but cowardly shirk the early labor of tilling and planting. They are those who would be seen in the merry march of "harvest home," reveling in, and satisfied with the gay pageant, but unwilling to bend the back in path-clearing with hoe and shovel, or trudge wearily behind the soil-upturning plow.

Thus formidable is the setting for workers in a cause, especially one too strange and remote for even sanction by the multitude. Nevertheless there are still here and there a few of the "saving remnant," who gladly accept the rigid posts for defense, or of guarding sentinels in fields beset with dangers, agreeing to the stringent terms upon which they are to render duty, content to face every trial with the hope and strength born of the inspiring conviction that true living is noble service, and noble service is to bear cheerfully their full share of the world's burdens; to take the part of donors as well as receivers; giving freely of powers of body, mind and spirit to the end of becoming actual coöperators with God or the Moral Force that shall ultimately dominate the universe.

Irrigation in Canada. By Frank G. Carpenter.

MONEY IN WATER.

BIGGEST PROJECT ON CONTINENT BY CANADIANS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CALGARY (Alberta.)—By all odds the biggest irrigation project on the North American continent is now under way in this province of Alberta. In 1902 all the irrigated lands of the United States did not amount to 10,000,000 acres. By this scheme Canada will redeem a million and a half acres of semi-desert and that by private parties without government aid. The work has been undertaken by the Canadian Pacific Railroad, which has exchanged a part of its land grant for 3,000,000 acres lying between here and Medicine Hat. Of this, 1,500,000 acres will be put under water, and the balance wll be sold to the irrigated land owners for pasture and mixed farming. This tract of irrigated lands is almost as great as all the irrigated lands of Colorado or Southern California. It is more than twice that of Utah, Idaho or Wyoming and many times that of any other Western State.

Section of great canal

St Mary's Lake in Montana

This work is now going on. One hundred and ten thousand arces are now ready for the turning on of the water, and double that amount will be added this year. The project will be handled in blocks of 1,000,000 acres each, and it will be continued until the whole tract is redeemed and settled. Altogether it means supplying homes to something like 30,000 families, and with the towns and other industries which will be built up along the line it ultimately means the addition of about 300,000 people to Canada's population.

The Great American Desert.

The lands to be redeemed are a part of what was once known as the Great American Desert. This runs northward through the western part of the United States and on into Canada. There is more water here than in our tributary country, but there are dry seasons, which make the lands unfit for ordinary farming, although winter wheat is now being raised on much of it. For the past fifteen years the Canadian government has had engineers at work taking the levels, measuring the streams and locating reservoirs. From such surveys it has been found that there are 70,000,000 acres of semi-arid land which need irrigation occasionally if they are to be used for farming. Tne government engineers estimate that 9,000,000 acres can easily be reclaimed, and that they will have an unfailing supply of water from the Saskatchewan and its tributaries if the proper works are made.

The land of the Canadian Pacific scheme lies in a solid block on both sides of the railroad between Calgary and Medicine Hat. It is flat or sightly rolling prairie, and is now used for grazing. The strip is 130 miles long, running back for some miles on each side of the track. The water is to come from the Bow River, a beautiful mountain stream. It will be fed by other rivers, which flow northward from the United States through the Belly and Bow into the Saskatchewan and thence on to Hudson's Bay.

A Big Irrigation Ditch.

The Bow River flows by Calgary. I drove out today to look at the ditches, already excavated, and to examine the irrigation project as far as it is completed. Taking carriages, we drove for miles over the prairie, riding at times along the embankments of the main canal, which is sixty feet wide at the bottom, ten feet deep and takes from the Bow something like 20,000 gallons of water every second. At many places the men were working, and the scenes were much like those I saw on the Panama Canal. There were hundreds of horses scooping up the prairie, there were great steam shovels gouging out the earth and loading it upon cars, and there were long trainloads of excavated material moving on the temporary tracks from one place to another. The soil is harder to work than that of the Culebra cut. Culebra is made of a shaly rock, and a single blast may loosen many tons. Here the earth is a conglomerate of sticky clay and great boulders which have a consistency something like soft taffy or half-worked putty. It gives little resistance and some parts have to be blasted over and over again. The stuff is of such a nature that the steam shovels cannot work in it without it is loosened, so that the cost of excavation is great.

I have talked with J. S. Dennis, the manager of this irrigation project, and also with the civil engineer in charge of it. He tells me that they have taken out about 4,000,000 cubic yards, which, as I figure it, would be just about enough to fill a line of two-horse wagons, at a ton to the wagon, reaching clear around the Altogether, 20,000,000 cubic yards will have to be vated before the whole area is under water, and engineers say that the cost of this will be $6,000,000. It is an enormous undertaking, but

In the meantime the lands are offered at

This would give water enough for the reclamation for 200,000 acres of land in the upper Milk River Valley, near the Great Northern Railroad.

In addition to this there are other schemes which would lead to the redemption of thousands of acres from the water coming chiefly from St. Mary's Lakes.

In the meantime the Canadians say that the Milk River runs for a hundred miles or more through Canada before it goes back into the United States, and that if the Americans disturb their irrigation works here, the waters of that river might be materially diminished by being spread over Canadian lands.

THE TURN OF THE TIDE THAT LEAD TO HONOR AND FORTUNE.

By a Special Contributor.

OUT on the western rim of the empty, vast desolation the sun was sinking into a ragged fringe of blood-red clouds. It threw broad gleams of lurid light across the plain, and flamed like golden prisms in the windows of the long Overland train rumbling with insistent clatter through what a moment before had seemed the very matrix of earthly silence.

The young, wan-faced woman occupying the first section in the sparsely-filled tourist car, leaned against the window frame and gazed wearily out on the everlasting, eerie sameness. Something in the gathering shadows roused a thrill of intense bitterness in her soul.

"It is like my life," her thoughts ran; "I've left the mountains far behind me, and I'm traveling on alone, in a dreary, barren land."

Great tears filled her soft brown eyes. She wiped them away, unheeded by the group of women chattering about the stove at the other end of the car.

"When my mans—an' he's a vera gut one—comes home from dem nort' lan's, he brings plenties o' golds," asserted a wide-faced, bovine-built woman, dressed in a new, creaking black satin, rivaling shoe-blacking in luster. "He comes, an' he tells me, 'now's the one best time to go back home an' make the folks pop mit the eyes to see you so fine;' an' den—he spends an' spends from his moneys, an' soon I'm already goin'—so!"

"My man's made an' awful big pile, too!" exultingly declared the owner of a rope of taffy-colored hair, as she pushed a huge gold comb into its mass. "I'm goin' on a visit to ma! He's stayin' to home till our new house is made, soon, then he's comin' to fetch me."

The testimony went on. Each one's "man" possessed gold and goodness; the lonely soul in Section One lost sight of the ludicrous as she listened, and in the pangs of self-sympathy she envied the owners of men so rare.

"My man," she murmured, with a quick indrawn breath of pain, "my man! God only knows where he is tonight, or what he's doing. He may be wandering over icy wastes, or lying stiff under a fast-gathering snow hummock; or the gold fever, burning out his very life with its terrible fires, may still hold him in its clutches and lead him as it wills. O God!" she moaned with a dry sob, "give me some word of my man! Let me look into his dear face once more!"

The long train quivered; slackened its speed, almost came to a stop, then, like a blooded horse after a deep breath, raced on again.

The first call for dinner emptied the car; even the poor excuse for a porter vanished, unnoticed by the young woman who brooded on in listless bitterness, her face turned toward the window, her eyes resting on the desolate immensity of far-reaching plain.

"I beg your pardon for disturbing you," half-whispered a curiously-quiet voice near her, "but will you kindly hand me all of your valuables?"

Every fiber of the woman's body quivered on a rack of terrifying fear. She turned automatically and gazed with horror-smitten eyes at the man whose huge frame blocked the end of her seat.

"Be quick, please——" he began, then, as his eyes, gleaming through the holes in the black silk handkerchief muffling his face, rested on her white, fear-drawn face, he gasped, muttered strangely, and involuntarily clutched at the back of the seat.

The woman's whole heart affrightment rang through the car in her desperate cry: "Dick! O God! Dick."

"Keep still, Ada!" the man hissed, with half-tender violence, tearing the handkerchief from his face and thrusting it deep into his pocket as he sprang toward the car door.

Divining his purpose, the woman sprang after him and seized his arm, her flexible, white fingers twisting about it like bands of tempered steel, while he struggled in vain to release himself.

A child's laughing call came from the platform of the next car.

The man's face grayed. "Fairly caught," he laughed shortly, as the woman led him back to her seat and sank, half-fainting, into its farthest corner.

The man hesitated, then coolly seated himself close to her. "It's just my luck, Ada, to make a beginning on you," he groaned. Then, urged on by the utter misery in her haggard face, he cried:

"God knows, Ada, I never tried robbery before, and He only knows why I tried it today; I don't. I was back by the tank when you slowed up; then a wild impulse came over me; a strange spirit of reckless daring carried me away, as I swung up on the platform of your car, ready to hold up the one lone woman I caught a fleeting glimpse of, or the whole train."

"Dick, how could you?" she moaned in desperation, her heart contracting with a pang of physical suffering. His spirit of wild impulse had found its vent in many a reckless deed of daring and filled her life with apprehension. She lifted her eyes to his face with a dim shadow of regret that he was not a wanderer in the far North. Then something that she saw in his resolute, keen-eyed face roused the everlasting love she gave the true soul she well knew was hidden and covered by the insistent cry of the primitive man in him.

She threw her arms about him and clung to him, sobbing passionate words of love. She begged him, with piteous pictures of her loneliness, to go with her. "Why, even this afternoon," she cried, "I was sick to death for you, when the ignorant women in this car all talked of their 'mens,' and I knew nothing of mine; for, Dick, I didn't know that you were still alive."

He drew her closer to him and kissed her again and again. "What's taking you East, Ada?" he questioned. "I thought you were waiting for me in Spokane."

"Dick, I did wait—twice as long as you said that you'd be away," she answered, with a bitter sob, "and I couldn't wait any longer, for I'd used up every cent you left me. I had to write home for the money for my trip."

"I deserve to be shot!" Dick groaned. Thrusting his hand deep into his pocket, he pulled it out full of gold pieces and dropped them into her lap. "You needn't be afraid to use them, Ada," he laughed mockingly. "I swear I got them honestly. Put them away, for we must talk fast now, as I'm going to leave you at the next stop."

A little later, the snorting engine before them began to murmur softly.

The woman lifted her face, beautiful with its seal of deathless love. Its mute message touched the man's heart and found entire understanding.

"There, there, little wife," he whispered, "I'll promise that at last, just as soon as I can earn enough to care for you as I ought, I'll come after you. I'll earn it square—and I'll keep decent for your sake. Help me God!"

When the long train pulled into the little station a man jumped from one of its platforms and hurried rapidly away in the gathering darkness.

In Section One of the tourist car the love-encouraged woman traveled on with a soft smile on her lips and a rejoicing heart for the hope-filled future before her.

All that night, out on the cage-covered, alkali waste, the man fought with a legion of devils. He was still fighting when the sun threw its light over the land and swept away the evil mirage hovering about him. Faint misty gleams danced before his eyes in the sunlight, each a filmy likeness of the woman speeding hopefully toward their future.

He tore the black handkerchief savagely from his pocket and flung it into the air. For an instant it fluttered above him, like a bird of ill omen, then, carried by the breeze, a plaything of chance, it sailed through the air toward a fringe of wind-whipped trees along a rocky ledge in the distance; caught among their dusty branches, its eyeholes seemed filled with malicious leers to the man who pantingly followed it.

With an angry cry he sprang toward the flaunting rag. The uplifted mat of roots about the trees entangled his feet, and threw him over into the deep, rock-lined crevasse below them.

Down he went, clutching wildly at the jagged rocks, and reaching the bottom a seemingly life-forsaken hulk.

. . . .

Up among the treetops a bird warbled the first clear notes of its evening song.

The man opened his eyes, dazed, bewildered and sorely conscious of his pain-racked body.

The bird repeated, and lingered on one long, shrill note.

Its insistence effectually roused the man. The sun, pouring slantwise through a dip in the western edge of the crevasse, touched the broken bits of rock scattered about him. His eyes, trained by past experiences, detected the signs he saw in them; like a flash his brain grasped and responded to their meaning.

After a long struggle he got on his feet. Groaning with pain, stopping often to examine a broken rock, panting for breath, he stumbled, and crawled up over the jagged rock walls and rested at last under the cringing trees, exulting in golden dreams of the future—a life-reviving cordial.

Amanda, whom I so admire,
  And hold as Eve's most beauteous daughter,
For thy sake I would go through fire,
  And also through the coldest water:
There's naught in air, on earth, or sea,
I would not face for love of thee!

The jungle's tangled depths I'd pierce,
  To prove that passion fires my being;
No beast of prey, however fierce,
  Should find me from its talons fleeing.
I'd look it in its eyes of flame
And breathe thy soul-inspiring name!

I'd stand before the deadliest gun
  That ever came of man's invention;
But, still, Amanda, there is one Thing I would rather like to mention:
I dare not face the dreadful doom
That lurks within thy drawing-room!

I shudder with affrightedness
  Whene'er I think of those bacilli,
And I must candidly confess
  I dare not step inside—nor will I.
So let me, love, when next I call,
Pay my addresses in the hall.

The Khedive of Egypt. By Frederic J. Haskin.

ABBAS HILMI.

A Sovereign Reigns Who Has But Little Authority

From Our Own Correspondent.

CAIRO.—Having to take orders from London and pay tribute to Constantinople, the Khedive of Egypt may well be said to be a ruler in pawn. His Highness, Abbas Hilmi II, is the seventh of the Mehemet Ali line to act as the head of the Egyptian people, but he is only a nominal ruler. There is little about his appearance or daily life to suggest that he is the successor of the Pharaohs and Ptolemies. Were it not for his escort of cavalry and his fez, you would pass him in the streets of Cairo without suspecting that he was the occupant of the place once held by Alexander and Cleopatra. Before giving further details about the Khedive it may be well to dwell for a space upon the causes which contributed directly to his reduced condition.

Egypt is the scene of the Arabian Nights tales, and to them might well be added the fanciful but truthful story of Ismail, that extraordinary spendthrift whose unparalleled generosity and wastefulness delivered unborn generations of his countrymen into financial bondage, and deprived his own heirs of their birthright of authority.

"Send a Wagonload of Money."

One of his daughters once sent him a note saying: "Please send me a wagonload of money. I want it quick." This request, coming so suddenly, might easily have assumed the proportion of a run on the bank, but Ismail, without having the slightest idea what the girl wanted with so much money, promptly sent her a wagonload of cash. When Gen. Sherman's daughter was married this improvident ruler sent her a handful of diamonds as a wedding gift. The value of these gems was so great that when the question of paying duty on them arose, it threatened to wreck the small family fortune. Ismail was a great admirer of the United States, and his gifts were not confined to individual citizens of that country. The great obelisk in Central Park, New York, was presented by him. Although this valued object had been secured to Alexandria by the enterprise of Julius Caesar, and was covered with hieroglyphs of the time of Rameses and Sati, antedating the Christian era by 1200 years, he gave it away to foreigners without a moment's reluctance or regret.

The promoters of the Suez Canal promised that this enterprise should cost Egypt nothing, but by the time it was ready to open they had reached deep into Ismail's treasury. An ordinary man, having his experience with that unblushing band of plunderers, would have had enough of the project, but this forgiving oriental merely took advantage of the occasion to dwarf all his other acts of magnificence. He inaugurated a reign of festivities so sumptuous as to rival even the extravagances of Akbar in India. It took forty-eight ships to convey his guests in the triumphal opening procession through the canal.

The Sport of Kings.

Among those who accepted the spendthrift's hospitality at this time were half the crowned heads of Europe, including the French Empress, the Austrian Emperor, and the Prince and Princess of Wales. For a month Cairo was the scene of the most dazzling succession of gaieties the modern East has ever seen. An operahouse was built especially for the production of the opera Aida, and after the first performance Verdi, the composer, was given a complimentary purse of $30,000.

It is not surprising that a man so fond of ostentation should have been suspected of gaining his position by foul play. When Ismail's education was completed in Paris, he returned to Egypt with big notions in his head, but with an elder brother obstructing his way to the throne. When a special train conveying the heir apparent to a garden party in Alexandria ran into an open drawbridge over the Nile, drowning him in his apartment, the gossips naturally accused Ismail of being responsible for his brother's death. The circumstances warranted this opinion, because Ismail and his crony, the director of railways, both of whom were expected to be passengers on the same train, excused themselves at the last moment.

The Man With One Thumb.

On still another occasion the Khedive showed that he was not afraid of bloody hands. A minister of treasury developed into such a spendthrift that fair to rival the ruler himself. His ability to a display could be explained in no other way he was robbing his master's cash box. that this unwise official had made overtures to foreign representative with the intention of himself, and whatever swag he could under the protection of another power.

Before he could make this move, however, called to the palace and his friends never saw No one paid any attention to the report that been sent away on an important mission, story got out about his refusing a cup of fee, only to be strangled when that details of the tragedy became known and everywhere in public and private, even to the doomed man bit off the thumb of one of ants during the scuffle. It gives one a start to informant conclude this story by saying: man over there? Well, one of his thumbs is

This daring man, who allowed nothing to tween him and his fanciful dreams of grandeur, sought to be entirely independent of Although he held his place by favor of wanted to be free of all restraint and monarch among monarchs. As it was he reproduce the gardens of Paris in the if he had succeeded in all his plans they have included the gilding of the pyramids.

How Ismail Was Crowned.

Believing that the Sublime Porte would him the severance he so earnestly desired, arrangements in advance. He gave a banquet pany of his closest friends, concluding it original surprise. A huge pie which had center of the table during the repast, was the chef released a slender girl dressed little sprite stood for a moment in the crust that had imprisoned her, looked about indcision, then tripped daintily across the Ismail sat and placed a crown upon his

STORIES OF INDIA.

MORAL, MYSTICAL AND ROMANTIC.

THE EMPEROR AND THE SAGE.

NIGHT reigned in the palace, and all save the sentinels and night servants slumbered. All save the Emperor, he, the king of all he surveyed, he, the ruler of the many souls that dwelt in his land, he, the owner of countless wealth, the lord and master of Queen, Prince and subjects.

He walked the broad length of his luxurious halls and corridors, because he could not close his eyes in slumber and rest his weary brain from the problems of politics that filled it. He alone of all his palace was denied the balm that came to the lowliest and meanest of his people. Again and again he had thrown himself upon the rich softness of his canopied bed; he had counted the birds embroidered in his coverlet, had gazed at the jewels that studded the draperies which curtained his sleeping place. Yet sleep came not to his eyes, nor rest to his mind, nor peace to his heart.

Thus, with wearied impatience he saw the breaking Dawn spreading her broad hands in the east, and as he watched her push aside the heavy clouds of Night, he spied just below his casement the figure of a man lying on a heap of ashes in heavy sleep. "What!" thought he, "this poor wretch sleepeth in perfect soundness, with naught 'neath his body but the refuse of the earth, and naught for a coverlet but the canopy of the sky. Would I could rest thus, even on my bed of down and with my cloth of gold to cover me."

For awhile he watched the sleeping man and the breaking day, then in impatience threw open the casement and shouted to the sleeper: "Tell, me, oh thou! How canst thou sleep thus without bed or house?" But the sleeper, wrapped in peaceful slumber, heeded not nor heard.

Then the Emperor summoned his servant and ordered him to arouse the sleeper and bring him to his imperial presence.

The servant departed, but nearing the sleeper he saw in him one of the wandering hermits, who were known as ascetics, or holy men, who have great wisdom and carry with their wisdom blessings wherever they go. So the servant dreaded to arouse the holy man from his slumber, but having the command of the King to fulfill, he stooped over him, saying thus: "O holy sir, my master, the Emperor, calls to thee from the casement of his palace: much hath he been disturbed of late, and little rest hath he found either by day or in the night, because of such weighty state matters. I pray thee, forgive me my rude awakening of thee, and do thou answer make to His Majesty, the Emperor, who calleth to thee from yonder window."

The ascetic arose and went to the Emperor, and with a frown said: "Why didst thou have me disturbed thus from my slumber, thou imperial dog?" The Emperor smiled at this show of temper, which, however, he knew was feigned, because it is rarely seen in the holy men of India, and said: "Because, O holy one, there is that which I would ask thee, and which I know thou in thy wisdom and kindness will answer. I have seen thy bed and envied it not, but when I looked upon thy sleep, deep and peaceful, I envied thee much; and I want to ask thee, how didst thou feel when sleeping on thy hard bed of ashes?"

The hermit looked into the tired, selfish face of the Emperor, then at the luxurious sleeping apartment with its settings of gold and jewels, with its bed of down and cloth of gold, and replied: "In some respects equal to thee, in others better than thou."

"In which way?" asked the Emperor.

"Why," replied the hermit, "as soon as I fell into sleep I forgot my body and knew not what it rested upon; I forgot my bed of ashes, and this oblivion made my bed as good as thy bed of down. But I felt better than thou after that, because my mind, being innocent of all cares, enjoyed all restful slumber, which was denied thee, thou imperial dog, thinking upon things which do not concern thy real self, but make thy body to groan wearily, because of thy earth-filled mind."

"Oh, holy man," said the Emperor, "tell me, how can I, who am tired and wearied because of these warring elements in my heart, gain this same sweet peace and sound sleep that is thine, thou who standeth before me, clothed in rags and having no home thou canst call thy own, yet whose face bespeaks the calmness of untroubled waters, and whose body gives forth the glow of perfect health? Tell me, thou bearer of wisdom, that I may learn from thee."

The ascetic made answer: "By cultivating peace of mind, by giving up fighting another dog over a poor fleshless bone."

LONGEST SPAN IN THE WORLD.

One of the most remarkable bridges in the world, not only from the engineering point of view, but also from its relations as a link in transcontinental traffic, will be that now under construction across the St. Lawrence River, about six miles above the city of Quebec and 170 miles below Montreal, says Technical World Magazine for April. It will contain the longest span in the world, and will be the lin kthat will render possible another all-Canadian transcontinental railway. The structure, it is supposed, will be built in two years. All railways will be entitled to its use. In order to avoid obstruction to sea-going craft, the bridge is not built on a series of piers extending across the stream, but consists technically of two great cantilevers carrying a huge central expanded span having a total length in the clear—that is, between the towers at either side—of 1800 feet, which is 90 feet longer than each of the two spans of the famous bridge over the Firth of Forth near Edinburgh, Scotland.

"OH!" AN' "OH!" AN' "OH!"

My cousin May, from way back East, came out to visit me,
And she is jes' a tenderfoot an' green as she can be.
She hadn't never seen a ranch, an' thought it awful fun
To see th' cowboys chase the steers an' whoop 'em on the run.
I guess back East there ain't no folks 'cept 'em 'at's awful slow,
For everything 'at May could say was "Oh!" an' "Oh!" an' "Oh!"
Jes' all 'at she could ever say
Was "Oh!"
In such a funny sort o' way—
'At "Oh!"
Her eyes 'ud open wide an' gray,
She seemed to think it all was play—
An' all 'at she could ever say
Was "Oh!" an' "Oh!" an' Oh!"
I showed her where our Buckskin Sam killed Poker Pete one day
(She said back East folks doesn't do them things in thataway.)
An' when I pointed out the limb upon the very tree
They hung José, the cattle thief, she on'y looked at me,
An' said like this—her voice way down an' speakin' mighty slow,
An' drawin' in her bref way deep—'at "Oh!" an' "Oh!" an' "Oh!"
She say at, everything she see—
Jes' "Oh!"
An' look an' look an' look at me
'Ith "Oh!"
I show her anything, an' she
'Ud look at me so ser'usly,
An' say as solemn as could be,
"Oh!" an' "Oh!" an' "Oh!"
I showed her to six rattleses what come from off a snake
My pa killed 'ith a buggy whip down by the Bar Z lake.
I let my pony pitch for her, an' caught her prairie dogs,
An' showed her to th' centerpedes w'ich live in holler logs.
But she is such a funny girl—at all the things I showed
She on'y opened up her eyes an "Ohed!" an' "Ohed!" an' "Ohed!"
She never'd even say O my!"
Jes' "Oh!"
She never'd ask th' reason why—
Jes' "Oh!"
She never scared an' wouldn't cry,
She didn't think I tole a lie,
She'd see all things an' pass 'em by
'Ith "Oh!" an' "Oh!" an' "Oh!"

MISGIVINGS.

We may not take those glorious drives again,
By wash and mesa in sunshine and in rain,
But memories remain.

We never shall retrace this selfsame way,
Thank Heaven, that we suffer not today
The grief of yesterday.

We may never meet again, my dear,
So, love we written words of tender cheer;
Best send them now and here.

And if some future day you should regret
That you and I had loved, or ever met,
Sweetheart, could you forget?

What holds for us the dim futurity?
One may be called; whichever one it be 'Twere best not to foresee.

NIAGARA FALLS ALREADY RUINED.

"Niagara Falls are already ruined," says the eminent hydraulic engineer, Alton D. Adams, in Technical World Magazine for April. "Already enough water rights have been granted by the New York State and Canada to divert all the water which now, falling over both the American and the Canadian falls, makes the great cataract one of the natural wonders of the world. If the capitalists and promoters who now hold franchises were all to establish plants, the entire flow of Niagara River would be diverted into underground channels; and the mighty cliffs over which the torrent now pours in resistless grandeur, would be left rugged and bald and dry."

Mr. Adams sees small hope in the proposed treaty between the United States and Great Britain. He does not believe that Canada will be a willing party to any treaty which will cut off the great income it enjoys from leasing Niagara power. His plan is to excavate and deepen the channel leading to the American fall, which will otherwise run dry long before the Canadian or Horseshoe Falls will be at all affected.

A SHORT HAND TYPEWRITER.

M. Bivort of Paris has just patented a short hand typewriter, which is described by Dr. Alfred Gradenwitz in the April number of Technical World Magazine. From one to three syllables of a word are printed in plain type at each stroke of the keys. It is said that fifty words a minute can be written after a few days' practice, while a normal speed of from 125 to 150 words a minute is obtained in less than two months. Speeds of 200 words a minute and more are not unusual among expert operators. Since no conventional symbols but plain types are employed, the "notes" are readable by any one familiar with the process.

"How is your son getting along in his new position?"

"First rate," answered Farmer Dobbs. "He knows more about the business now than his employer does. All he has to do now is to convince his employer."—Philadelphia Inquirer

The Moor in Spain.

THE WONDERS OF ARABIAN ART IN ANDALUSIA.

By a Special Contributor.

THE joy of travel in a foreign land rests more in its surprises than in the realization of anticipated wonders; and Spain, perhaps more than any other of the Mediterranean countries of Southern Europe, is full of surprises.

To awaken in an unknown city; to see new phases of life at every turn; to walk abroad among a strange people, strangely dressed and speaking a strange tongue; to wander through historic places, guide book in hand, standing on the same marble pavements upon which the noble Don Fadriques of history have met their fate, wandering through gorgeous Moorish chambers where the odalisques of the ancient Arab kings once dreamed in idleness, or standing reverently in that glorious throne room whence the Spanish monarchs sent forth the discoverer of a new world—all these are joys so deep and lasting that memory will hold the charm unbroken to the end of time.

The music of the running waters of "Grenada the Beautiful" and the silver crown of her snow-clad mountains; the matchless grandeur of the Alhambra; the softer graces of the Generaliffe; the splendors of the Alcazar and the incomparable majesty of Seville's Giralda Tower; the glorious Cathedral Mosque of Cordova, with its maze of a thousand marble columns; the infinite beauty of the Andalusian valleys, filled with the silver-gray of olive groves and the shadowy depths of wonderful cork forests, and all the distant hilltops crowned with ruined castles and ancient walled cities of the Moors—all remain to us as ineffacable memories of our Andalusian wanderings.

The long day's journey northward from the picturesque old semi-Moorish town of Algeciras, through the delicious vales of Andalusia and up into the snow-crowned Sierra Nevadas to the battlemented walls of Grenada, resolves itself into a most enchanting panorama of lovely pictures, with castled heights and ruined monasteries, and many interesting scenes and customs of a by-gone age to carry us back to those thrilling days when Christian and Moor grappled in the death struggle over these same peaceful fields for the mastery of Southern Spain.

In the primitive customs still prevailing in Andalusia we find much to interest us. One of the most astonishing things is to find the primitive plow, identical with the implement used by the ancient Egyptians 4000 years ago, still in use in Southern Spain. It consists simply of a crooked stick, shod with iron, and it digs up the ground with its sharp point, instead of turning a furrow. Another peculiar feature, evidently a survival of the Arab occupation, is the Egyptian "Sakkieh," the ox-turned water wheel used to raise the water for irrigating the land, which is still seen in Andalusia, almost identical with the rude machine in use throughout the Valley of the Nile. Huge ox carts of the most primitive construction and long lines of heavily-laden burros plod patiently along the country roads on the way to the market towns, while the lumbering post wagons and stage coaches, drawn at a gallop by teams of six or eight mules, hitched tandem, furnish the "rapid transit" for the rural districts and mountain provinces. The roads are lined with hedges of aloes, with thousands of curious blossom stalks towering fifteen or twenty feet in the air, while the sloping hillsides are clothed with purple poppies, soft-eyed daisies and lilies of many beautiful and unfamiliar forms, presenting in their broad expanse an immense carpet woven in hues of gold and royal purple and trimmed with ermine white. A beautiful heather-like flower, which we have never seen elsewhere, covers the wayside with a mantle of exquisite heliotrope and often grows up to the very walls of the gray old Moorish castles, while the many-colored houses of the Andalusian peasantry are scattered among the silvery olive groves and clumps of giant cacti; and over all, dominating this scene of pastoral loveliness, the mighty Sierras tower in majesty:

"On a throne of rocks, in a robe of clouds,
With a diadem of snow."

Under the slanting afternoon shadows we come to Santa Fé, the historic little town marking the site of the camp of Ferdinand and Isabella during the final victorious siege of Grenada, and the place where the messengers of Queen Isabella stopped Columbus as he was on his way, hopeless of obtaining assistance in Spain, to lay his project of discovery before the court of France. That historic meeting at Santa Fé preserved to the crown of Spain the glory of the discovery of America.

Soon after passing Santa Fé, "Grenada the Beautiful" is no longer the dream of a lifetime, but a delicious reality, and we are being driven up through the narrow, picturesque streets of the quaint old Spanish city to the world-famed Acropolis of the Alhambra, where we find a romantic dwelling place within the walls of the most splendid Moorish castle that has come down to us from the golden age of Islam.

The Alhambra.

All the poetry and romance of sunny Spain are gathered within these embattled walls. Here dwelt the flower of the Arab court, Mohammed the Great, Al Mansour the Invincible, the fierce old warrior Muley Abdallah el Zegal, and that mournful figure of Moorish history, Boabdil, the last Moslem King of Grenada; and here afterward reigned the Catholic conquerors, Ferdinand and Isabella, and the later Christian sovereigns of Spain.

This peerless structure is the glory of all Islam, and is an incomparable monument to the magnificence of the Saracen court. From these lofty towers we look down upon a scene of infinite loveliness, the matchless panorama of the enchanted gardens and vineyards of Grenada at our feet, and blessed Andalusia spreading away over a beautiful valley to the distant Alpuxarras, while the Xenil and the Darro shine like silver ribbons amid the sylvan loveliness of the Plains of Grenada. On our left is the Generaliffe, a beautiful summer palace of the Moorish kings, while below us is the fine old Cathedral of Grenada, which owes its circular form to the fact that it was, before the Christian conquest, a Moorish mosque. It contains the two superb marble sarcophagi of Isabella, the Catholic, and her consort, Ferdinand V, and in the subterranean crypt beneath the chapel we descend to look upon the plain leaden caskets which still contain their ashes.

The overwhelming beauty of the Alhambra itself, that marvelous palace within the castle walls, shaded by the splendid forests of venerable trees, surrounded by the snow-covered summits of the majestic Sierra Nevada and soothed by the murmuring of a hundred fountains and tiny waterfalls, is quite beyond [illegible] pression in poor human words. It is [illegible] beautiful dreams of life, so exquisite [illegible]

The majestic outlines of those [illegible] towers give no hint of the glorious [illegible] daintiness, the indescribable traceries [illegible] ace, wrought so wondrously by those [illegible] ers of medieval Spain, the Moors of [illegible] years ago. Every step through this [illegible] opens up new vistas of loveliness to [illegible] lighted senses: the Hall of Justice, the [illegible] Sisters, the Court of the Lions, the Court [illegible] the Tower of Comares and the [illegible] Abencerrages, all enchanting creations [illegible] Arabic fancy which knew no equal in all [illegible] Saracenic art. Who can speak the [illegible] of this, the most fascinating palace in the [illegible] a riot of graceful forms, a marvel of [illegible] light, a dream in mosaics and stucco, [illegible] arabesques of dazzling variety and the [illegible] designs, through which, in graceful Arabic [illegible] are traced pious precepts and passages from [illegible]

There is a magnificence that dazzles and [illegible] is altogether charming, bathed in a flood [illegible] color, which filters through bejeweled [illegible] mosaic; and all steeped in the perfumes [illegible] Paradise.

We stand in the splendid throne room, [illegible] Ambassadors, in which Queen Isabella [illegible] bus before he started upon his eventful [illegible] covery, and we visit the room in which [illegible] Irving lived for several months while [illegible] tiful story, "The Alhambra." The Spaniards of Grenada today have [illegible] ate saying, to the effect that "Christopher [illegible] covered America, but Washington Irving [illegible] Alhambra." Today the Alhambra is the [illegible] possession of Grenada, and the glory of [illegible] while the name of Washington Irving is [illegible] to the farthest corners of Spain.

Seen From the Sea.

STONE FACES AND FIGURES ALONG THE SHORES OF CATALINA.

By a Special Contributor.

Gray of sea and gray of sky,
With a white sail flitting by,

While the distant headlands seem
But a landscape in a dream!

Gliding in on your skiff, along shore of Catalina Island you need no glass-bottom boat on such a serene day, for the sea itself is a perfect revealer of all the life which is astir below, from the endless sway of the amber forests to the tiny goldfish no longer than your thumb, all dotted and fringed with purple. These little creatures are to be seen distinctly in the clear 'long-shore spaces.

The sea mirrors the yellow cliffs which scintillate upon its gleaming surface with the green tollones still clinging for life or for death with outstretched arms and gnarled roots on the cliff itself or in the sea below.

While out around the first jutting crag from Lover's Cove the old Monk stands in the sea, cloaked and hooded and still at his prayers, with prayer book and perchance rosary in his clasped hands.

Just above the peaked cap, the bulging eyes and merry face of a Brownie are thrust out as if stealing a furtive glance at the mystery of solemnity.

Yet the old monk prays on, unheeding. Never a passing launch nor an incoming nor an outgoing steamer has turned him from his serious occupation. Nor yet all the welcomes nor all the farewells in these years that have been in Avalon have altered his faith, making you remember that

"More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of."

The gray sea and sky are a silver setting for the somber majesty of that heavy, dark-robed figure, and above the deep chant of the sea you seem to hear Jean Ingelow's two monks in conversation. One says to the other:

"The world is sorrowful and I am therefore sorrowful: I cannot make the crooked straight."

To whom the other replies:

"But who has demanded of thee, O brother, that thou shouldst?"

And somewhat of the weight of his days and of his charge slips from you at the sound of those voices, and you row onward in your skiff to the silver-voiced Pebbly Beach. There you drift, in idle lapping, to and fro upon the glassy swells, while the pebbles are ever rolling.

I close my eyes and dream—
The rain goes pit-a-pat;
The long, slant rain doth seem
To fall on house roof, flat.

I close my eyes and dream—
The tall, lithe pine
To sigh doth seem,
And echo griefs of mine.

For the rounded pebbles of this remarkable beach are shaped and polished by a singular rotary motion which the waves continually take here, causing this beach to form a point which runs seaward and projects for a quarter of a mile beyond the natural trend of the shore; the beach is piled twenty-five feet high with stones in terraces, and when you are in the rear you cannot see the ocean for the rocks.

On calm days this revolution of the pebbles causes a sound like gentle rain on the roof or that deep sound among the pines.

After watching for a long time the spouting of the cave at the eastern extremity of Pebbly Beach, you turn your skiff once more determinedly seaward, for did you not leave Avalon this Sunday morning that you might attend a divine service in the open sea itself?

You safely round the east end, beneath the rents which the ages have torn in those fearsome cliffs, and row past the home of the seals, while San Clemente begins to loom like a sleeping monster afar in the vast gray wilds.

The waves have now taken on that mystic hue of a turquoise blue, of a color so strange that you wonder once more that such a color can be a liquid, yet the oars cut it like a knife, while just ahead lifts the shaggy crest of Church Rock Ridge.

Then a strange thing happens, for, following a trail no human eye can see, comes a white mist across the sea and wraps Church Rock in a mystic veil; yet you row steadily forward, for the way of seamists no man will ever understand, and must not try.

At last you clearly see the kneeling congregation and the priest in canonical robes, with the great uplifted face, a face which is worth rowing five miles to look at once; a face with something in it—God knows what it is and why it was put there—a mere man can never give expression to. If he has in him any good it vibrates under the rich beauty of that solemn, pleading face; and those are watery aisles, indeed, up which there will never be the rustle of a silken gown.

It is the great sea itself which plays the organ, and the waves chant that ancient lay which rocks have long since heard.

The people are low and bowed as though by one mighty impulse. The only wall is over a thousand feet high; the sky is the ceiling, the swells are the floor, and it is all encompassed by the sea—

"Boundless, endless and sublime,
The image of Eternity."

The trivialities of life drop to the bottom of the sea itself and the great uplifted face pleads for that part of humanity which never can be wholly crushed out; while you can see that line of George Eliot's written in the very winding of the white mist:

" 'Tis the Godhead in us wrings our nobler deeds from our reluctant selves;" and yet that other, "No priest and no confessional, and yet they were forced to sit deep in the ashes of their former years."

It should not be a gray day when first you behold the mighty Lion's Head which guards the entrance to Cherry Valley. Although grand in all weathers, it is perfect in every detail of expression upon a sunny day, when even the lines are traceable that make the heavy brows, the frown and the set of the jaws as well as those which give sternness to the entire countenance.

A very fine view is obtained coming from Little Harbor into the Great Depression. The Lion's Head is to be seen to advantage almost anywhere alongshore from the easternmost head of Fisherman's Harbor.

This is one of the prominent headlands jutting to lee below the isthmus; not more than ten minutes' climb up from the beautiful little beach at Cherry Valley, and you can stand out on it; in under, ashore, it is but a confused mass of boulders rent asunder, and yet these broken outlines, at a sufficient distance, present a striking resemblance to the head of this monster of beasts.

Kitchen middens cover its head, and it is overgrown with cacti. It was named Punta de Leon by Capt. Whitley's mother, over fifty years ago, and has kept that distinctive name ever since.

In contrast to the Lion's Head is that of The Joker, for the nearer you go to The Joker, the more perfect do the features become.

The Joker lies an hour's row from Avalon, down the coast toward the isthmus; close alongshore, before you reach Gallagher's. The rock is wedged between two larger boulders, and is nearly awash at high tides. It is easily found if you are sufficiently interested.

It appears best about a skiff's length from shore. The face is about six feet long and is that of a man whose lips are closely compressed, vainly endeavoring to keep from laughing outright. If you can look at that face and not come away laughing, you will be proof against all merriment.

The expression is particularly fine, especially the lines about the mouth and the eyes. The features are smooth and very clear-cut out of dull yellowish stone.

It is very unusual to be able to get those faces clearly, except from a distance; generally a certain distance is necessary to bring out the expression.

At Avalon there is a very good figure of a sphinx, and although it lies not over fifty yards beyond the aquarium, probably not one in a thousand has ever noticed it. Indeed, the only instance of this discovery by a tourist was that of a man a few years ago who was to be seen wildly running up and down the beach and dragging either friend or foe, or whomever he could manage to influence, down to see "The Face on the Rock;" and it is sad to relate that many whom he brought went away laughing and unconvinced that there was a face. An old islander was heard to say: "I never saw that before, and I've been going by this trail for fifteen years." Even he had to be placed just right and pulled over, and then have his head bent in, in order to make it out.

The discoverer was all out of breath when he had brought down several unwilling people and explained it all, and hauled and twisted them "so's they could see it." He was really red in the face, and had to mop his brow.

It is too true that "most of us walk about well wadded with stupidity."

There is no reason why people should say: "A face? Why, I never see faces like some do. Some see faces in everything;" and these people smile slyly as though you were not so wise—"as some."

Yet little matters it to the Sphinx. It has endured many summers and weathered the breaking seas of the winters, and has apparently not been particularly moved by the coming or going of all the people.

The bluffs which terminate to westward of Fisherman's Harbor—

"Where the great gray cliff in the sea is double," have seen many a mirrored face below, for the old edges are fairly alive with faces, from the grotesque bulging eyes and puffed cheeks of Brownies to the withered outlines of a witch.

The noblest of all the faces are those on the weather side of Catalina Island, where, in under the awful leaps below Bull's Head, they look across the open seas.

They can be seen from Little Harbor, Cotton Wood and Ben Weston's, and all along the Bull Rush Ridge; generally speaking, from all the shore ridges trending eastward from the Great Depression; but it is only in a direct line from a great distance that they appear.

With those great seas ever breaking below, you find yourself listening, half-expecting a white-robed arm to be lifted to write a symbol.

Along the inland shore, between Cotton Wood and Ben Weston's, a great black lion crouches, high up on an outstanding rock, while spray is often leaping twenty-five or thirty feet over its head. Near by stands "The Lighthouse"—a singularly perpendicular rock, like a shaft, overtowering the lion and taking seas which literally turn into rainbows in the air above—with so great force do the breakers run shoreward here. It is said to be the heaviest surf upon the island, as it is open full to the west.

"Ship Rock," although it presents neither face nor figure, is one of the most remarkable features about Catalina Island. It is a dark rock, sixty-six feet high and whitened by guano. It has the bald eagle nesting upon it, and the cormorant has its home there also.

It is only at rare intervals that this old rock can show its true beauty. It is generally supposed to be called "Ship Rock" because it more or less resembles a ship in sail. In rough seas and brilliant sunlight, and under certain atmospheric conditions, it is possible for the white and black parts of this rock to take on the exact similitude of a ship with all sails set; so that, when a ship of about the same proportions was this winter watched sailing for several hours just outside the rock and at last came abreast, it was not possible to tell the one from the other. There against the blue sky, upon the sea, they stood together: one alive, with the winds of heaven in all its canvas, and the other of stone, with but a dream in its heart; a memory of ships that it has watched through long ages, or mayhap one that did not fade away.

Cross-Breeding Tobacco.

GOVERNMENT PLAN FOR REDUCING THE QUANITY OF NICOTINE.

From a Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—To reduce the nicotine content of tobacco and at the same time retain all of the original flavor and aroma of the weed, is the object of a brand-new line of research—in the interest of the nervous man—directly to be commenced by the national Bureau of Plant Industry. Of course it is not the object of this institution to force this non-poisonous brand of la Santa Yerba upon all smokers. Neither is it the design of the bureau to bring the "holy herb" more nearly within reach of the frail youth of the country. There are tens of thousands of smokers in the land who are suffering from nicotine poisoning in one form or another, but yet who cannot break the bonds of their slavery to the weed. To these a tobacco possessing the minimum of nicotine but the maximum of flavor and aroma would be a godsend.

In view of the really wonderful feats which this government office is accomplishing in other lines, we can have no reason to doubt that it will succeed along this one. It has already invented new tobaccos, so why not one with little or no nicotine? Dr. Galloway, the chief of the bureau, is just now putting to rights a new adjunct to be known as his "tobacco laboratory." Here Dr. W. W. Garner, the chemist in charge, will test samples of the "filthy weed" sent in from all parts of the tobacco belt. He will study in detail the composition of good and bad tobaccos, whose qualities of "burn," flabor, aroma, etc., are due fundamentally to chemical composition. Two tobacco plants may grow side by side under the same conditions, yet one may take up from the soil too much chlorine, not enough potash, too much sulphuric acid, and so on. Not long ago the story was being hawked about that the flavor and aroma of the sainted herb were due to beneficent microbes, which preferred the climate of Cuba to that of our own country. Then the Agricultural Department employed to look into the matter Dr. Oscar Loew, who discovered that certain ferments which he called enzymes were, rather than bacteria, responsible for tobacco aroma and flavor. Dr. Garner will use this as a working hypothesis. He will pry into the causes of these enzymes at the same time that he is, by analysis, finding tobaccos which have the lowest nicotine constituent. Then, by selection and cross-breeding, it will be a simple matter for the bureau's agents, in the field to produce a plant with the maximum of valuable enzymes and the minimum of that poison which chemists have named in honor of Nicot, its discoverer.

Inventing New Tobaccos.

That this can be done will not sound extravagant after we have seen how this bureau's experts are now inventing new species of tobacco in the field; how they are eliminating bad properties and increasing the good, at will. Cuban high-grade tobacco, as we know, has been the envy of our growers since the industry started there. But the Cuban species are too delicate for our climate. Now up in Connecticut we have a hardy, broad-leaf wrapper tobacco which will withstand any climate in the tobacco belt. What do these ingenious field experts do but intermarry the Cuban and Connecticut species and get an offspring with a better aroma and flavor than the Connecticut and yet a greater hardiness than has the Cuban. It is a simple matter of fertilizing the blossom of one plant with the pollen of the other. In the same way they are cross-breeding our Havana seed tobacco with the Sumatra and obtaining an offspring with leaves and veins better adapted for making wrappers than any that we have grown here before. Another discovery is this: The humming-birds, bees and moths which up to the present have been indiscriminately marrying our tobacco plants by unconsciously carrying the pollen of one into the blossom of another—when they gather honey—have in fact been injuring the crop. If each tobacco blossom is fertilized by its own pollen rather than cross-fertilized by pollen from another plant of the same variety, a more vigorous and more uniform yield is obtained. To introduce this method these experts are showing the growers how to tie up the unopened blossoms in paper bags, kept in place until the seed is set. A no less important discovery, resulting in the growing of healthy, even rows where irregular ones formerly sprung up year after year, is that a part of the seed of each plant is unhealthy and should be thrown away. Each tobacco plant produces about half a billion seeds, each capable of producing a plant. Two-thirds of these seeds are large, the remaining third small. The large ones produce vigorous, uniform plants while the small ones produce not only uneven rows, but tobacco that is susceptible to the dread disease

Points of Good Cigar.

Even if you are an inveterate smoker, you pr do not know all of the points of a cigar. This m measures them in detail. The tobacco having be certain variety for wrappers, those of another for ers and those of still another for fillers. The ciga then placed in the machine and smoked. The first considered is evenness of burn. A good cigar sho sharply-defined line between the ash and the tob and does not burn down further on one side than o other, even when smoked to the butt. This evenne burn is a matter of chemical composition. The point noted is color of ash. A good cigar gives ei pure white or very light gray ash, whereas the ash poor one is brown, uneven or mottled. A further sideration is whether the ash flakes off or holds tog firmly. A good ash holds clear down to the butt, i

The last consideration is whether the cigar "coa

So complete are the records of all of these new v

Love's Limitations.

THE STRANGE STORY OF A DASTARDLY PLOT THAT FAILED.

By a Special Contributor.

THE prison gate swung behind him, and Wilfrid Sutton stepped forth into the world, a free man once more. He had served his term of three years, with deductions for good behavior; and now he was at liberty, to do as he chose.

The world was before him. He could go away to some place where he was not known, and try to lead an honest life until some one came along and pointed him out as an ex-convict. Then he could begin the same thing over again, and go on repeating the experiment until, worsted in life's battle, he should either make an end to life or band himself with the avowed enemies of society.

He had gone to prison to save the reputation of the woman he had loved. He did not love her now. He had not loved her when he took her crime upon himself. He pitied her. But he could not love a thief.

How well he remembered that soft moonlight night three years ago! He had gone up to Lucy Markham's house and found her waiting for him out on the veranda. It was very hot, and Lucy had insisted on his taking off his coat and resting in the hammock, while she sat in a low steamer chair at his side. They had talked of their approaching marriage and of the pretty home that they were planning. Then Lucy had suddenly got up and said:

"Oh, Wilfrid—let me take your keys. I have lost the key of my desk, and I want to see if I can open it with any of yours."

He had handed her his key ring, with the night key of his home, and all the keys of the store—front and back doors, safes and showcases.

Lucy had gone into the house and returned in a few minutes with a new photograph of an old schoolmate of hers, and Wilfrid had admired the picture. But Lucy had not given him back his keys, and he had thought nothing of the matter at the time.

"Stella will be here in a minute with some lemonade," Lucy had said. "I shall be glad when father and mother get back from the islands. I don't like staying here in the house at night, with nobody but Stella."

Stella, the servant girl, came on the veranda just then with a tray, bearing a pitcher of lemonade and two glasses.

"Oh! I didn't want those glasses, Stella," said Miss Markham, with a touch of impatience in her tone. She took the glasses from the tray and went into the house to change them herself, leaving Stella standing on the veranda with the tray. Lucy returned in a minute with lemonade glasses, and dismissed Stella, telling her she would not want anything more for the rest of the evening.

"What wonderful eyes that girl has," Sutton had remarked to Lucy, when Stella had gone. "She is well named Stella. Those eyes are like twin stars. They shine like the great Tugela diamond."

"Yes, she is a very handsome girl," Lucy had assented—"not the kind of girl, I warn you, that I shall keep around me when we are married. I should be afraid of your falling in love with her. There is something funny about her working in a kitchen. She sings and plays beautifully, and she reads Goethe in the original."

Sutton had laughed at the idea of his ever loving anybody but Lucy. He lay back in the hammock, sitting up occasionally to sip his lemonade or to caress the lovely girl who was so soon to be his wife. A strange drowsiness had come over him, and he had fallen fast asleep. When he awoke, he found Lucy sitting beside him, as she had been before he fell asleep.

"It is late, Wilfrid," she said. "We have both been sound asleep for two hours. I only awoke a minute ago. I don't know what could have made us so drowsy—possibly the heat. But it is time for you to go home. I will go in and get your keys. I forgot to give them to you before."

Next morning, when he got to the store and opened the large safe, he discovered to his consternation that the great Tugela diamond had been stolen since he had put it away the previous evening. Then he remembered the incident of the keys, of Lucy's changing the glasses for the lemonade. It had been drugged, and the diamond had been stolen by somebody entering the store by means of his keys while he slept.

Soon as the proprietor came in, Sutton reported the loss of the diamond, but said nothing of his suspicions. He stoutly maintained that he knew nothing, and could form no conjecture as to the robbery.

Suspicion, however, fell on Miss Markham. She had been seen in the neighborhood of the jewelry store, and had been seen going into her own home by the back door during the time that she claimed to have been asleep in a steamer chair on the veranda. She had admitted that she borrowed Sutton's keys.

The house had been searched and the diamond—worth a king's ransom—had been found concealed in a secret drawer in her desk.

Miss Markham indignantly denied all knowledge of the presence of the diamond in her desk, but the evidence was hopelessly against her.

Then Sutton had come forward and shouldered the guilt. He said that he had taken the diamond himself and had hid it in Miss Markham's desk, which he had given her shortly before as a birthday present. He knew of the secret drawer, but had never shown it to Miss Markham.

He had saved the name and reputation of the woman whom he was to have married. He had saved her father and mother from a load of shame. He would do the same thing again, in the same circumstances. But there was an end of all that now. There could be nothing more between him and Lucy.

He would go and spend a day or so with his mother, and then try to find some place where he could begin life afresh. It would be impossible for him to get employment in a jewelry store, without a recommendation. But he had learned typesetting while he had been in prison, and he might make a living at that.

As he sat on the old sofa with his mother rocking and swaying in his arms—sobbing on his bosom, the doorbell rang, and the old lady got up to answer it. Another minute and Lucy was in the room.

She made as though to fling herself on Wilfrid's breast, but he folded his arms and turned his back upon her.

"Wilfrid—O Wilfrid!" she cried. "Won't you speak to me. I have been true to you. I love you, in spite of everything. I am content to face the world with you—to begin life all over again—to forget all that has come and gone in these last three years—if only you love me still, dear Wilfrid."

"But I do not love you," he had replied coldly.

"You do not love me, Wilfrid! Oh, but that is not so. I know what you are thinking. You imagine that it will be better for me to bid you good-by forever, because of the shadow that has come into your life; and so you would deny your own heart and pretend you do not love me. Oh! do not be so cruel to me or to yourself, dear. I gave you my troth; and though the pledge had not been sealed at the altar, I am yours, Wilfrid—all yours—for better, for worse. But do not tell me again that you do not love me, Wilfrid; for that hurts worse than anything.

"I do not love you, Miss Markham," Wilfrid repeated. "I do not want to upbraid you. I suppose once a woman has set her heart on a man she can love him through anything. But you ought to know that an honest man cannot love——"

He never finished the sentence. She would have fallen if he had not caught her. He laid her on the sofa and left her to his mother's care.

The doorbell rang again, and this time Sutton answered it himself. The caller was a clerk from the District Attorneys' office.

"Glad to find you, Mr. Sutton. Mr. Murray made me come right up. That woman Stella Cook, who is dying in the hospital, has confessed to the theft of the great Tugela diamond. She drugged your lemonade that night; took your keys out of Miss Markham's desk, put on some of Miss Markham's clothes, entered the store and took the diamond. It seems she was in love with you, and thought that if only she could get Miss Markham out of the way for a time she would be able to find some way of ensnaring you. So she concealed the diamond in Miss Markham's desk, while she and you were still sleeping on the veranda."

Under Mrs. Sutton's ministrations, Lucy was just reviving when Wilfrid hurried back into the parlor. She opened her eyes and read the light of love in Wilfrid's. Then she stretched out her arms to him, and the mother left them locked in fond embrace.

Unlike the man's, the woman's love knew no limitations. That love, which had survived the shame of her affianced husband's conviction and imprisonment, proved even stronger. It rallied from the rude shock of the man's blundering suspicion of her honesty, and found a way to lead him back to peace and health.

RESEARCHES IN PALESTINE.

"Still another interesting and late discovery is what is regarded by the excavator as a palace built by Simon the Maccabee. An account of the siege and conquest of the city by this man is graphically given in I Macc. 13. For many reasons, one of which is the finding of an imprecatory inscription calling down destruction upon Simon himself, this is thought to be the very place occupied by this intrepid Maccabean leader. The castle is a mammoth affair and there is a large courtyard just inside the gateway. There are numbers of chambers, the use of which is only a conjecture at present, as some of them have no openings and as nothing has been found within them to point to their purpose. The most interesting part of this palace is a large pillared hall, which, Mr. Macalister thinks, shows how Samson destroyed the Philistines in the Temple of Dagon. The stone pillar bases, some of which were found, were the supports, he believes, of wooden posts which, in turn, bore up the beams of the roof. By pushing these posts from stones on which they rested, the ruin of the temple would be easily accomplished. . . .

"Let us hope that men of means may see to it that funds are furnished for the further prosecution of this work, and that at the earliest possible moment the splendid work now being done by the University of Chicago in the far-away East may be duplicated in the Holy Land itself. The Palestine Exploration Fund and other societies are worthy of all honor for what they have done and are doing today, but America ought not to be content to allow all the labor and all the honor to be accredited to other nations. Let America be aroused and do her part in this worthy and most wonderful work."—[Rev. Llewellyn L. Henson, D.D., in "Records of the Past."

WORDS OF WISDOM.

No matter how much we may have learned from the experience of others, that gained from our own life is always the fittest and best.

Contentment is the philosopher's stone, which turns all it touches into gold; the poor man is rich with it, and the rich man poor without it.

The man who does his work today the best he can, and lives only one day at a time, is the man who is best conserving his God-given energies.

Interesting Experiment.

TESTING REFINING INFLUENCE OF FLOWERS ON CONVICTS.

From a Special Correspondent.

SANTA FE (N. M.) March 12.—Floriculture as a means of refining the nature of the hardened criminal, is the remarkable experiment that is being carried on at the Territorial penitentiary of New Mexico, in Santa Fé.

In a well-equipped, thoroughly modern conservatory, which has been constructed within the four grim walls of the prison, some of the most desperate men in American annals of crime are taking pathetic delight in caring for a profusion of flowers of many kinds. General interest is taken in the conservatory, among the 250 convicts in the penitentiary; and it is no uncommon thing to see a "lifer," with a record of blood and violence against his name, tenderly caring for a spotless lily or a delicately-perfumed rose.

New Mexico Penitentiary

In various penal institutions it has been found that music has exerted an uplifting influence on criminals. Men who cannot be reached in any other way have been softened by familiar hymns or well-rendered productions of the great masters in music. Floriculture is merely another step in the same direction, and who shall say that the refining influence of flowers is not fully as great as that of music? Indeed, since the convicts in the New Mexico penitentiary took up this new work, the morale of the institution has greatly improved. There is hardly a convict in the institution who does not welcome a chance to work among the flowers. Bouquets are clipped and taken to lonely cells, and dried flowers are carefully pressed between the leaves of books from the penitentiary library. There is something strangely pathetic in seeing these wearers of striped suits working with such childish pleasure among the gay blossoms, and spending hours rearing plants that, like themselves in many instances, must live and die within the four walls of the great prison.

Superintendent H. O. Bursum has been quick to recognize the good that the conservatory is doing among the inmates of the prison, hence every convict who desires to work among the flowers is given opportunity to while away time in the greenhouse.

Assistant Superintendent Garrett, upon whom devolves much of the prison work, is enthusiastic on the subject of floriculture in penal institutions.

"There are few natures, no matter how bad they may appear to the world in general, that do not respond to the refining influence of flowers," said this official recently. "An hour in the greenhouse beats any number of hours in solitary confinement when it comes to making a convict tractable. A little time spent among the fresh, beautiful plants and flowers will take a convict's mind off himself and his condition. When any man gets to brooding over things and looking on the dark side of everything in general, the worst elements in his nature are apt to come uppermost if something isn't done to interrupt his train of thought. The average man goes out and buys himself a few drinks, or maybe goes to the theater, or takes a little trip in the woods or fields. But the convict can't do those things, and consequently he is liable to develop a dangerous form of hysteria. It may culminate in a desperate attempt at securing his liberty, and the lives of prison officials may be sacrificed; or it may merely result in a case of insubordination, the result of which is that the convict is put in solitary confinement and develops a 'don't care' spirit that is bad in its general effect.

"Now a conservatory is the nearest thing to outdoors. Once inside the steam-heated, glass house, surrounded by these beautiful flowers, and with the smell of moist, clean earth in his nostrils, the convict is lifted out of himself, so to speak. He forgets for a moment that he is in prison. He fusses around among the flowers, and his brain is soothed by the plash of the fountain. Time flies rapidly instead of dragging itself on leaden feet, and the poor chap actually enjoys life. He takes the remembrance of all this to his cell with him—perhaps in the form of a bouquet. He forgets his troubles and the black future fades away. He sings or whistles cheerily, and his good spirits prove infectious. Thus, unconsciously he assists in raising the general morale of the prison.

"If convicts were given more such work to do in their idle hours—more gardening and raising flowers, instead of moodily pacing about the prison yard in quest of exercise, or being kept pegging at contract labor all day, there would be fewer tragedies in penitentiaries—fewer attempts to break out, and fewer officials sacrificed in doing their duty. Anything that can take a convict's mind off himself is a great advance in prison methods. The old idea that men in prison should be made to suffer as much as possible is no longer tenable. The idea is to make criminals better men—not to make them worse by imprisonment. The law does not mean that when a man is deprived of his liberty he shall be subjected to mental tortures that will turn him forever against society. Consequently every uplifting idea in prison work should be welcomed. Music is a great thing for convicts, and we have found that floriculture is another. Our little greenhouse has done more good than all the dark cells and other means of punishment ever devised."

The conservatory in the New Mexico penitentiary is close to the main office. It is heated with steam, and the temperature is always kept at the right standard. With so many interested convicts watching it, there is no chance for the conservatory to feel the blighting effect of a frost. The greenhouse was laid out and built by expert hands, and it is maintained in a manner truly professional. At one end of the conservatory, bathed in the bright New Mexico sunshine, is a plashing fountain, the central figure being a cupid. At the other end of the greenhouse is a large grotto, with water constantly playing over the moss-hung rocks. Long rows of plant beds extend on either side and in the center, while stately palms wave overhead.

The convict and the lily

Convicts working in the greenhouse

Against these beautiful backgrounds move the convicts in their striped suits, but the visitor loses all sense of incongruity in the scene. He forgets that these men are criminals, and remembers only that they are men who are giving expression to their sense and appreciation of the beautiful. Some of the most desperate criminals ever brought to justice are housed in the New Mexico penitentiary. For instance, there is "Bronco Bill," a train robber and bad man who terrorized the border for years, and who is now serving a life sentence. But "Bronco Bill" handles a lily or a rose with all the gentleness of a woman, and his face is the picture of contentment when he is in this remarkable greenhouse. In short, a visit to this conservatory is a fine object lesson in humanitarianism.

IRRIGATION.*

Solver of the arid problem am I.
Home, wealth, and comfort in my pathway wait.
Arid lands I traverse; I penetrate
Deserts, and fields unwaked, and, passing by,
Hovel, cottage, and mansion, soon or late,
I knock with plenty at their wanting gate!
If water you need—if wealth you implore,
'Tis I who save from desert's dire fate,
And the farmers I reach know every state
Of success, for 'tis I who conquer their foe;
And in my wake through the desert's estate
None are condemned to failure and woe—
Flowers and grain come forth where none grew before:
I visit, and grumbling is heard no more.

MARVELOUS MEASURING.

THE ASTONISHING RESULTS OF A [illegible] PROFESSOR'S ARDUOUS EXPERIMENTS.

[London Express:] The remarkable discovery [illegible] by Dr. P. E. Shaw, one of the physical science [illegible] of University College, Nottingham, whereby [illegible] ments up to one 70,000,000th part of an inch can be [illegible] ken, is likely to lead to some vitally important [illegible] ments in scientific investigation.

It has already been applied to practical use in the [illegible] provement of telephones. It will measure the [illegible] audible movements in a telephone diaphragm—[illegible] ments of only one 40,000,000th part of an inch. The [illegible] paratus has proved of the greatest use in measuring [illegible] gineering gauges, surpassing all other methods in [illegible] cacy and accuracy.

Wireless telegraphy is expected to benefit from [illegible]
Shaw's work to a very great extent, his [illegible] mechanism acting as a most delicate coherer.

The most important branches of science which will [illegible] ceive aid from the invention will be those dealing [illegible] the investigation of the secrets of life and matter. [illegible] instrument will aid physicists in studying [illegible] and possibly even the movements of the [illegible] matter, the invisible elements of all that we [illegible] touch.

Dr. Shaw gave an Express representative [illegible] ing account of his discovery yesterday.

"When I was conducting my experiments [illegible] the vaults under the university," he said. "I [illegible] work in the dead of night, when all [illegible] closed and traffic in the streets entirely suspended [illegible] apparatus has to be suspended by rubber [illegible] specially-made frame in a box covered with [illegible]

"I have spent many nights in the vaults [illegible] during the past five years. I usually have a [illegible] experiment until 4 o'clock in the morning. [illegible] improving my apparatus, and have every [illegible]

Some idea of the delicacy of the instrument [illegible] gained from the fact that the vibrations of [illegible] hundred yards from the vault make it impossible [illegible]
Shaw to work while it is running. It is so [illegible] he cannot demonstrate it before an audience [illegible]
it is affected even by ordinary dust and [illegible]

The apparatus consists of a fine micrometer [illegible]

The frame on which the instrument rests [illegible] large pieces of rubber to reduce any friction.

LANDSCAPE ART.

The art of landscape painting and the art of [illegible] making are closely allied. The former [illegible] means of pigments to portray upon canvas [illegible] the lines and shades of the natural landscape [illegible] latter with nature's own materials—and [illegible] own model—creates a real landscape, giving [illegible] line and color. It is then true that every [illegible] simple its arrangement, is a picture, and [illegible] who plans it and who arranges its composition [illegible] line and color is, at least in some degree, [illegible]
A picture will in every instance faithfully [illegible] skill and quality of the artist and will bear the [illegible] impression of its owner's taste. It is, therefore, [illegible] to us to cultivate true artistic taste in the [illegible] our home grounds.

SYCAMORES IN SPRING—OAK AND BAY-TREE—AROMATIC PLANTS.

THERE is a tide in the affairs of plants no less than in the affairs of men. In this corner of the globe it begins to flow with the falling of the first rain. Its advance is marked by the appearance, one after another, of a multitude of leaves and flowers. Let us go out, this spring morning, and look for the landmarks of the floral tide.

In other countries seekers after such signs betake themselves to the woods and meadows, or wander over the breezy open downs. Here we have forest, but no woodland; and the pastures are jealously guarded by wire fences. But nature has kindly provided, in the cañons, wild gardens, half park, half shrubbery, where the progress of her crops can be watched at week ends at all times by the casual observer. There, too, the [illegible] and water runs in pebbly channels—rare sight [illegible], even leaps from the crag.

The world-famous cañons, rock-ribbed and mountain-walled, are far away. But every township that nestles under the Mother Mountains holds within or near its borders an unpruned wilderness, where flowing lines relieve the monotony of rectilinear roads and orchards in a pattern. Millard's, Eaton's, named, it would seem, for early settlers, and a score of others, the electric cars have brought within reach of city folk. And where the [illegible] trend seaward near Santa Monica, there is a cañon that leads its waters down to the shore.

A stranger would never suspect its existence. The open fields, just sprinkled with green barley blades, seem to stretch uninterruptedly from the edge of the [illegible] town to the foot of the scrub-covered hills. But walk half a mile westward and we find ourselves on the edge of a cliff, looking down upon a deep hollow filled with trees. A corresponding elevation rises opposite. The cañon is hidden, counter-sunk, so to speak, beneath the level of the land.

This gives it shelter from the breezes, which, however, blow roughly in this favored nook of the globe. The sycamores that fill the floor of the cañon have been twisted in their growth by wind, which, where it blows steadily from one quarter for any length of time, [illegible] the shapes of trees. The irregularity of branching, then, is due to pure native contrariness. Did you ever see such twisted limbs, bent into right angles, curved into loops, as if the laterals had had to force their way out against a more stubborn resistance than the yielding air? Their crookedness reminds one of the gnarled miniature trees that the Japanese clip [illegible] in boxes.

The very trunks lean this way and that out of the perpendicular. Some bend over, like a fishing pole when a fish is pulling at the line. But there is always one stout shoot that aspires to the vertical and succeeds in restoring the balance and dignity of the tree. The twists and bendings no more detract from the stateliness of the full-grown sycamore than do the grotesque figures [illegible] on its stones from the majesty of a Gothic tower.

In the height of summer its spreading branches overarch the stream with a canopy of verdure. Humming birds fix their cup-shaped nests to the tips of sprays, with leaves for a screen. But now the dry stream bed is filled with a drift of dead foliage. At intervals an auburn leaf floats slowly down, like a moth, through the still air. It is the habit of the sycamore to hoard its leaves, as a miser does his gold, and let them drop gingerly one at a time. As late as April you may see the living green [illegible] by dead gold.

The younger trees, however, are mostly stripped—[illegible] ruined choirs, where once the sweet birds sang." There is beauty in the naked stems. The short trunk of the sycamore retains its rough covering, but above the fork the bark scales off, exposing a white skin, mottled with lilac and gray. All this nakedness suggests the biting blast that "sharp shivers through the leafless bower." But it is ill to pour old wine into new bottles. The northern poetry is at odds with the southern climate. The air is warm, and on the outermost sprays the stamen balls have burst their husks. The tide of sap is rising fast.

Where the sycamore grove thins out, the cañon divides into two branches. We will follow the left fork passing the schoolhouse. At the top of a gentle rise, there is a wide platform of several acres that seems to have been formed by a landslide of the eastern cliff. Here the State University has planted, for experiment, a large collection of foreign trees, principally Australian. These have taken kindly to the soil, and show the influence of the season in a reddish-brown top growth and suckering shoots of the weird blue that characterizes eucalypts. The wattles are bursting into fragrant yellow bloom.

Beyond this piece of Australian "bush" all is native wilderness. From here the cañon forms an oval about two miles long to where it narrows to a cleft in the hills. Its walls are composed of horizontal strata of compacted sand and gravel, the stones of which run in lines like courses of masonry. This material is very friable. The cañon walls are buttressed by tall mounds of earthy talus. These new claims are no sooner formed than they are seized upon by plants and shrubs; so that from the bare chin of the upper cliff a beard of vegetation straggles down to the valley floor. Clusters of wild canes have been particularly successful in the struggle for place. Withered now and yellow, they resemble tall candles set up on ledges for an illumination.

IN THE CANYON.

Looking up the vale, a gray line of bare sycamores marks the meanderings of the hidden stream. Live oaks are dotted about here and there, globes of green on the grassy flats. Each of these contrasting trees stands for one aspect of this semi-tropical country. The sycamore, a winter sleeper, keeps us in touch with the temperate north—the evergreen with the perpetual growth and renewal of the south. In this middle belt of earth nature faces both ways.

In its habit of growth the live oak contrasts with its neighbor. It is compact and symmetrical, a type of ordered, well-regulated life. But so decorously draped are its limbs with foliage, that a close approach must be made before you can perceive how its vault of green is supported. Look at that fine specimen on which some one has carved, in letters big enough to be read from the road. "The Big Tree." The lower branches describe a circle round the short and sturdy bole, while the leafy dome is upheld by a scaffolding of sinuous radiating arms. The flowing, interlacing curves delight the eye. In this building of Nature's there is no geometrical rigidity, no stiffness of outline; yet there is no suggestion of instability. It is constructed on hemispherical lines.

Its dark green leaves make no sign of seasonal changes, and indeed the tree puts out new growth at uncertain intervals. But all the year round this noble evergreen holds up against the sun a broad shield of thick-set leaves. It is our principal native shade tree; a boon to the traveler on dusty summer highways, a shelter to the camper-out, who builds his fire among its roots and nails his pots and pans to its trunk. In Spain it is called "encina," (hence Encinitas, the place of the holm oak); and it grows in all countries bordering on the Mediterranean. The white temples of Italy and Greece were embowered in its thick green groves. Once very plentiful here between the Sierra and the sea, it has unfortunately disappeared from many places that it used to adorn.

The size of the trees in the valley floor indicates a good, deep soil. This may have been an alluvial deposit in an ancient lake—a not uncommon source of origin of fertile flats. In the narrow gorge under the plantation bluff a landslip perhaps impounded the outflow of the valley waters.

Among the oaks that luxuriate in this fertility, another evergreen, small but beautiful, may be found—the bay tree of California. It is not so common here, nor so tall, as on the coast further north; but it flourishes as the "green bay tree" to which the wicked were likened by the Psalmist. Upon a cluster of slim stems it uprears a canopy of glossy leaves, pointed like arrows. Its blossoms are just now bursting forth, tiny balls of pale gold. But the fragrance of the tree lies in its leaves. Crush them in your hands; you seem to have broken a casket of essences, so pungent is the delicious aroma that exhales.

This aromatic character of the leaf is common to many native herbs and shrubs, especially to those that grow in dry places. The treeless, sunny coast between here and San Diego is covered by a low, scrubby growth, the leaves of which are for the most part reservoirs of fragrant essential oils. Hence the subtle balm that mingles with the sea air in the valleys opening to the sea. The same thing occurs in Europe, in the arid land of Provence. A dry soil and long hours of sunshine are perhaps necessary to the elaboration of aromatic principles in the leaves of plants.

Let us turn, now, from the trees, to examine the lower growth for signs of the times. Few flowers as yet brighten the wayside. The shepherd's purse has already stored its seeds in the little pouches it bears on its stems, but its bloom is of small account. The plant is noteworthy as a vegetable vagrant, an estray that has wandered west from Europe. Wherever railroads have spread, it has beat its way. Its seeds cling to sacks, or become introduced clandestinely into packets of seeds for sowing, and so are scattered broadcast. But it is a harmless vagabond, not a hobo of the fields, like the noxious weeds that choke cultivation and damage crops.

Under the spreading oaks the grass grows long and coarse; its color is a bluish green. Out in the sunny, open spaces there is a finer grass, yellower in tone, and thin like hair. This season the copious November rains gave the seeds an early start. A cold, dry December checked the green growth, but the heavy downpour of mid-January filled their veins anew. Now the slopes are well covered with a thick, velvety emerald mantle. It is the admixture of finely-cut alfileria and broad-leafed mallow with the grassy web that gives to the green swards of California their peculiar richness and solidity of texture. And every week, now, will add to their thickness.

As yet they are but sparingly enameled with flowers. The pale golden bells of oxalis, the sorrel, have been showing these many weeks. When the long dry ebb is over and the first showers awaken the seeds, its trefoil leaves unfold among the grass blades by the roadside. It heralds the turn of the tide, the flow of vegetation. It is the first link in the golden chain of flowers that binds month to month.

Here on the turf a wild gourd drags its slow length along. There is no stiffness in its limp stem, unsupported it falls. How snake-like is the poise of the fine tendrils that shoot out from the stem and grasp whatever they touch, a dead stick or a stone! In its proper place this beautiful climber festoons the flowerless, sad-colored sumach bush with garlands of white, starry blossoms, and hangs derisively on the branches of its barren sister an egg-shaped prickly gourd. Now it is somewhat past its prime; in midwinter it whitens the hill slopes.

The elder bushes are unfolding their new leaves, catkins bristle on the willow wands, the tips of the dwarf sumach are red as blood.

> "The faint fresh flame of the young year flushes
> From leaf to flower and flower to fruit."

On the hillside the earliest lupines are abloom; the wild gooseberry sports its red, fuchsia-shaped flowers, and fresh shiny leaves. A California lilac, firstling of the year, lifts toward the pale blue sky a spray of answering blue. Where the grass grows thick the purple pentagons of a Solomon shine. The flower, you observe, is very like that of the potato of the fields; but this member of the family is not destined to produce tubers for the former, but to adorn the shady slopes.

Young leaves are pushing forth bravely, everywhere on the grassy levels. A keen eye will detect in those finely-carved green blades the promise of Phacelias that in April will be gay with purple bloom. But the claytonias are here already, holding up in quaint green platters their small service of white blossom. In the tall grass under the bushes a cardamine has unfolded its cross of white and lilac, and set a few pods on its stalk.

All these signs of flower and leaf point to the future, to a cycle of life that is just beginning.

But there are tokens, also, of the past, of last year's fall, in bloom as well as leaf. Belated composites, here a purple daisy, there a yellow aster, keep up a fitful flowering. Their proper season of bloom is during the dry months, but as they are plants with woody stems, not annuals, the rain has quickened them to fresh efforts. Then there are autumnal tints among the green, so strangely do the seasons overlap in this latitude. Yellow leaves still hang on the willow stems, the red of poison oak flares at their roots. Here is a hollow full of dead stalks, to which dry rustling leaves are still clinging. They were once golden rods and thistles that made a brave display of gold and blue. The mummied flower heads are still half filled with seeds that failed to develop, and that the finches have despised as not worth eating. As yet the wild garden is unweeded.

It is the dryness of the climate that delays the march of decay. In tropical woods the mortuary processes of Nature are carried on swiftly and silently behind green curtains. Hardly has the leaf dropped before it becomes mould. In the north cold rains and frost soon destroy foliage; the snow comes and covers the ruin; and when And when the small herbaceous plants have purpled all the young shoots arrive they find a clear field for their growth. Here the dead are left long unburied, as if to remind the pushing infants of the year of their mortality.

Just now the flow of rural growth seems to be at half tide. It is half tide, too, with the cañon stream. Its stony channel is dry as far as we have followed it up. But the twittering of birds in the willows hints that running water is not far away. Sure enough, here comes the little stream to meet us, tinkling over the gravel, and sinks at our feet into the soft sand. A few weeks later it will run brimming and then there will be high tide in the life of the cañon.

HOW IT CAME TO SIDNEY BRA COMBE AND THE ASH MAN.

By a Special Contributor.

SYDNEY BRANSCOMBE paced up and dow length of the drawing-room of his handsome on Pacific Heights, his hands clasped behin and his fine, high forehead knit in a frown of i ion. Spacious as the apartment was, it seemed small for the rapid, impatient stride of its owner cating an inward restlessness great indeed to d so forcible a material outlet. He must have walke eral miles already, he reflected, while waiting for lia, for they were due at a reception and he was in ing dress. Now he halted abruptly in his marc stood leaning against the mantelpiece. It was of toned mahogany, in strong contrast with the d Nile-green hangings of brocaded silk, and its c columns seemed to support not only the broad with its burden of art treasures, but the very dign the house of Branscombe.

As he stood thus, twisting a lock of dark hair u dangled, corkscrew-like, over his left ear—how E laughed at him for this habit!—the door opened an wife entered, the dark beauty of her face brought perfect relief by the toilette of pearl-colored sil wore. Her husband's brow cleared somewhat a went up to him, and put back the corkscrew curl, ing: "The carriage and I are both ready, Sydney."

"Oh, do let me off from this reception, Eulalia, d he pleaded. "That plaguey business matter has me a headache. I will call for you at 11."

"I hate business," she pouted, but submitted final being dismissed with a fond conjugal kiss to the r tion.

When the door closed on her graceful figure, Sy Branscombe heaved a sigh either of relief or regret, once more continued his restless march. His plea t wife had been at worst a figure of speech, for, in truth, his mind was ill at ease.

The firm of Nevins & Branscombe, wholesale de in toys and fancy goods, had until now enjoyed a vi monopoly in their field, but of late had been threat with serious competition. The rival firm had obta by hook or by crook, a certain advantage over t which, unless they could meet it with a correspon ce, would mean a serious reduction of profits.

The resourceful mind of Nevins had, however, hit a scheme the sole difficulty in the execution of w was that Branscombe had refused his consent. His ture loved the legitimate game of commerce, but tested such sly chicanery in shifting the cards. It w al affair at most, argued Nevins—who was an old practised hand—this mislabelling of a consignmen imported goods so as to evade the payment of du exacted by an unreasonable government. Branscom mind was familiar with every turn in the devious of sophistry. Such devices were positively necessit by the commercial exigencies of the times, and it see splitting ethical hairs to object, especially whe more than probable their rival was doing the i al thing, and thus was enabled to undersell them. Possession of the market at this time would m timate control, and all Branscombe's instincts as interests were set against such usurpation. It see choice between the sacrifice of their commercial fut —what? Not his reputation—for the danger of ery was exceedingly slight. And as to finer higher considerations—he cursed himself, as Nevins ed him, for having a conscience altogether too t for modern commercial standards. HOW IT CAME TO SIDNEY BRANSCOMBE AND THE ASH MAN.

By a Special Contributor.

SIDNEY BRANSCOMBE paced up and down the length of the drawing-room of his handsome home on Pacific Heights, his hands clasped behind him, his fine, high forehead knit in a frown of indecision. Spacious as the apartment was, it seemed all too small for the rapid, impatient stride of its owner, indicating an inward restlessness great indeed to demand so visible a material outlet. He must have walked several miles already, he reflected, while waiting for Eulalia, for they were due at a reception and he was in evening dress. Now he halted abruptly in his march and stood leaning against the mantelpiece. It was of deep-carved mahogany, in strong contrast with the delicate [illegible] hangings of brocaded silk, and its carven [illegible] seemed to support not only the broad shelf with its burden of art treasures, but the very dignity of the house of Branscombe.

As he stood thus, twisting a lock of dark hair until it curled, corkscrew-like, over his left ear—how Eulalia scolded at him for this habit!—the door opened and his wife entered, the dark beauty of her face brought into relief by the toilette of pearl-colored silk she wore. Her husband's brow cleared somewhat as she came up to him, and put back the corkscrew curl, saying: "The carriage and I are both ready, Sydney."

"Oh, do let me off from this reception, Eulalia, dear!" he pleaded. "That plaguey business matter has given me a headache. I will call for you at 11."

"I hate business," she pouted, but submitted finally to be dismissed with a fond conjugal kiss to the reception.

When the door closed on her graceful figure, Sydney Branscombe heaved a sigh either of relief or regret, and once more continued his restless march. His plea to his wife had been at worst a figure of speech, for, in very truth, his mind was ill at ease.

The firm of Nevins & Branscombe, wholesale dealers in toys and fancy goods, had until now enjoyed a virtual monopoly in their field, but of late had been threatened by serious competition. The rival firm had obtained, by hook or by crook, a certain advantage over them, which, unless they could meet it with a corresponding [illegible], would mean a serious reduction of profits.

The resourceful mind of Nevins had, however, hit upon a scheme, the sole difficulty in the execution of which was that Branscombe had refused his consent. His nature loved the legitimate game of commerce, but despised such sly chicanery in shifting the cards. It was a small affair at most, argued Nevins—who was an old and seasoned hand—this mislabelling of a consignment of imported goods so as to evade the payment of duties imposed by an unreasonable government. Branscombe's partner was familiar with every turn in the devious coil of [illegible]. Such devices were positively necessitated by the commercial exigencies of the times, and it seemed like splitting ethical hairs to object, especially when it was more than probable their rival was doing the identical thing, and thus was enabled to undersell them.

Domination of the market at this time would mean [illegible] control, and all Branscombe's instincts as well as interests were set against such usurpation. It seemed a choice between the sacrifice of their commercial future, and—what? Not his reputation—for the danger of discovery was exceedingly slight. And as to finer and higher considerations—he cursed himself, as Nevins had cursed him, for having a conscience altogether too tender for modern commercial standards. He must make a decision before morning, and a negative one would surely result in a serious quarrel with his partner.

Why had he not consulted his wife in this exigency? She had clear intuitions, of course, then—but they were ignorant of that great branch of human knowledge called "business." True, he had broached the subject in a tentative way, but had been sweetly yet de[illegible]. Could it mean that his beautiful and [illegible] Eulalia was not a true helpmate?

At this point his cogitations were interrupted by a knock at the door, and a servant announced with apologetic manner that a man wanted "to see Mr. Branscombe—the Dago ash man, sir."

"What in thunder does he want to see me about?" asked Branscombe sharply, his frown deepening. "Hasn't he been paid?"

"Yes, sir, he has no bill to present, but it's something important, as well as I can make out from his talk. He's come all the way from North Beach."

"Well, well, show him in here," Branscombe murmured with grudging reluctance, and in another moment the humble visitor entered. With a sickly smile of embarrassment on his weatherbeaten visage, he slunk into the room, and stood for a long moment, twirling his straw hat in his hand. He was not ill-looking and had evidently gotten himself up with care for the interview. The faded black and gray of his shabby, well-brushed clothes matched his grizzled hair, but his large, dark eyes were liquid and soft (not unlike Eulalia's—strange to say) and his straight aqueline nose and well-cut mouth, under an ill-kept black mustache, were quite handsome in their way.

"You not know me, Meester?" He got the words out at last in his queer "Dago" English. "Me take away your ash [illegible] moans (months). Me name Antonio Minetti."

"And what is your errand with me, Mr. Minetti?" was Branscombe's reply to this introduction.

"I come spik to you—'bout sometings. You haf not lost something—one leetle ting—many days ago—hey?"

"Have I lost something—a little thing—some time ago?" repeated the gentleman, searching his memory painfully for a detail so trivial by comparison with the important matters that had engrossed it of late. "Why, sure enough, we have missed an article, a jeweled nut-pick. Have you found it?"

"Like him?" The scavenger produced from his trousers pocket a small package tied up carefully with black thread, and drawing the contents from their successive wrappings of brown paper, held up a table implement in the form of a serpent three inches long, its body of gold encrusted with tiny rubies and emeralds, the tail serving for the pick.

Branscombe took it promptly. It was the identical trinket, the prized de Mersey heirloom, a relic of Eulalia's great-grandfather, who had been an emigré of the French Revolution. It had mysteriously disappeared at the time of the lunch party given on Eulalia's birthday, after having been handed about for the admiration of the company; and Eulalia, in her distress, had even gone so far as to suspect that one of her guests was afflicted with the disease known in upper circles of society as kleptomania.

"Belong to you?" asked the scavenger once more.

"Of course it does," replied the gentleman, examining the elegant trifle critically. Every sparkling gem was intact. "Where did you get it?"

"Me find him in ash barrel tree week ago."

Yes, that was the date of the birthday luncheon. "Then why did you not return it before?" He stopped abruptly, the words hardly off his tongue, and changed the form of the question, to correspond with the changed current of his thought. "Why did you bring it back, my good man?" He looked the scavenger full in the face as he said the words, quietly and in a tone of pleasant encouragement to candor. "Perhaps—it would have been better for you to keep it—to sell it for money, eh?"

"Oh, Meester, I not like to bring him back." Minetti's black eye was fixed on the jeweled pick lying in Branscombe's palm with a yearningly covetous gaze.

"Then you did not sell it because you were afraid of being put in jail for stealing?" A sinister suggestiveness lurked behind the young merchant's amiable smile.

"Oh, no, Meester. Me not afraid. People trow tings in ash barrel—not want—hey. The scavenger darted at his patron a flashing glance that said: "Do not you take me for a fool!"

Branscombe hastened to retrieve his error. He was a shrewd man of business, and flattered himself that he understood human nature fairly well.

"Not want it? Why, confound you, man, this thing has been in my wife's family for a hundred years! I'd give much more than the pawnbroker would to get it back. You knew that—eh?" He drew from his pocket a bright double eagle and held it out. But Minetti did not touch the glittering lure, though his dark eye glistened at sight of it. Branscombe explained that it was all he happened to have about him at the time. Minetti should have more.

But the scavenger replied, beginning to back out of the room: "Pardone, saire. I tak-a moaney—all same I keep-a"—he waved his hand toward the pick. "Not so?"

So Branscombe's second surmise had been wrong. His curiosity was aroused. "Be seated, Mr. Minetti, and tell me all about it—about yourself."

Minetti complied, balancing himself uneasily on the edge of one of the satin-brocaded chairs, and began with an embarrassed clearing of the throat, as he leaned forward, twirling his straw hat in his hand:

"I take you' ash many moans—more as one year. I buy out from ozer man, Paolo Bacigalupi; he go back to old country. I get two bit a moan. Have one horse a' wagon. Pay moocha big license—one dollar moant. Not get moocha moaneys. Haf one-tree-four-fife childer." (Branscombe wondered whether the hesitation were due to uncertainty as to the number of offspring, or the English enumeration.) "Work moocha hard. Get up fife 'clock morning—stop six 'clock night. Eat litta soup an' bread. Go bed moocha tired."

This preamble was followed by an embarrassed cough, after which Minetti went on more eagerly, as though it were a relief to confide his poverty and privations to this rich young man. The latter for the first time occupied himself in listening attentively to the tale and studying the physiognomy of a fellow-man on the lowest rung of the social ladder.

"I haf one boy—Guido—he," counting rapidly to himself on his fingers, "nine year old. He moocha good boy. Smart boy, too. Go public school—read book, write, keep count—learn moocha. Teacher like vera moocha. Now cannot go to school more. Haf to go work—get some moaney. I not like zat, but no can help. Moocha childer, Meester—one litta baby." The words seemed borne on a wave of apology. "Not make moocha moaney my business. Not find moocha silver spoon." A deprecating smile robbed the remark of the touch of sarcasm that might have been intended. "I take him"—with a graceful wave of the arm Minetti indicated the restored trinket—"to man keep store way down town. He not ask noting. Say he gif me feefty-fi' dollar. Big money, saire. So moocha litta Guido not get in one year; work in store get one dollar week. Wiz zat moaney I let him go school one year more. He say: 'Oh, papa, you not take me out school!' But how can I help, saire? I talk to my wife. Me and Giuletta alla night time when childer alla sleep take him out—look long time. Giuletta she say: 'Keep him, Antonio. Sell to store man. Soocha peoples haf so moocha moaney—so moocha fine tings'"—eyes and hand swept the furnishings with an appeal for confirmation in gesture and tone. "Zey haf moocha fine clo'es, eat fine dinner. My childer zey haf only soup—not vaira good—and maccaroni, and rags on zer backs, and shoes alla broke out. Zis fall in ash barrel. Nobody know. You not gife it back, Antonio!'—Giuletta, she say moocha time. But—I do bring him back to you, Meester."

It was clear, then, to Branscombe, that the scavenger had not been actuated by the motives he had imputed to him in restoring the pick. What was left? The religious motive, to be sure! The fear of future punishment for wrongdoing that throughout the ages has kept people—especially the common people—in the straight and narrow path of virtue. He expressed this, striving to formulate the idea simply to the mind of the illiterate peasant.

"Then, Mr. Minetti, your reason for bringing it back was because the priest has told you that if you steal you will go to purgatory and suffer pains forever, was it not?"

All the mildness and humility of Minetti's mien seemed to evaporate as he raised his long, lank shape from the brocaded satin easy chair. "Ha!" he cried. "You tink zat?" Recalling the violent tempers for which "Dagos" were noted, Branscombe for an instant contemplated the possibility of an assault on himself, but Minetti merely made one quick stride to the window. "I not afraid of zat!" he cried, with quick gesture toward the heavens. "Ze priest he see zat all same like meself. He know not of zat what he not can see. Ze sky, ze air, zey loaf all men ze same. Ze sun he shine on you and me. Ze ground he maka good bed for ze long time sleep. Ze sun—zat is fire what burn alla time—but zat fire gif moocha good to alla tings—not pain alla time. It is men who gif pain." The voice that had been full of musically-modulated tones when speaking of his wife and children, took on a harsh, grating tone. "No, no, I not go to church. I not 'fraid of ze priest."

Sydney Branscombe had arisen also, and standing in his old position, his back against the carven columns of the mantelpiece, he regarded the Sicilian ash man intently from under narrowing eyelids.

"Then, in the name of reason, Mr. Antonio Minetti—will you have the kindness to satisfy my curiosity by explaining what motive or combination of motives prompted you to do as you have done?"

Half-unconsciously he had used his own language, discarding the tone and words of patronage in which he had before addressed the ash man. But Minetti understood. He answered:

"I 'fraid one ozer sing in here—tapping his breastbone with his finger—"not out zere. It say to me: 'You, Antonio Minetti—I shame you to keep zis ting what not b'long you. You noting but poor ash man, no got big house, moocha fine tings; no got friends meet on street, laugh and hit on back and say: "Oh, hallo, Minetti! Come my house hav good dinner, moocha wine for drink." Must tink more of you'self. You poor, worka hard alla time. Moocha dirty, moocha tired, got one ting maka feel good—no more. You no haf shame of you'self. Zis one ting, nevaire lose. You lose him, nevaire find no more. Zat what zis tell me in here. So litta Guido he haf to leaf school."

"No, he will not, by thunder!" Branscombe brought his fist down on the mahogany mantel with a mighty thump. "He'll stay there as long as you want to keep him. Where do you live, Minetti?" He took from his pocket memorandum book and pencil.

A smile of piercing sweetness irradiated the swarthy visage of the scavenger. "Nevaire mind. I you' ash man; zat alla. You not haf to pay me"—he waved his hand with a bird-like movement of magnanimous independence. "I gif him back for meself"—he tapped his breastbone once more—"not for you. But——" a second thought seemed to strike him—"maybe you keep me alla time you' ash man. One man come—you not take him?"

"You can bet your life on that!" assented Sydney Branscombe fervently, registering a vow within himself not to lose sight of this unique specimen of the lower orders; and in a moment more Minetti had taken his leave, with a resumption of his old respectful manner and a humble "Tank you, saire."

Going to his library, Sydney Branscombe at once wrote a brief note to his partner and sent it by a mesenger boy before joining Eulalia at the reception. It read as follows:

"Dear Nevins: Having given due consideration to that little matter which formed the subject of our talk today, I can only emphasize the opinion I then advanced as to the inadvisability of such a step, and declare my unalterable determination to withhold my consent, no matter what the consequences. This is final. Yours,

"BRANSCOMBE."

A LITTLE DUNCE.

They taught her—oh, a hundred things!
The names of all the queens and kings,
And where they lived and what they said,
And what they did ere they were dead.
All, all forgot—unless it were
The way her teacher smiled at her.

They tried so hard to make her know
About the land of Eskimo;
The temperate and the torrid zone,
And all the rest of it; alone
She perfectly remembered this;
The sweetness of a playmate's kiss.

Oh, yes, she quite forgot it all,
Except—the pretty asters tall
She picked along the way to school;
The water plashing sweet and cool
When all the children stopped to drink
Beside the old well's mossy brink;

And then, when she came home at night,
Her mother's eyes, so sweet and bright!
And father's hug—the games he played
At tea time with his little maid.
A little dunce? Nay, sweetest wit,
To keep for aye the best of it.

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds.

BEAUTIFY YOUR GROUNDS.

BUT LITTLE TIME AND MONEY NEEDED FOR THE PURPOSE.

By Ernest Braunton.

WE often wonder why some people continue, year after year, to neglect their grounds, to the deterioration of property values all around them. Often one unsightly place spoils a block otherwise quite attractive. The excuses are generally one of two: "Lack of time," or "costs too much."

For the first excuse, it is hardly a truth, for five minutes could be taken almost any day, and that is long enough to plant one shrub or root, and one is better than none. A day's work at planting would fill almost any lawn with shrubbery enough. Fifteen minutes per day will care for a small city lot. A judicious pruning, a mulch, an occasional watering until the plants become established are all that is necessary—nature will do the rest. In two or three years the naked yard becomes a pleasant, joyful spot, a home not only for you, but for birds, and a feeding place for the butterfly and bee.

As to the other excuse, it is almost as empty as the first. There is hardly a section in the State of California that has not fine flowers, plants and trees in abundance growing in a wild state, suitable for lawn planting. We do not mean the larger trees, but those of smaller growth, especially the more showy flowering kinds, of which we have so many. If natives are not desired, we still maintain that a good variety of shrubs may be purchased in California at a less price than in any other State. Cost is a poor excuse in this country; any one can afford plants of some kind, and the poorest are better than none.

There are some who plant their grounds with a great variety of plant life, adding materially to the value of the property, but often when planted there seems to have been no eye for or idea of the "eternal fitness" of things. Large trees which are fine in their proper places, are planted where small shrubs should grow. Too many large trees around a dwelling are unpleasant and unhealthful by reason of their overshading the dwelling and grounds, while a yard that is nothing but a sunlit lawn, without anything in shrub or tree to break the monotony, is a rather barren place. The one thing to be remembered is that the center of the plots or of the yard must be kept free. Do your planting around the boundaries. Above all, do not be the one in your neighborhod to hold down property values for need of a few dollars now, and a few minutes each day, in caring for some easily-grown trees and plants.

Value of Sawdust and Shavings.

There exists a very general but erroneous impression that sawdust and shavings, especially from redwood, are injurious to plant life. This is due in part to the fact that soil coming in contact with redwood for the first time will be discolored. Such reasoning springs from lack of knowledge and is on a par with that of a nursery foreman under whom the writer once worked, who claimed that the more powerful the odor from a compost heap, the greater its fertilizing value.

The indiscriminate use of all kinds of sawdust and shavings for plant soils first attracted the writer's attention while visiting a Santa Barbara nursery, where it was in use for all purposes that soil can be put to. Since then it has become popular in many localities, and no harm has ever resulted so far as can be learned. To effectually settle the matter a letter of inquiry was recently sent to Mr. P. C. Wells, manager of the nursery above noted, who replies as follows:

"My first impression that shavings would be good for potting soil was through the observance that potted plants plunged in sawdust or shavings and 'rooted through' were in unusually fine condition and that the roots were long and fibrous and thoroughly mixed with the shavings. This impressed me to try a little in my potting compost and as there was no ill effect, I added more and more, until at last, in some cases, I used all sifted shavings. For two years, and more, I have used at least half sifted shavings and never have our plants done better. No other soil holds moisture so well, and as for seed growing, I have never found anything to compare with it, the tenderest seeds doing better than in any other medium, and that is saying much. I have never found any injury from either pine or redwood dust or shavings though I have used both fresh from the mill. They would make a fine top covering for new lawns and for mulching flower beds to conserve the moisture I have found no equal."

Study Nature for Garden Effects.

If we would succeed in landscape art, we must have a special love for the beautiful in nature. We should be familiar with our native trees, flowers and shrubs and varying effects of form, size and color. We should begin with a careful study of the natural resources of any given place from a landscape point of view. There is no spot either among mountains, at the seashore, or on the rolling mesas or plains which does not have its own original beauty. There may be massive trees that are impressive from their size and age, which man, by one foolish act, could destroy—thus doing what has taken nature years to develop. There will always be some outlook of the grounds that will be worthy of our serious consideration. To make or to mar this lies in the province of man. He who succeeds in preserving the natural charms of a place, its spirit, and sentiment, though he does not attain the highest perfection, is so far in advance of the one whose first attempt is to obliterate everything natural in order that he may substitute some artificial plan.

Plant Protectors.

A simple device for protecting newly-set plants may be made of heavy tarred or other building paper. It should be made of the heaviest grade and cut in strips of the desired width and length. The width of the strips will be the height of the protectors, and the length will, of course, be the diameter. Bend the strips around like a bandbox and lap the ends, say, an inch. With a sharp knife make an incision through the lap at the top and bottom and fasten with brass paper fasteners, which may be obtained at any stationers. They are very cheaply made and are very helpful in cold or windy weather for tender, freshly planted seedlings.

Fragrant Flowers.

"And because the breath of flowers is far sweeter in the air than in the hand, therefore nothing is more fit for delight than to know what be the flowers and plants that do best perfume the air."—[Bacon.

FORRESTER PALM, WEST SEVENTH STREET.

Roses are all fragrant, but the teas are the most exquisite of the class. The Eglatine, or sweet brier, and the hybrids, Lord Penzance's sweet briers, are rich in volatile oils that give the perfume to the flower, the leaf and the wood of the vine. This sweet, fruity perfume, although so marked in the flower, is yet so fleeting that the arts of distillation and enfleurage practiced by the manufacturer of extracts, essences and pomades with all kinds of aromatic herbs and fragrant flowers, cannot retain nor impart it; the extract sold under the name of Sweet Brier is really the otto (or attar) of other roses, enhanced with the extract of other fragrant plants. The rose stands first with perfumes. Sachet powder, rose water, oil, pomade, and attar are all extracted from the sweet-scented petals.

Jasmines come next, and the whole family are delightfully perfumed. Hyacinths, daffodils, jonquils, lilies, tuberoses and freesias are all fragrant flowers. Lilacs, of all the flowering shrubs of hardy nature, are the most fragrant. One lilac bush, tossing its white or purple plumes in the passing breeze, will perfume an entire garden. Honeysuckles are all delicately and sweetly perfumed, and carnations are spicy, clove-scented and richly perfumed. Heliotrope is scented like vanila, and violets are rich in perfume. In planting a flower garden, select first the fragrant flowers, give them the preference, and make those that are without fragrance of secondary importance.

Small Appreciation of Trees.

It does seem a pity that so many of our people have little regard for the trees in and about our city. It is still more deplorable to see how quick our city fathers have been to destroy every tree that stood anywhere near a street or sidewalk line. No matter if it be one planted by the owner of the lot and cared for until it becomes like one of the family; if it stands only a few inches in the way of curbs or sidewalk, out it must come.

Liquid Fertilizer.

Many home gardeners have plants from which they wish the very best results and are willing to devote some time towards such results. One of the best means of forcing garden plants is by the use of liquid manure. Fill a common grain sack with manure—cow manure is best—sheep manure is good, or well-rotted horse manure will do—put in a water-tight barrel and fill with water. In a few days it will be ready for use. By keeping the manure in the sack you get the liquid clear. Use it often and weak, rather than seldom and strong. This will prove especially valuable for caarnations and for pot plants, if not too strong.

Ceylon's Botanic Garden.

The pride of Ceylon, the boast of the colony, is the government botanic garden at Peradeniya, four miles from Kandy, where for eighty years past all the wonderful things of all tropical countries have been growing with enthusiasm. A great bouquet of palm trees soaring with the highest treetops confronts one at the entrance, and every step brings a succession of delights and surprises.

An amherstia tree hangs full of its wonderful deep coral red flower branches, and a row of Assam rubber trees, once planted largely in the island with a view to commercial returns, stand colossal and nobly picturesque, their massive gray roots rising above ground in great contorted walls or buttresses, that give them an ornamental base. There is another big Assam rubber tree in the garden over sixty years of age, whose gray serpents of roots writhe twenty and thirty feet away from the trunk and lift ridges one to three feet high. When will Los Angeles get her much-needed botanic garden?

First Impressions.

It is unfortunate that the approaches to Los Angeles by rail are not more prepossessing. They could be made more so by parking the right of way, but it is inevitable that these districts will be occupied with factories, warehouses, etc., and it will be hard to make these beautiful. Therefore, the greater expectancy of beauty must be toward the everlasting hills and, say what we may of the advantages offered by Los Angeles for profitable investment and industry, the favorable first impression must be made upon the retina of the eye by an appeal to the love of the beautiful. A city with beautiful parks and drives will never be wanting friends, or fail of being attractive.

Lasting Impressions.

Most of the facts derived from the study of nature in childhood will be forgotten, but there may possibly remain the habit of observation, a degree of thoughtfulness for the rights and feelings of lower creatures, a love for nature herself. Let us trust that having ears they may hear; that even when the weight of cares oppress, the graceful bending of a dainty fern, or the glinting of bright wings, or the warble of a bird, may ever be a source or enjoyment, that the dead, cold moon of gain or ambition may not wholly eclipse the glowing sun of love of nature.

Railroad Station Grounds.

Railway corporations are rapidly coming to recognize the good business policy of a neatly-kept station, with a pretty parklike inclosure on one side. It is refreshing to the passing traveler's senses, and it impresses the alighting passenger with the thought "the people of this town are certainly up to date. They must have got a hustle on themselves." So he comes with a pleasant feeling in your midst and goes forth to advertise you. In many cases a request from a local improvement association to the railway company will lead them to make all these improvements at their own expense. One more thought in regard to your station. Place a box or rack in the waiting-room and contribute to it your old magazines and periodicals for the use of the public waiting for the train. It will make the parting impressions of your town kindly ones, and you cannot estimate the widespread influence of this neighborly action.

The Power of the Sadhu.

STORY OF MYSTERY AT A MILITARY STATION IN INDIA.

From the Manchester Chronicle.

I WAS staying at a small military station in India, when a curious thing happened in what has been called "the world beyond our senses." I had been traveling up country, and was recruiting after an attack of fever at the quarters of the son of an old friend. He was a fine, manly young fellow, a general favorite, and just engaged to his colonel's daughter, a Miss Cynthia Langley.

"You must be beloved of the gods, Harold," I said, laughing, as we were sitting one morning smoking on the veranda. "You seem to have everything your own way; Fortune is showering all her good gifts on you."

"Unberufen!" he cried gaily. "Don't you know it is unwise to remind the gods of their favors lest they take them away? I'm a deuced lucky chap, as you say"—by the way his eyes softened I knew he was thinking of Miss Langley—"I only hope it isn't too good to last."

I was surprised at the touch of uneasiness in his tone at the last words, but I knew enough of human nature to understand that fear and anxiety for the woman he loves may trouble a man without reason, though he would face real danger to himself without a qualm.

"You are growing superstitious," I said. "You have been in India long enough to have lost some of your British stolidity and gained a little imagination."

"Perhaps. . . . You know a good many curious things. Have you ever heard of 'The Midnight Ax?'" he asked, after a moment, abruptly.

"No," I said in surprise. "What do you mean?"

"They have a superstition in this part that if you hear the sound of strokes in the night, as though some one were felling trees, it is a warning of coming evil. The natives say that this noise cometh about the time of the first sleep, when all men slumber soundly and the night is still. Well! I woke up suddenly last night—and heard it."

He spoke in a half-shamefaced way, as though he expected to be laughed at, but I could see he was unpleasantly impressed himself.

"Nonsense!" I said, thinking the sooner he got rid of such a fancy the better. "As you know the legend, any noise that disturbed you outside in the night would be likely to take the sound of felling trees in your ears."

"I have never heard it before," he answered quietly. And then he began at once to speak of other things.

He did not refer to the subject at any future time, and as I did not see him look troubled again, but, on the contrary, he seemed to be enjoying his life to the full, I concluded the uncomfortable presentiment had not returned and was forgotten.

I was convalescent, and thinking of starting on the first stage of my journey home, when a traveler set up his camp in our neighborhood. He appeared to be a person of importance, as he had quite a large retinue of servants. Some of the officers soon made his acquaintance, and we learned that his name was Jerome Burton, and that he had been living up country, out of reach of civilization, for some years.

This would explain various peculiarities in his appearance and mode of living, which struck one as strange in a wealthy young Englishman traveling for pleasure, as he gave himself out to be.

"There's something funny about that chap, Harold," I said, when we met Mr. Burton riding into the Colonel's compound one evening. "I can't quite make him out."

"Is there?" he answered carelessly. "I haven't noticed it. You know, sir," mischievously, "you have been investigating so many queer things all your life that you may be inclined to give a little dramatic coloring to quite ordinary people and situations."

I laughed at the gibe.

"My habit of looking under the surface has saved my life more than once when I have had only myself to depend on," I said. "And in this country more than in any other I have found it true that things are very seldom what they seem. Of course you will say it is my imagination again, but once or twice I have fancied that this man Burton and I have met before."

"Well, I suppose that is not impossible, considering how you have roamed the world, and he also seems a bit of a traveler."

"Yes, but that is just what puzzles me. I cannot 'place' him; I don't know where he belongs in the past. Though his face appears familiar, I have no idea where I can have seen him."

"In a previous existence, perhaps," Harold said, laughing lightly.

"No," I answered, taking him seriously. "Within the last year, and in this country. He belongs here, without a doubt, by inclination and habit, if not by birth, though I should be inclined to say he had some Indian blood in his veins. It is not only his dark complexion—that might come from exposure to the sun—but his manner to women and various other little things are distinctly un-English. Haven't you noticed it?"

"Yes," he said more gravely. "I don't like the fellow any better than you do."

"I wonder the Colonel has him so much at his place," I ventured. "After all, we know very little about him. He brought no credentials."

"Except his money bags," sharply. "The Colonel is a poor man, and consequently attaches an exaggerated value to these. But," he added loyally, "it is not really his fault. Burton is a pushing chap and would get in anywhere he wanted."

I could not say anything farther, though I felt more uneasiness than I had shown at the intimacy that had sprung up between this stranger and Col. Langley's family; particularly at his undisguised admiration for Cynthia.

His attentions to her were an impertinence, considering he was aware that she was promised to another man, and I knew that if Harold's unsuspicious nature were once roused there might be trouble. I could not quite understand the girl, but then I don't know much about women. It seemed to me that she was flattered by Burton's devotion, and that she liked to make him feel her power. I could not warn her that she was playing with fire.

One night the Colonel had had a dinner party, and afterward some of the men went outside to smoke, where they could listen at their ease to the music in the drawing-room, which opened on to the veranda. I happened to be sitting opposite Burton, who was lying back in a lounge chair, and I was puzzling, as I often puzzled, over that fleeting likeness to somebody I had met before.

I would not acknowledge that I could be mistaken. I prided myself on my memory for faces and facts. The likeness seemed to be about the eyes, which were oriental in their dark brilliance and fire, though now they only glinted under the heavy, half-closed lids. As he lay back smoking in the dreamy, absorbed fashion, which, to my mind, again betrayed his eastern nature, the moonlight filtered through the trellis work and a shaft fell full on his face.

I started violently. Surely, this Jerome Burton, this pseudo-Englishman, bore the sign of the trifala on his forehead!

The trifala are three lines drawn upward between the eyebrows, and is the sign used by a sect of Sadhus, or Hindu ascetics. The sign should have the center line painted in red and the outer ones in white, the triple lines signifying the three gods of the Hindu triad: Vishnu, Siva, and Brahma. But the marks, of course, were uncolored on Burton's forehead, and had evidently been effaced as much as possible. If the light had not happened to catch the lines in a certain way I should never have noticed them. I knew now where I had seen this man; the sign had awakened my memory. It was among the lonely snow fastnesses of the Himalaya Mountains; in the cave of a feared and venerated sadhu.

I wondered what I should do. It would be useless to try to expose him with nothing to support my extraordinary statement but those three almost obliterated lines, and yet I could not endure the idea that the man whom I had last seen in life should take his place among Europeans, unquestioned.

I wondered if he remembered me. We had met only for a few hours when I was accorded an interview with the recluse of whose extraordinary powers I had heard, and whom I had journeyed some distance to see in my eagerness to learn as much as possible of Indian mysticism. Burton had certainly never given me the slightest reason to think that he had seen me before; but then he had the oriental command of feature and expression.

Cynthia Langley was singing now, and he was listening with a rapt expression. I could see her seated at the piano, with Harold standing beside her, her fair face turned up a little, her soft white gown falling away from her rounded throat and dimpled arms, and it angered me that Jerome Burton should dare to covet this loveliness.

For it was evident to me that he lingered on in the hope of winning Cynthia away from her allegiance. She had seemed to avoid him of late. He had shown his hand too plainly, and frightened her, perhaps, I thought.

I was determined to stay and see the play out, though I fancy Harold wondered a little at my change of plans, but I thought I might be of use to him presently, though as yet I did not know how. If I could have been present at his marriage, I should have gone away quite content, but Col. Langley postponed it first on one excuse and then on another, until Harold began to get irritable and suspicious.

I calmed him as much as I could, for it seemed to me that the Colonel would gladly seize on any excuse to break off the match, and I was afraid that, in some impetuous moment, Harold might give him the opportunity he sought. Either Burton had got Cynthia's father into his power in some way, or else the Colonel was dazzled by the new suitor's wealth.

I was returning alone late one evening from the club, when, as I passed the Langleys' house I saw some one moving about in the compound. I should have thought nothing of it, for natives are to be met anywhere at any hour, but there was something secretive and stealthy about the silent figure which roused my attention. I stopped to look more closely, and then I saw that the soft, gliding movements did not belong to a native, but to Jerome Burton.

He was stooping over some white stones, and seemed to be writing or making some sign on them. I watched him in amazement, but in a few moments he got up and came toward the gate, and I hurried away. I did not want him to find me watching. I should learn nothing of his doings except in secret; he was more than a match for me in guile, I knew. I was out early the next morning to examine the stones, which had appeared to interest Burton so much the night before. But when I reached the Colonel's garden I found that they had gone!

I stood gazing at the impressions in the damp ground where they had been, unable to credit my senses. I could not be mistaken, for I had noticed exactly where Burton had stood.

"There is some deviltry at work," I muttered at last, "but I can't get at the meaning of it. They were common stones, of no value, I should say, to anybody, and yet Burton takes the trouble to come late at night and make some cabalistic signs over them. He did not take them away with him, I know, but they are gone this morning. What does it mean?"

I shut myself up in my room directly I got back, and unlocking a trunk, I carefully looked through the papers I had collected during my sojourn in India and the notebooks I had written until I came upon an account of my interview with the saint of the Himalayas. So far I had found nothing to help me; if this did not give me a clue to Burton's strange behavior [illegible] more.

But the clue, thank heaven! [illegible]

"Some of these Hindu ascetics," I [illegible] extraordinary powers, but the [illegible] are not to be found in crowded [illegible] in the lonely jungle and snow-[illegible] the foot of man is rarely seen. [illegible] ance and probation, they are able to [illegible] miracles to grosser-minded men.

"The sadhu I have seen today [illegible] urgent entreaty he gave me an [illegible] told me that he had only to make a [illegible] on anything he wanted, and it would [illegible] by an unseen agent, and in proof of [illegible] after he had touched a plant growing [illegible] I saw it lying at his feet! It appears, [illegible] such things brought by his djinn, or [illegible] remained with him for a time. He had [illegible] them permanently.

I put my note-book down.

"Burton attached himself to him, and [illegible] ciple doubtless with the object of learning [illegible] making use of it to unworthy ends," I [illegible] fortunately, the old sadhu must have [illegible] deal. I understand now how the [illegible] though still I did not see why he [illegible]

But I was to learn that a little later.

I was a bad sleeper, and often [illegible] other people had gone to bed. Lately, I [illegible] ticularly wakeful and uneasy, being [illegible] mischief was at work, and not [illegible] was, and when I went out I instinctively [illegible] to walk past Col. Langley's bungalow. [illegible] sible that Burton would repeat his [illegible] I wanted to be there to see. But a week [illegible] the incident of the stones, and, as far as I [illegible] not gone again at night.

He had looked worried and anxious [illegible] cied he was getting desperate. He had [illegible] Cynthia, who obviously avoided [illegible] things seemed to be reaching a crisis. [illegible] erally had had enough of him, and he [illegible] ostracized; but he was too absorbed [illegible] tion to care about anything else.

As I leaned against the Colonel's [illegible] down the empty, moonlit road, thinking [illegible] turn in when I had finished my [illegible] footstep behind me, and swinging [illegible] Cynthia Langley. I started forward [illegible] tion in my lips, when I stopped short.

The girl's eyes were wide open, [illegible] she was walking in her sleep, or [illegible] it might be dangerous to rouse her. [illegible] white evening dress, and, gliding [illegible] unconscious step, she looked like [illegible] bewildered to wonder where she [illegible] her.

For some minutes we walked over [illegible] a little ahead of me, then suddenly [illegible] rough track and stopped, as though [illegible] seen hand.

In a moment I knew the reason. [illegible] white encampment was close by and [illegible] came forward with outstretched [illegible] of a tree. My first inclination [illegible] throat, but he evidently had not [illegible] in the shadows I watched and waited.

His touch and voice roused the [illegible] sharp cry.

"What is it? Where am I?" [illegible] wildly.

"With me, dearest. You are quite [illegible] so. You must have been thinking [illegible] you, and you came out to give me [illegible] I might sleep in peace. You have [illegible] kind words of late, have you? and [illegible] me day or night."

His voice was as soft and musical [illegible] looked at her with worshiping eyes. [illegible] be, his love was something that no [illegible] For a moment I wondered. Then I [illegible] hands away with a passionate cry.

"You brought me here," she [illegible] arts. Do you think I should have [illegible] will? Don't you know that if [illegible] foolish enough to feel flattered by [illegible] long hated and feared you? I have [illegible] dured your presence out of [illegible] love and because every day I hoped [illegible] away.

I saw him turn white to the lips [illegible] and in that moment, scoundrel [illegible] sorry for him.

"Indeed," he said slowly, [illegible] changed. "I am sorry it has [illegible] rather have won you by love than [illegible] are mine. Do you think," cruelly, [illegible] night assignation comes to his [illegible] believe has very strict notions, [illegible] you to your engagement?"

She called out in distress and [illegible]

"I shall take you home now, and [illegible] word to be my wife I shall say [illegible] to any one," the relentless voice [illegible] your father will know of this [illegible] tonight and the rest of our [illegible] your matter-of-fact countrymen I [illegible] to credit your story of having been [illegible] your will. . . . Now choose!"

She was a proud, sensitive girl, [illegible] the risk of letting him gain even [illegible]

"I will chose for Miss Langley," [illegible] ward. "She rejects your proposals [illegible] her leave her father's house, I followed [illegible] have heard every word that has been [illegible] explanation is likely to be received [illegible] than yours, and that she has nothing [illegible]

[illegible] "that will not be the case with you if one [illegible] word passes your lips."

[illegible] girl was clinging to me, sobbing with joy [illegible] and putting my arm through hers, while Burton [illegible] still struck dumb with surprise, I led her away. [illegible] the shelter of her father's house unseen, and [illegible] fear that any one would hear of how nearly [illegible] had been wrecked unless she chose to tell Harold.

[illegible] end of the story is perhaps the strangest part. [illegible] morning news was brought that Jerome Burton [illegible] been found dead in his tent, and when I went [illegible] I shuddered at the look of fear and horror [illegible] had stamped on his face.

[illegible] the look, too, of a man taken by surprise. [illegible] were various rumors afloat as to the cause of his [illegible] and, some putting it down to suicide, others to treachery, though no trace of violence could be [illegible] I had my own theory, which I kept to myself. [illegible] how man's power over the unseen forces of nature [illegible] resented by those who must obey it; I knew, too, [illegible]onally the servant in that strange world may [illegible] the master, especially when the power gained [illegible] put to an evil use. And, remembering the ex-[illegible] on the dead face, I drew my own conclusions.

SUPPOSE YOU TRY SMILING.

[illegible] is heavy, I haven't a doubt,
[illegible] have loads they must carry about,
And they are not whining.
[illegible] are glad if but half of the way
[illegible] the shadow, or part of the day
They see the sun shining.
Suppose you try smiling.

[illegible] are lonely, but other hearts ache,
[illegible] refuse to be bitter or break
Because of life's sorrow.
[illegible] of the joy in the land far away,
[illegible] the slow passing hours of today
With hopes of tomorrow.
Suppose you try smiling.

[illegible] old world is a mirror, you know,
[illegible] with a sneer, or face of a foe,
And you will see trouble,
[illegible] it with laughter and looks full of cheer,
[illegible] will come sunshine and love true and dear,
Your blessings to double.
Suppose you try smiling.

[illegible] are open to those who are glad,
[illegible] lack courage, too many are sad,
Those near you need cheering.
[illegible] your burden, the way is not long,

The Brodie Family.

THE RECORD EXTENDS BACK MANY CENTURIES.

By a Special Contributor.

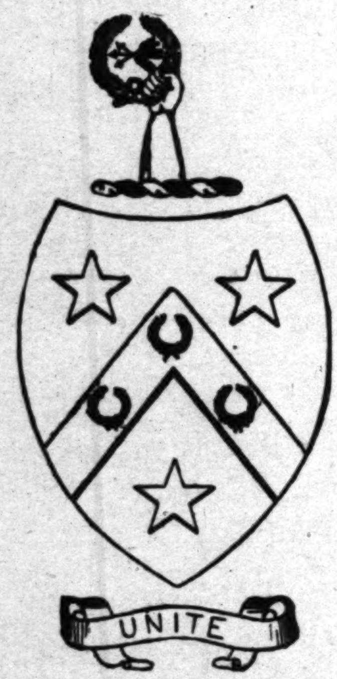
TO be a Brodie of Brodie is a distinction, for the family, one of eminence, dates back to Malcolm, Thane of Brodie, in the time of Alexander III of Scotland, thirteenth century, from whom he received a large grant of land in Morayshire. Here is Brodie Castle.

Although the first records of the family are found in Scottish history, the name, by some authorities, is supposed to be of French origin, from the word brode, meaning swarthy, sunburned.

Research might reveal a Norman ancestor, one of the band of William the Conqueror.

A town in Austria, founded many centuries ago, is called Brody.

In Scotland, we find the family taking their place with the first of the land, from earliest times, and frequent mention of the name is made in histories of the country.



Brodie

One of the "worthies" was Alexander Brodie, son of David and Irizzel, niece of Admiral Crichton. Alexander was Member of Parlia, a representative of the Assembly of Scotland, and one of the commission sent to meet Charles II at The Hague. He was also member of the Committee of Estates, during the attempt of Charles to wrest from Cromwell his dominion.

George Brodie's history of the British empire from the accession of Charles I to Restoration, is the most thoroughgoing vindication of the Puritans that has appeared. He was historiographer of Scotland, at a salary of £180 a year.

The deputy keeper of the signet for Scotland, about the middle of the last century, was Sir Thomas Brodie of Sterling.

Two sculptors of renown were William and Alexander Brodie. The colossal statue of the Prince Consort at Perth, the memorial bronze at Edinburgh, the statue of Queen Victoria in marble at Aberdeen, and another at Balmoral, are their work.

The Queen's physician and surgeon was Sir Benjamin Collins Brodie, one of the Brodies of Brodie. He was medical adviser to three successive sovereigns. A favorite with George IV, he was summoned to Windsor Castle daily at 6 o'clock, and remained through the day, during the King's last illness, the King desiring his companionship equally as much as his advice. He was made a baronet by William IV.

Sir Benjamin was a man of restless activity, who felt his happiness to consist in a life of exertion, to quote his own words. His brother Peter drew up the charter of King's College, London, and his draft for a life assurance company is considered the best model ever made.

War has its devotees from the Brodie family, as well as peace, and one of the officers of the Royal Navy was Capt. David.

Characteristics of the family are application, perseverance, energy, method and readiness of resource.

The arms reproduced—that borne by Sir Benjamin Collins Brodie—is argent on a chevron, between three mullets argent, three civic wreaths vert.

Crest—A dexter cubit arm, erect, holding a civic wreath, as in the arms, with three arrows, one in fess and two in saltire, with points toward the dexter, argent. Motto, "Unite."

Mullets, or stars of five points, signify shining in virtue; arrows, martial readiness; a civic wreath was bestowed upon one who had saved a brother-citizen's life or who had shown the civic virtue of patriotism in defending his country.

Burke also gives arms for another line descended from Malcolm, Thane of Brodie, the family which is now represented by the Lord Lieutenant of Nairnshire. The arms is emblazoned, argent; a chevron gules, between three mullets azure.

Crest—A right hand holding a bunch of arrows, all proper. The motto is also "Unite." The supporters are two savages, wreathed about the heads and bodies, each holding a club. Laurel is symbolic of war and triumph.

Other Brodie mottoes are, "Be Mindful to Unite," and "Clarior Hinc Honis."

Of course, there can be but one chief upon an escutcheon, and there may only be one fess, or fesse, whichever spelling is preferred. A fess is a single straight band across the shield horizontally, and must be in the center.

When two such figures occur they are called bars. A bar is always drawn rather narrower than a fess. When a field is composed of a number of bars it is termed barry of so many. A barulet is half the width of a bar. If the stripes are very narrow, the term baruly takes the place of barry, but this is of rare occurrence.

The pale—another of the "honorable ordinaries," as they are called—is a straight, perpendicular band or stripe, from the top to the bottom of the shield, occupying the center of the field. Like the chief, it is supposed to take up a third of its area.

When a shield or any portion of it is made up of different stripes placed in the position of a pale—i. e., perpendicularly—it is then said to be paly of so many; for example, "paly of six or and gules."

A pale denotes military strength and fortitude, and was bestowed upon those who had impaled or otherwise defended cities, or who had "stood up rightly for prince and country."

The bend is a band similar to the pale, but crossing the shield diagonally from the dexter chief point to the sinister base point—that is, starting from the left-hand top corner as you face the escutcheon.

When a bend is placed over a charge the latter is said to be "debruised by a bend," though usually the blazon runs, "over all a bend," etc. When this is drawn in exactly the opposite direction it is nowadays called a bend sinister—a sign of illegitimacy—but its fourteenth century name was a fissure.

The bend signifies defense or protection. It is supposed to represent a knight's shield suspender. Shakespeare's arms displays a bend.

The next in the list of honorable ordinaries is the quarter. This explains itself, being simply the upper dexter quarter of the shield. (Dexter is the high-hand side of an escutcheon, but the left of the spectator. Sinister is the left-hand side, but the right of the spectator.)

Though a field is very often quarterly, it is a rare occurrence to find one quarter by itself, differently tinctured from the remainder. The term "per cross" is identical with quarterly, though the latter is the more generally accepted blazon. The diminutive of the quarter is the canton, which occupies a ninth portion of the field. This is considered a sub-ordinary.

Chevron is a familiar term, as the stripes upon the sleeve of a soldier or a policeman are perfect chevrons. The chevron denotes protection, being symbolic of the roof of a house.

GUN COTTON AS FUEL.

"Light another hundred-foot candle of condensed gun cotton! We must make the next mile in less than a minute!"

That command, or something like it, will be given by the commander of a United States torpedo-boat in the next war in which this country may unhappily be engaged, writes Mr. W. R. Stewart in Technical World Magazine for April. It will not mean that, finding his ship in a desperate situation, the captain has decided to blow himself and his whole command out of the water. It will signify only the adoption as emergency fuel of the wonderful new compound, "motorite," a secret composition of gun cotton and nitro-glycerine, invented by Hiram Maxim, whose "Maximite" is the high explosive now used by the government in submarine torpedoes.

Motorite for fuel use is packed in long steel tubes and under forced draft can furnish an almost unlimited amount of power for a short distance.

FAMILIES OF PLANTS.

The writer greatly favors the collection of plants of one family rather than indiscriminate assortment—there is such an added interest. Take the Tecoma family (climbers mostly,) a large place could use them all. In the local market may be obtained Tecoma Capensis, from Cape of Good Hope; T. grandiflora, China and Japan; T. filicifolium (Campsidium,) from the Andes; T. Jasminoides, Australia (also has a pure white variety;) T. radicans, from the United States; T. Smithii, a garden hybrid; T. stans, a shrub from Mexico; T. Ricasolina (Mackenii) South Africa, and T. velutina, from Guatemala. Others could be obtained with little trouble. The colors range from white to pinks, yellows, reds to purple. Very close to the Tecomas, too close for even the gardeners or nurserymen to tell the difference, are our two Bignonias, Tweediana and venusta.

WATER GARDENS.

Every place which does not overlook the sea, a river, or some body of water, should contain a water garden even though it be nothing more than half a barrel sunk in the ground. There is plenty of time in which to prepare for water plants, because they will not need to be planted for two months yet. The writer has seen a fine large plant of hardy water lily grown and flowered successfully in a tub sunk in the ground. Besides the plant it contained half a dozen goldfish. It needs both animal and vegetable life in water to keep a proper balance. Either by itself will finally perish.

A LOS ANGELES WOMAN'S VISIT AT GIBRALTAR.

From a Special Correspondent.

GIBRALTAR, Jan. 30.—After being "rocked in the cradle of the deep" for ten long days, we were more than delighted to see the shores of Africa and old Gibraltar in the distance. After the health inspector had assured himself of our good health, we were bundled into a lighter and sent ashore among the "cargadores," who surrounded us at once, all anxious to earn twopence or sixpence carrying our baggage to the customhouse. After finding that we had neither tobacco nor whisky concealed about us, we were passed on and given no more trouble. Three little tickets were handed us. These were our passports, granting permission to stay in the town one day. Our hotel proprietor had these renewed for us, as we wished to remain longer, and we soon after sallied forth to gaze at the great rock of Gibraltar, the portal through which Arabian refinement and learning entered the peninsula with Tarik, the Moor in 711. This tongue of rock running directly south from the Spanish mainland to within twenty miles of the African shore is the nearest of all Europe to that coast. One square mile of this peninsula is a sandy plain between the northern foot of the rock and the Spanish boundary, and from this the hill springs abruptly to the height of some 1500 feet. On this northern side, and on the east along the Mediterranean, the eye can trace no line of approach to the summit, so precipitous are the cliffs. The natural means of access is from the western side, at the base of which is a long, narrow strip of land of irregular elevation to which the town of Gibraltar clings.

Governor's Cottage

Old Moorish Castle

From the land port or gate, which leads across the neutral ground on to the Spanish frontier, the distance to "Europa Point" on the cliffs opposite Africa is about [illegible] a half miles. This narrow space between the rock and the sea rises at the southern extremity to the height of some 800 feet. Over "Rosia Bay" it opens out into a small plateau, which affords room for a sort of suburb. Here is the Governor's summer home, and the homes of a few other residents who are glad to exchange this fresher air and extended view for the lower level of the town. The prospect from this terrace is very fine, with the cliffs of Ceuta in front and Tangier and the Atlantic in the distance, while on the right, over the Bay of Gibraltar, there is a lovely view of the range of wooded hills which separate the waters of Gibraltar from Trafalgar. Toward evening there is a blue haze hanging over all which makes it perfectly beautiful. There are many attractions here, such as the Fortifications, Rock Galleries, and the "Moorish Castle," one of the oldest buildings in Spain, from whence magnificent views are obtained.

None but British subjects are allowed to pass beyond a certain point up on the rock. The dividing line is a fine wire fence, which is used more particularly to keep out dog smugglers, the animals being used to smuggle precious stones concealed in their fur. A soldier was sent as guide and guard to accompany us through some of the rock galleries, and subterranean passages. We stopped to look back over the town and bay from the portholes where huge guns are stationed. Great iron gates opened before and clanged behind us as we toiled upward to a point 500 feet high (the limit).

The town itself is very picturesque, with its pretentious military and naval quarters and hospitals, its narrow streets running in every direction, many of them really stone stairways, leading to upper streets cut in the side of the rock, and the sidewalks so narrow that the middle of the street is used quite as much by the pedestrians.

One needs to be a good climber and dodger as well to see the town, for every few moments one will be whistled at to get out of the way, and must step into a doorway quickly to avoid the queer little yellow carriages, or a heavily-loaded donkey with a peon wielding his blacksnake to help him up the hill.

The resident civilian population is 20,000, among which are Turks, Moors, Spaniards, and the blue-eyed, fair-haired boy who, when you address him, will reply: "No entiendo. He is a Gibralttarian, 'alf and 'alf Spanish and English. The average strength of British troops here is 6000 to 9000, we are told.

The social life of the place seems quite gay. The hotels are full of visiting English friends and relatives, and balls and parties, with games of different kinds and horseback riding, while away the time 'bery pleasantly for them. At 10 a.m., when the streets begin to dry after their daily scrubbing—you will see the society people all out on their well-bred saddle horses. Old Sol does not show his face to those on the western side until that time, and the streets are deserted until then by all but workmen. It seems a pity that the soldiers are not permitted to boat and swim in the bay, but they are not allowed off the rock, and must not even throw a stone into the water.

It is a pretty sight on the Sabbath to see the soldiers marching to the chapel to service, the artillerymen in blue and gold strappings, and the infantry with their red coats. All file in on their respective aisles with their prayer books ready to join in the responsive reading and prayers. ELEANOR A. WOLFE.

A MODERN CORTEZ.

HOW A CAPE COD FISHERMAN BECAME THE "KING OF JAMAICA."

In the March World's Work Eugene P. Lyle, Jr., tells the remarkable story of "Captain Baker and Jamaica;" how this gentle Cape Cod fisherman became the King of Great Britain's richest West Indian isle. The history of the conquest began thirty-five years ago, with an armada of one lone schooner. She had two masts, and could carry a hundred tons. Her owner and skipper was Lorenzo Dow Baker, the son of a whaler, and a child of the sea as well. He took a cargo to Argostura and on his return trip carried a lot of bananas. But by the time he reached New York they had all rotted. The next time he went he got very green bananas. The fruit was not plentiful, so he begun to teach the people how to grow them. "The first man who has ten acres in bananas will be a rich man," he told them with earnest conviction. He touched intimately the lives of the blacks. He was known in their homes and at their church socials, and he helped them to build the chapel for which, inevitably, they were collecting money. He talked to the school children, rooms full of bright-eyed little pickaninnies, and he told them of the good of money. Then he told them how to get it. "Grow bananas," he said. "Grow them wherever your mammy will let you have a foot of ground."

Capt. Baker had to push his campaign of education at both ends. In Jamaica he taught people to grow bananas, but in the United States he had to teach people to eat them. They were not yet an ordinary article of diet, and moreover the yellow kind from Jamaica was comparatively unknown.

But he has succeeded. He revived the island from economic prostration, and it is flourishing. He did it by making the banana trade.

Capt. Baker still lives at Port Antonio, which now is not only an American town, but a Boston town. In the summer he goes back to Wellfleet, there renews intercourse with Mayflower descendants like himself, tries periodically to wring an appropriation from Uncle Joe Cannon for the Pilgrim monument at Provincetown, quietly looks after his charities, and put his sturdy shoulder to any enterprise for the beautifying of life along Cape Cod. Port Antonio flies the American flag, although it is a British possession. The original plan was to alternate the flags. "It's the coolie's business to change 'em," Capt. Baker explained, "but I'm afraid he doesn't know his business very well."

AMERICAN CARS FRIGHTEN KOREANS.

Some enterprising Americans have put an electric street railway in Seoul and given to several streets an amusing modern appearance, but the Koreans have learned that the big cars run on fixed tracks, so they are no longer afraid of them. A member of the railway company told me, however, that they had to kill several Koreans before they arrived at this gratifying result. The people thought at first that the cars were run by some new and terrible kind of demon, and they performed all manner of didos to rid themselves of him; but they innocently got hold of live wires a number of times and learned that the demon was powerful and could kill as no other demon but the demon of lightning could, so now they let him alone. Moreover, they ride in the cars he runs; but I don't doubt that many even yet mentally cross themselves, if I may be permitted to so express it, when they venture within the radius of his awful power.—[Eleanor Franklin, in Leslie's Weekly.

Old Lady Lovejoy.

THE COTTAGE PRAYER MEETING AND HOW IT ENDED.

By a Special Contributor.

ELVIRY LOVEJOY moved softly about the sitting-room, placing the chairs in prim order against the wall. Her eyes were heavy with anxiety and lack of sleep. For a week she had not slept more than an hour at a time, and now, although every tired nerve in her body was crying out for rest, she must yet prepare for the cottage prayer meeting.

"Elviry"—it was Sister Sarah Peabody who had suggested the plan—"Elviry, you've been a good daughter to her—as good a daughter as these parts has ever seen. An' you'll get your reward in the next world, if you don't in this. But she's about through with this life, Elviry—your mother is—and I think some of us had better come an' hold a prayer meetin' this afternoon. She's so fur gone she can't realize nothin', an' our prayin' won't disturb her, so I think we'd best meet to pray for her departin' spirit. Now, Elviry, don't take on. You know the old sayin', 'The young may die, but the old must'—or mebby it don't run just that way, either. Anyway, that's what it means."

The tears overflowed Elviry's tired eyes. "But I can't spare her yet," she said, with lips that trembled. "She's all I've got, and I'm all she's got. Seems as if we hadn't ought to be separated yet."

" 'Tain't for us to say when's the right time for separatin', Elviry. You've done your full duty to her, an' you needn't have nothin' on your conscience. But you get ready, and a few of us will come over an' have a season of prayer."

Elviry, tired and worn, carefully swept and dusted in preparation for the prayer meeting, for well she knew that more than one sharp pair of eyes would search the room for dust and disorder.

She set the chairs primly against the wall, and went into the bedroom to comb her hair and put on a fresh white apron. She looked at the impassive figure in the big, old-fashioned bed, and sighed. For several days now it had lain thus—the old, enfeebled body, inert, motionless, apparently having already crossed the invisible border line which divides the living and the dead.

Jane Powell stole into the room on tiptoe. She was the first to come to the prayer meeting. She stood by the old-fashioned bureau and watched Elviry comb and do up her soft, brown hair.

How pretty it was—Elviry's hair! Scarcely a thread of silver showed, and there had always been a natural waviness about it that many a woman had envied.

Just now the thought struck Jane Powell how becoming black would be to Elviry with that pretty hair and her smooth, white forehead.

"Elviry," she said, "don't you hurry none about gettin' your mournin'. You won't feel like goin' to the milliner's for a spell, an' you can just as well as not use Sister Lucindy's crape bonnet an' veil. She'd be glad to let you have 'em."

Elviry looked at her. Her mouth set in a tense line. "Don't!" she said, and Jane, feeling vaguely embarrassed, began to examine the articles on the bureau. Her heart was all kindness, but she had little tact.

"Queer she feels that way," she thought to herself. "But Elviry always was odd—just like her mother."

At 3 o'clock while the women of the neighborhood kneeled before Elviry's chairs in the neat sitting-room, and one after another sent their petitions heavenward—not for the restoration of the sick woman in the next room, but for her peaceful or triumphant passing—a sound from the bedroom suddenly fell upon Elviry's keen ear.

She rose hurriedly and went into the room. There, sitting bolt upright in bed, was the invalid, her wrinkled old face looking out from her close-fitting cap border.

"Elviry," she demanded, "what's goin' on out there? Seems like I heard Mis' Abner Bennet prayin'—sounded like she used to in prayer meetin'. Is it her?"

Elviry took her mother's hand and held it. She was trembling like a leaf. "Yes, mother," she said, "it's Mis' Bennet an' a few others. You don't mind, do you? They just stepped in to have a little season of prayer."

Elviry was greatly agitated. She could not keep the tremble out of her voice. What was taking place? What had happened to thus rouse the sick one from the stupor of days? Was it a forerunner of the swiftly-approaching end?

The women had come in half-fearfully, half-joyfully. Could it be their prayer for a triumphant deathbed scene was about to come true?

Old Mrs. Lovejoy had always been considered "odd." She had not been conspicuous at the weekly prayer meeting, and her straightout, crisp and candid manner of speech had somehow made their stilted phrases sound artificial.

But now they hoped and believed that the approaching end would be spectacular. They gazed at her with varying expressions upon their faces—pity, interest, curiosity.

Suddenly the old woman began to speak again. "Was you holdin' a cottage prayer meetin' for me?" she asked bluntly. "You, Sarah Peabody, answer me! Did you think my poor old soul couldn't pass over the river without your helpin' it along? Or was you prayin' for the Lord to restore me? Well—I ain't a-goin' this time, so mebby you'd best all go 'long home, except Matildy Jeff'son, if she'll stay an' set with me whilst Elviry gets some sleep. She looks clean wore out, poor girl. An' Jane Powell, I want you should send your little boy right over with a bottle of your elderberry wine an' a glass of your strawb'ry jell. They ain't none so good in the valley as what you make. An' Esther Bean, you hunt up that patchwork pattern—that one with the star in the middle—an' bring it over tomorrow. I'm a-goin' to be up an' dressed an' piecin' a quilt in two days more. An' Mis' Bennet, you tell the committee to upholster my pew in the meetin'-house just like they're doin' the rest, for I'm goin' to set there many an' many a Sunday yet."

The old lady smiled a toothless smile, for her artificial teeth had been removed during her illness. "Now I guess you'd all best go," she said. "I'm right hungry, an' Matildy can fix me an egg an' some toast whilst Elviry lays down for a nap. All come again, an' next time bring your fancy work."

The women filed out of the sick chamber with awed faces. To say that a look of disappointment was visible in some of them may be uncharitable, but it is true. Not that kindly feeling was lacking, but they had gone there with a definite purpose, and that purpose had been defeated.

They went out of the house and down Elviry's neat, flower-bordered walk by twos and three, and as they went the fountains of their speech were loosed.

"Well, did you ever!" exclaimed Mrs. Abner Bennet, drawing a long breath. "Who'd ever thought old Lady Lovejoy would ever come to like that? An' I believe she is goin' to live, I do indeed. Well, all I can say is—'He moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform.' "

It was Esther Bean who spoke next. "I declare," she said, "it did give me the creeps to see her settin' up in bed, lookin' so natural an' talkin' in her own old way, when we'd all give her up—even Doctor Mayhew. Even Elviry. Well, I'm glad, for my part, she's alive, an' I hope she'll live a good while yet."

"Well, I agree with you, Sister Bean," said Jane Powell," an' I'm plumb tickled to death to think she wants some of my strawb'ry jell an' elderberry wine."

Jane could not resist this reference to the old lady's tribute to her culinary skill. "I declare, I believe that elderberry wine will do her a sight of good. It did old Uncle Jake Simpson, I remember."

The women walked along the winding country road, dropping off at various gates along the way. At every gate they clustered for a final talk about the strange ending of their cottage prayer meeting.

But, though they knew it not, there was one in their midst—the little widow, Lucy Upton—whose heart was singing, all unheard by others, a glad psalm of thanksgiving.

For Old Lady Lovejoy had been good to her in those dark days of her young widowhood when all the world and its set words of sympathy had not comforted her. She well remembered the loving arms that had held her close to a motherly bosom and let her weep to her heart's relief. And the little widow—scarcely past her girlhood—had prayed silently there in Elviry's rag-carpeted sitting-room that the sick woman might be restored.

Not for one moment did Lucy Upton, in her simple, trusting child heart, doubt that the wonderful happening had not been in direct answer to her prayer. But shy as a wild flower, and sensitive as the gentlest child, she could not speak of it.

At last but two of the women were left to walk down the golden rod-bordered road. One of them spoke: "Did you notice Lucy Upton's face, Esther? The way she looked? My! it seemed like a real glory was shinin' in there behind her face somewhere an' lookin' out of her eyes. I don't know when I've seen a face look as happy an' joyful as her's did. You don't suppose she's engaged, or anything, do you?"

"Like as not," replied Esther Bean. "Young widows like Lucy Upton—them kind of soft, childish ones—always seems to be awful attractive to men folks. I shouldn't wonder a bit if 'twas that new man teacher across the river in the Stiles's deestrict. I see him just a-lookin' at her in meetin' last Sunday. You never can tell when it comes to widows—especially young ones."

But Lucy Upton, upstairs in her little white room, was on her knees beside the bed, talking as with a familiar friend to Him whom she had found indeed a friend.

THE UNIVERSITIES OF SWITZERLAND.

Geneva is only one of the universities of little Switzerland. Basel, founded in 1640; Lausanne, founded as an academy in 1537, and as a university in 1890; Zurich, founded in 1832; Bern, founded in 1834; Freiburg, founded in 1889—have each secured a high educational place, though in its historic impressiveness Geneva is unique. But Geneva and her five companions are noble illustrations of the spirit and power of democracy. Their support is derived largely from the cantons in which they are located. Although the constitution of 1848 authorized the Federal government to erect and to maintain a polytechnic school and university, the university has not been established. The cantons support their universities with a willingness which is as great as obtains in the States of the American Union touching their respective State universities. The University of Zurich is maintained by a commonwealth of but 350,000 people, and within an area of less than 700 square miles. Basel, with a population of less than 100,000, supports its university. They are examples of the power of an enlightened democracy which interests itself in the highest education. This interest is not confined, either, to the cause of liberal learning. For the technical schools of Zurich are among the best of the world.—[Charles F. Thwing, in Harper's Magazine for March.

THE ROSE.

I know a rose of wondrous birth,—
Of more than mortal grace and worth,—
Whose beauty haunts me day and night;
Whose leaves are formed of deathless light;
Whose verdure holds no harrowing thorn,
And breathes of blessings yet unborn,—
Whose mission seems of boundless scope,—
The radiant, heavenly rose of Hope.

The Difference.

H. J. ALLEN, an editor of Ottawa, Kan., while electioneering for Congress among the farmers of his prosperous district, took with him the champion corn husker of the State.

"You see," said Mr. Allen to a reporter, "while I argue and plead, the corn husker pitches in and husks corn for the farmer. Thus the farmer's time is not wasted. While he stands idle, listening to me, the corn husker carries on the work of the farm for him.

"Between listening while the work goes back and listening while the work goes forward there is not much difference, yet it is one which has a remarkable effect on the impression I create. In this way it is like a certain compliment.

"Said one man to another:

"'I pleased Mrs. Brown tremendously the other night by asking her if she was herself or her daughter. Said I couldn't tell them apart.'

"The other man frowned.

"'That's strange,' he muttered. 'I worked the same scheme on the daughter, and she didn't like it worth a cent.'"

Time to Play.

"THE Civil Service," said Senator Knox, "is not what it used to be. Merit counts in it as in business now, and industry and intelligence are the qualities that bring success.

"It was not always so. I remember meeting a man on Pennsylvania avenue one morning many years ago. It was late. He was all dressed up. Plainly he was taking a day off.

"'Well,' he said, as we conversed, 'I worked mighty hard during the last three months trying to get a Civil Service appointment, but I'm going to take it easy now.'

"'Failed through lack of influence, I suppose?' said I.

"'No, no,' said he. 'I've got the appointment.'

"And he resumed his pleasant stroll."

She Didn't Get It.

GEORGE GOULD was addressing a delegation of railroad brakemen. In the course of an exceedingly interesting speech he said:

"On English railways the coaches are cut up into a number of small rooms, or compartments. The passengers are isolated in these compartments. Sometimes, indeed, they are locked in. Their only means of communication with the brakemen is an electric bell, which must never be rung save in an emergency or a crisis. This bell always stops the train, and creates immense confusion and alarm.

"'It is a poor system. It is an old-fashioned system that often causes trouble.

"An old lady, very near-sighted, got into a carriage one day in which a boy sat. She and the boy had the compartment to themselves. The train started, the old lady looked about her, spying the bell, she said to the boy:

"'Young chap, I ain't used to railroads. What's that there bell for?'

"The boy smiled maliciously.

"'That's to ring when you want something to eat,' he said. 'The road provides lunch.'

"The old lady nodded. A half-hour or so went by. Then she leaned forward and rang the bell.

"Instantly the brakes ground down upon the wheels. The locomotive whistled. The train stopped so suddenly that many people were thrown forward to the floor. There were shrieks. Windows were lowered and heads protruded. Guards ran from carriage to carriage.

"Finally a guard approached the old lady's carriage.

"'Who rang that bell?' he shouted, as he ran along.

"'I did, young man,' said the old lady.

"'Well, what do you want?' he asked.

"She thought a little while. Then she said calmly:

"'I think you might bring me some chicken sandwiches and a bottle of root beer.'"

Resourceful.

"CORTLANDT F. BISHOP of Lenox, Mass., is a noted automobilist," said a dealer in motor boats, "and he merits his fame, for there is not to be found a more resourceful man than he.

"Once, in a desolate part of Vermont, quite ten miles from a house or a human being, Mr. Bishop and I, in a touring car, came to four cross-roads.

"We had expected to find a signboard at the cross-roads. Well, the signboard was there, but it had blown down. It lay in the dust.

"To you or me this overturned signboard would have seemed useless. But not so to Mr. Bishop. He stood it up so that it pointed the way we had come, and behold, it was an accurate guide again."

The Music Stool.

PATRICK MULHOOLY'S daughter was within a few weeks of her twenty-first birthday, and her proud father decided that he would buy her a music stool, one of those that can be lowered or raised by twisting the seat around. A few hours after he had brought his purchase home his wife discovered him with his coat off and great beads of perspiration on his brow, diligently screwing the seat up and down. "Arrah, Pat," said she, "what have ye got there?" "It's a little present for Kathleen," he explained between his gasps. "Ye know she has a liking for music. Sorra a bit of good this will be to her at all, at all. Shure I've been winding the blissid thing up for the last two hours and niver a tune has it played yet."—[The Tattler.

The Bishop's Flock.

ONCE upon a time there was a Queen of Denmark who visited her Danish colony in Iceland. The good bishop there did everything in his power to entertain her and show her all of the wonders of that glacial wonderland.

Upon ascertaining that the bishop was a family man, the Queen graciously inquired how many children he had.

Now the Danish word for children sounds almost identically like the Icelandic word for sheep, and the bishop quickly answered:

"Two hundred, your Majesty."

"Two hundred children!" exclaimed the Queen in amazement. "How can you possibly maintain such a number?"

"Easily enough, your Majesty," replied the bishop with a cheerful smile. "In the summer I graze them out on the hills, and in the winter time, I kill them and eat them."

John Adams, Pedagogue.

AFTER becoming a Harvard graduate, John Adams was a school teacher in Worcester, Mass. Judging from a letter written by Mr. Adams to Judge Cranch, at Boston, he must have been a model school teacher. His views might well be emulated by modern teachers in our public and private halls of education. He wrote:

"I sometimes consider myself in my great chair at school, as some dictator over a commonwealth. In this little State I can discover all great geniuses, and all of the surprising actions and revolutions of the great world in miniature.

"I have several renowned generals, only three feet high, and several wonderful politicians in petticoats. I have others who are catching and dissecting flies with as ardent curiosity as any virtuoso of the Royal Society. Their investigations are sincere, earnest and based on ambitions of future greatness.

"Some rattle and thunder out A, B, C, etc., with as much fire and impetuosity as Alexander fought. Some of them often sit down and cry, when outspelled, as heartily as Caesar cried at Alexander's sepulcher when informed that the Macedonian hero had conquered the world before his age.

"At one table sits Mr. Insipid, foppling and fluttering, spinning his whirligig, or playing with his fingers as gaily and wittily as any Frenchified coxcomb, who brandishes his cane and rattles his snuffbox. At another table sits a polemical divine, plodding and wrangling in his mind, about 'Adam's fall, in which sinned we all,' as his little primer hath it.

"In short, my little school, like the great world, is made up of kings, politicians, divines, LL.D.'s, fops, buffoons, fiddlers, sycophants, fools, coxcombs, chimney sweepers, and every other character drawn in history or seen in the world.

"Is it not, then, the highest pleasure to preside in this little world, and bestow the proper applause upon virtuous and generous action; and to punish every vicious and contracted trick, and tear out of the tender mind everything that is mean and little, and to fire the new-born soul with a noble ardor and emulation?

"The world affords to me no greater pleasure."

College Education.

"HAS it ever occurred to you, father?" inquired young Mr. Pompadour, home on vacation from college, "how admirably everything in nature has been arranged?"

"I guess I dunno jest what you air tryin' t' get at," answered old farmer Pompadour.

"Well, father, let me try to make it plain to your comprehension. See how nicely our legs are adapted to the wearing of trousers. If we each had only one leg, for example, we should all be obliged to pin up the other trouser leg. That would make a lot of waste in material, and it would be awkward and inartistic.

"Now, I never would 'a' thought o' that."

"The same way, father, with boots or shoes. Just think of the waste of shoe leather and the waste of work by shoemakers if we only had one foot each, instead of two. But nature has supplied two feet, and that makes it all right.

"That's so, my son, to be sure."

"Then again, father, look at all of the bridges. Just think how useless all of the bridges would be if nature had not supplied streams of water to run under them.

"My son, you air a wonderful reasoner."

"And again, my dear father, think of what a waste of good metal and grand jewels it would have been, if we did not have fingers on which to wear rings."

And that night, before blowing out the candle, the old man said to his wife: "Mandy, jest think o' what we hev missed by not a-havin' college eddication."

The Scot and His Vote.

LIKE his son and heir the Duke of Buccleuch has been in the House of Commons, and it was an old farmer whose vote he was soliciting who gave him an answer which he has not yet forgotten. The farmer did not know the Duke, who was then Lord Dalkeith. "But you know the Duke?" said a captain who accompanied the candidate. "Yes, I know the Duke; he's a gran' man," said the farmer. "Then you'll surely vote for his son?" the captain said. But the farmer was still doubtful. "I'm no so sure about that," he replied, "it's no every coo that has a cauff like hersel'."—[The Tattler.

era una vieja terrible, nada menos que era loca, y que se comia a los niños vivos.

Con esta ultima observación referiré el cuento que con toda mi atención lo escuché y que no me lo he olvidado:

En una ciudad habia un hombre rico que tenia un criado que le servia fielmente: todos los dias era el primero en levantarse y el ultimo en acostarse. Cuando habia alguna obra dificil que hacia retroceder á las demás, siempre la emprendia él sin vacilar, sin quejarse nunca, siempre contento, siempre alegre.

Un año entero estuvo á su servicio sin que le pagase absolutamente salario alguna. El amo dijo para si:

Haciéndome el desentendido no me veo obligado á pagar el sueldo de este individuo; él no me pide y sigue otro año de servicio; muy bien, asi ahorro mi dinero y tendré siempre sirviente, bueno y barato.

Pasó el segundo año y fue lo mismo que el primero, el muchacho no recibió salario ninguno.

Al expirar el año tercero de su servicio, acabó el amo por pensar en ello, metió la mano an el bolsillo pero no sacó nada.

El criado se decidió finalmente á decirle:

—Caballero, os he servido fielmente durante tres años y quiero partir para mi aldea, queréis pagarme los sueldos que por mi trabajo de tres años me adeudáis?

—Si, le respondió su avaro amo—si amigo mio, tu me has servido bien, y quiero recompensarte como lo mereces, y diciendo esto sacó de su bolsillo seis pesetas y se las dió.

—Te doy dos pesetas por cada año, esto constituye una gran cantidad además de ser un salario mucho mayor del que te hubieran pagado otros amos. El pobre muchacho que conocia la moneda casi nada, tomó su capital, y se echó por esos caminos radiante de alegria, mientras para si se decia:

—He aqui que ahora tengo mis faltriqueras llenas, por que debo apesadumbrarme en adelante?

Emprendió su camino por montes y collados, cantando, con todo el gozo en su corazón. Al pasar cerca de un matorral, se encontró con un hombrecillo que le dijo.

—A donde vas, hermano bufón? No te molestan mucho los pesares que digamos, segun lo que veo.

—Por que debo estar triste?—contestó el mancebo; soy rico, tengo un salaria de tres años que suena en mi bolsillo.

—Cuanto es el tesoro que cargas en ellos?—le preguntó el hombrecillo.

—Seis pesetas en buena moneda contante y sonante.

—Escucha—le dijo el enano—yo soy un pobre hombre sumido en la miseria; dame tus seis pesetas; yo no puedo trabajar ya, pero tu eres joven y ganarás facilmente tu pan.

El joven tenia buen corazón; tuvo lástima del enanito, y le dió su capital diciéndole:

—Helo aqui por el amor de Dios: yo sabré muy bien prescindir de ellos. Entonces replicóle el enano.

—Tienes buen corazón, y te voy á dar mi agradecimiento á la vista; forma tres deseos, uno por cada dos pesetas que me has dado, y inmediatamente serán atendidos.

—Ah! ah!—dijo el mancebo—tambien andas tu metido en esos negocios de magia? Vaya, pues, ya que es asi, deseo primeramente una cerbatana que no yerre jamás el tiro, despues un violin que obligue á bailar á cuantos lo oigan, y, finalmente, deseo que al dirigir una petición á alguien, no pueda rehusármela.

—Vas á tener todo esto—dijo el enano.

I entreabrió el matorral; el violin y la cerbatana estaban alli mismo como si los hubiesen depositado en aquel punto anticipadamente.

Diólos al joven diciéndole:

—Cuando pidieres algo nadie podrá negártelo.

—Que puedo desear ahora?—se dijo el joven; y emprendió alegremente su camino.

Poco trecho habia andado, cuando encontró un judio, con su larga barba de macho cabrio que estaba inmóvil escuchando el canto de un pájaro posado en la cima de la copa de un árbol.

—Maravilla de Dios!—exclamaba—que un animal tan pequeñito tenga una voz tan potente. Mucho me gustaria cogerlo. Pero, quién se encargaria de ponerle el cascabel?

—Si no necesitas más que esto—dijo el mancebo—muy pronto estará el pájaro aqui en tus manos.

I tan certero le dirigió el tiro que el pobre animal cayó entre los abrojos que habia al pie del árbol.

—Ves, cobarde—dijo el muchacho al judio—recoje tu pájaro.

El judio estaba gozosisimo, y se puso á gatas para mejor entrar en el matorral.

Luego que estuvo en medio, nuestra buen joven, para diverterse un rato á costa del judio, cogió su violin y se puso á tocar.

Al mismo instante pusose en pie el judio y comenzó á bailar como un azogado, y cuanto mas tocaba el violin, mas desesperado era el bailoteo. Pero las espinas desgarraban las piernas del judio, le almohazaban la barba, y le ensangrentaban el cuerpo.

—Ah!—gritaba—que quiere de mi esa musica? Dejad allá vuestro violin que yo no quiero bailar.

Pero el muchacho continuaba pensando:

—Tu has desollado á muchas personas: que las espinas te lo paguen.

El judio saltaba de cada vez mas alto, y los girones de su traje quedaban colgados en el matorral.

—Desdichado de mi—gritaba. Te daré todo lo que quieras, muchachito, si cesas de tochar tu violin, tendrás una bolsa llena de oro.

I el muchacho le dijo entonces.

—Ya que eres tan generoso, voy á cesar la musica; pero no puedo dejar de felicitarte, por lo muy bien que bailas.

Diciendo esto, cogió la bolsa y continuó su camino.

El judio le vió partir, y cuando le hubo perdido de vista, se puso á gritar con todas sus fuerzas:

—Miserable musico! violin de taberna! espera que te alcance; te haré correr tanto que echarás á perder las suelas de los zapatos. Malvado canalla, métete cuatro reales en la boca si quieres valer un peso.

I otras injurias que su imaginación de judio le distaba.

Cuando se hubo aliviado un poco y desahogo de este modo su corazón, corrio á la ciudad y con ahogados sollozos le dijo al juez:

—Señor, á vos acudo. Mirad como se me ha despojado y maltratado en la carretera publica. Las piedras del camino habrian tenido lástima de mi: mis vestidos destrozados, mi cuerpo desollado, mi pobre dinero robado con mi bolsa tan buenos doblones! mas hermosos los unos que los otros! Por el amor de Dios mandad perseguir al ladrón y hacedlo encarcelar.

—Es por ventura unsoldado, preguntó el juez—quién te ha maltratado tanto á sablazos?

—No tenia espada—dijo el judio—sino solamente una cerbatana en el hombro y un violin en el cuello. Fácil es reconocer al malvado.

El juez envió á sus agentes en persecución del reo; el bravo muchacho habia ganduleado por el camino, por lo cual no tardaron en darle alcance, y le encontraron encima la bolsa con el dinero.

Cuando compareció delante del tribunal, dijo:

—Yo no he tocado al judio, yo no lo he tomado su dinero, él me lo ha dado para hacer callar mi violin, porque mi musica le molestaba.

—Válgame Dios—gritó el judio—coge las mentiras al vuelo como las moscas. El juez no quiso dar crédito á la disculpa del muchacho, y dijo:

—He aqui una mala defensa; los judios no dan su dinero por tan poca cosa—I condenó al joven á la horca como ladrón en camino publico.

Cuando le llevaron al patibulo, el judio le gritó todavia:

—Canalla musico perruno hete aqui recompensado segun tus méritos.

El mancebo subió tranquilamente la escalera con el verdugo; pero al llegar al ultimo escalón, se volvió hacia atrás, y dijo al juez:

—Concededme todavia una petición antes de morir.

—Te la concedo—dijo el juez—á no ser que me pidas la vida.

—No pido la vida—respondió el joven—dejadme solamente, por la ultima vez tocar una pieza en mi violin.

El judio lanzó un grito de angustia:

—Por el amor de Dios, no se lo permitais! no se lo permitais!

Pero el juez dijo:

—Por que no se la daria yo esta ultima alegria? Todo se acabó para él, y no ha de volver mas á tocar . . .

Por otra parte, no podia rehusarlo, á causa del don que tenia el mancebo de hacerse otorgar todas sus peticiones.

El judio gritaba:

—Ah! Dios mio! atadme, atadme fuerte.

El bueno del muchacho tomó su violin, y al primer golpe de arco todo el mundo se puso á moverse y á perder el equilibrio; el juez, el verdugo y sus ayudantes; la cuerda cayó de las manos del que queria atar el judio.

Al segunda golpe del arco todos levantaron las piernas, y el mismo verdugo dejó al paciente para ponerse á bailar.

Al tercer golpe, todos comenzaron á danzar, el juez y el judio delante de todos, saltando más alto que los demas.

Finalmente, la danza fue general, y arrastró á todos los expectadores, gruesos y flacos, jóvenes y viejos, hasta los perros que levantaban sus patas para bailar tambien.

Cuanto mas tocaba el violin, mas brincaban los danzantes; los cabezas pegaban unas contra otras, y la multitud comenzaba á gemir lastimosamente.

Jadeante el juez, gritaba:

Yo te indulto: pero cesa tu musica.

Satisfecho el muchacho con la oferta, colgó su violin al cuello y bajó la escalera.

Acercóse al judio que estaba por los suelos y procuraba recobrar el aliento—

—Cobarde! judio canalla!—le dijo confiesa como tienes tu oro, ó vuelvo á tocar mi violin.

—Lo he robado! lo he robado! exlamó el judio y tu te lo habias ganada bien. Entonces el juez conociendo la infamia del judio, en el mismo momento lo hizo subir la patibulo que habia hecho preparar para el muchacho y lo hizo ahorcar por doble crimen, falsa acusación y por ladrón confeso."

Ea niños—nos dijo—al terminar el cuento la señora Mica—les ha gustado, no es verdad?

—Oh! si, si, mucho, muchisimo le deciamos, y no es verdad que mañana nos contará otro tan bonito come este?

—Si, pero si se conducen bonitamente, y ahora á la cama.

Asi nos enviaba contentos y pensando siempre en que nunca la gente perversa y sobre todo aquella que á mansalva estafan y roban á indefensas personas, valiéndose de la astucia y cubiertas bajo el velo de la hipocresia aparecen como ser ellos los perjudicados y á la gente y sociedad hácenles tragar el anzuelo de una mentida honradez por que no saben el miserable pasado que lleban incognito, pero que nunca, jamás, quedan sin el castigo merecido y cuando menos lo piensan caen y son conocidos y tratados como lo merecen, además de que, la conciencia es á la vez, testigo, fiscal y juez.

DEVELOPMENT.

One morn a bud beside my window came,
And leaned beneath the frame;
The soft air, sunshine, and nocturnal dew
Nourished it, and it grew.

And so the bud became a half-blown rose (Sweeter ne'er grew, nor grows);
And blushed and laid its cheek against the pane
Till kissed by summer's rain.

And now it blooms (the kiss has done its part,
Laid open the gold heart,)
And in morn's sunshine and the dew of even Sends fragrance up to heaven.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

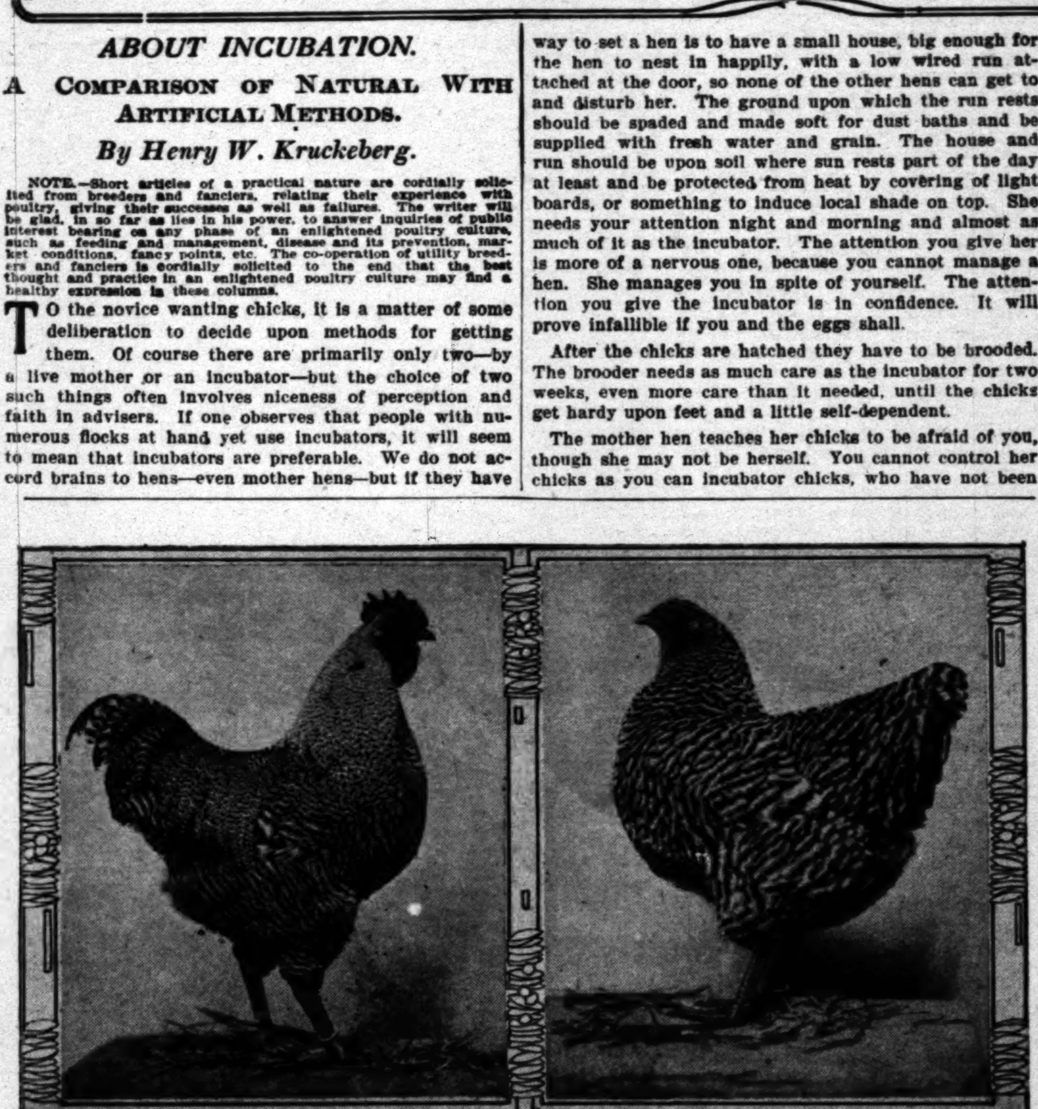
ABOUT INCUBATION.

A COMPARISON OF NATURAL WITH ARTIFICIAL METHODS.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experience with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

TO the novice wanting chicks, it is a matter of some deliberation to decide upon methods for getting them. Of course there are primarily only two—by a live mother or an incubator—but the choice of two such things often involves niceness of perception and faith in advisers. If one observes that people with numerous flocks at hand yet use incubators, it will seem to mean that incubators are preferable. We do not accord brains to hens—even mother hens—but if they have no brains they have something equivalent with which to operate. In obeying instinct, whatever it may be, they command the respect of brainy people. The architect of the incubator has imitated the doings of the mother hen to the best of his ability, and worded an important formula to go with his incubator. If he could furnish brains and a patient application of his formula, the mother hen would be outdone; but he can't do it. Something equivalent to brains goes with the getting of chicks—a nice mother hen, or an intelligent soul with an incubator. The question will open, which shall it be? Generally or often the intelligent soul will estimate his caliber low and choose the hen, while the idiot will readily buy an incubator and be seen to fail. Alas! for human estimates of self!



FIRST PRIZE PULLET AND SECON D PRIZE COCKEREL, LOS ANGELES POULTRY SHOW, 1906, OWNED AND BRED BY D. T. WIELAND.

An ideal mother hen in ideal environments makes for success with the least trouble, to a man of uncertain convictions wanting a small home flock. But how will the novice get her after getting environment? If he goes to the keeper of a large flock to buy a mother hen, of course the fellow will sell him a mother, but probably it will not be a tried, good mother, because most breeders keep the nice mothers from year to year for themselves. There is a nice stimulus even to a big incubator poultry farm, in seeing the few ideal mothers lead wee ones. One never knows when he tries a pullet for mothering that she will cater to his expectations. The old breeder expects she will. About once in fifty times the novice will get a good mother hen in buying one. The chance is an exhilarating one, but not all poultry breeders sport with chances. If one has patience to apply he gets more sport out of running the minding incubator. The dumb thing is how obedient to attention! Without brains, ambition or instinct it is how responsive to its runner! It gets your brains, ambition and intuition to itself, becomes a living thing, and is yourself! If one could always estimate himself in application, the incubator would be a sure thing. One thinks he matches the majesty of a hen mother with whatever offering of self he gives his incubator, and the machine is a success or falls short according to the quality of his estimate.

To get a good incubator with its formula for running, be made to understand its mechanism from whom you buy, feel the inclination to work out the formula fully, with the best of your intelligence, and you are ahead of the mother hen probably. She can hatch out only fifteen at most, and you can hatch any number of fertile eggs in her time limit. With three weeks' attention to the incubator one can have his desired number for the year hatched.

Mother hens require almost as much attention as an incubator if confined, and such confinement as an experienced breeder gives is really freedom to her. A good way to set a hen is to have a small house, big enough for the hen to nest in happily, with a low wired run attached at the door, so none of the other hens can get to and disturb her. The ground upon which the run rests should be spaded and made soft for dust baths and be supplied with fresh water and grain. The house and run should be upon soil where sun rests part of the day at least and be protected from heat by covering of light boards, or something to induce local shade on top. She needs your attention night and morning and almost as much of it as the incubator. The attention you give her is more of a nervous one, because you cannot manage a hen. She manages you in spite of yourself. The attention you give the incubator is in confidence. It will prove infallible if you and the eggs shall.

After the chicks are hatched they have to be brooded. The brooder needs as much care as the incubator for two weeks, even more care than it needed, until the chicks get hardy upon feet and a little self-dependent.

The mother hen teaches her chicks to be afraid of you, though she may not be herself. You cannot control her chicks as you can incubator chicks, who have not been taught fear. To bring up chicks with no fear is one of the early starts of health of hens. Let nothing frighten them. Fear is a negative factor in all life, and reduces position if complicated, just as the negative factor does in algebra. We are told by some of our philosophic friends that mother love is selfish, that human mother love reduces both mother and child. I fear philosophy backs the statement in many instances and expects human mothers should qualify their love with modern maternal genius. Possibly modern maternal genius for the hen is the incubator. Probably it is. Consider the incubator chicks in their first run on soft soil in soft slant rays of sun. Instinct teaches them to hunt food and warmth. The brooder supplies the warmth, and if you supply the food, you can eliminate fear and feed only things which best respond to instinct, and promote health. Consider the mothered chicks—or try to do so. They are with fear and eat only what the hen decides they may have of what you provide. They will not thrive like incubator chicks unless ideality of feather and home abide. The achievements of an ideal mother hen in ideal environment are unmatched. Ideal nature is majesty! But vile nature does exist, and the ordinary prevails.

Considering our sorry estimates of self and that majestic nature is so rare, one has to conclude that it is nearer success to try an incubator for economy and profit.

Mating for Exhibit Barred Plymouth Rocks.

The proper mating of Barred Rocks in order to produce a progeny that shall meet the requirements of the standard of perfection and prove of interest in the showroom, is a delicate matter, requiring a thorough knowledge of the breed and a fixed ideal of the exhibition specimen. Unlike other breeds of a single color of plumage, your parti-colored varieties tax the skill of the breeder to the utmost, and in their mating and management prove interesting to a marked degree. The evolution of so popular a variety as the Barred Rocks has been a matter covering over a quarter of a century of careful breeding and experimenting by many of the foremost breeders in this country. It has lead to certain well-defined lines and rules which must be observed if the breed is to maintain its present high status both on ground of beauty as well as utility. In speaking of ways and means which are reasonably certain to produce fine specimens, D. T. Wieland, who has been working with the Barred Rocks for nearly fifteen years, is a firm advocate of the double-mating system, i. e., one to produce exhibition males and one to produce exhibition females. In the interest of an enlightened poultry fancy Mr. Wieland has kindly furnished The Times poultry editor with the following data, detailing the system he practices in breeding superior birds answering Ghosts of Lake Tahoe.

STRANGE APPARITIONS SEEN BY A PARTY OF CAMPERS.

By a Special Contributor.

"HAVE I ever told you of my experience with ghosts while fishing at Lake Tahoe in California some years ago?" inquired a story-telling tourist of a party of friends, of which I chanced to be a member, assembled one evening in the Fifth Avenue Hotel of New York City.

Receiving a negative reply, he proceeded with the following story:

"Well, gentlemen, I had always prided myself as being possessed of more common sense, as I self-flatteringly termed it, than were those good, old, superstitious forefathers of ours who inhabited colonial Salem in its spooky days. I had always been inclined to laugh at them as being very foolish indeed. And probably they were; but when I laugh at them now, I must also include myself. And why? Because for about fifteen minutes of the evening with which this story deals, to be candid, I must admit that I found myself as completely a victim of ghost folly as were ever those ancestors of ours in their day. I was truly frightened, and so were all of our party.

"But I must begin my story at the beginning. I believe it is three years since. A party of us, numbering, I think, nine married and unmarried couples, had gone out from San Francisco to Lake Tahoe to spend a week fishing and having a good time generally. And, by the way, that's a good place for such a purpose. Two days of our outing had passed when the night of our experience came. It was a delightful evening—starlit, but no moon. A gentle breeze stirred the leaves of the large trees under which our two tents were pitched, and our camp fire glowed brightly. Two boatloads of our party were out upon the lake, and the rest of us lounged about in hammocks or sat on camp stools around the fire. I was among the latter.

"Suddenly our attention was attracted by a woman's screaming. We sprang to our feet and listened. The screaming ceased only for a second, and then it began again. It sounded far away, and now, instead of only one voice, there were several. We soon learned that the noise came from the boats out on the lake. Presently we could hear the splashing of water, and by the aid of the faint light from the stars we discovered that the two boats were headed toward us and that the rowers were doing their utmost at the oars. The screaming continued with only short intermissions, and then one of the ladies of our own party gave a cry and pointed toward the center of the lake. Following with our eyes the direction designated by her finger, we saw four ghostly forms seemingly playing about on the surface of the lake. They were of a real light yellow color—in fact, almost white, and of just about the stature of a man.

"We hurried to the water's edge and stood staring in wonder. The forms would glide and dance about over the water seemingly as lightly as air, and meantime sway continuously from side to side as though fanned by the gentle breeze. Our first impression was that they were innocently engaged in some silent revelry or game which concerned only themselves, but we soon perceived that we were mistaken; that they, whatever they were, gradually moved toward us. That such was the case became even more evident as the two boats drew near the shore and landed at our feet. The four ghost-like forms were no more than a hundred yards behind them and were still gliding steadily toward us. Now and then they would simultaneously disappear for a moment, or, rather, seemingly flatten themselves upon the surface of the lake, and then loom up again to their full stature.

"As soon as the boats had landed, the women, badly frightened, hurried to their tent, which stood back a short distance from the water, leaving the men of our party to gaze, probably with almost equal fright, upon the oncoming ghosts. I truly believe that, had any one of us yielded to his inward inclination, he would have run, and that all would have followed him. Be that as it may, however, we stood our ground—save to move back a few feet farther from the edge of the water. When the forms had come within forty yards of us, one of our party showed the courage to draw a pistol from his pocket and empty it in their direction; but they, unwaveringly, moved on. Looking closely, we now discovered that they were transparent; that the slightly waving surface of the lake could be seen through them. As the forms drew still nearer, by looking still more closely, the bottom part of each seemed to assume a fiery appearance, while the upper portion of the body closely resembled light blue smoke. Suddenly one of the forms disappeared; another flickered for a second, and likewise vanished. The remaining two shed a faint light upon the water, and by this light a couple of dark rings floating on the surface became visible.

"Gentlemen, don't get impatient. There is only a little more to tell. When the forms reached the shore near us, we discovered that they were only forms of floating re-ignited and burning oil. The dark rings we saw were wooden barrel hoops weighted down with short leaded strings so as to lie half-buried in the water. Kerosene had been poured inside this half-sunken rings and ignited, and this, blazing up, had created our ghosts; while the gentle breeze had helped to give them their spectral appearance and caused them to drift toward us. The next day we learned that a party of boys, camped on the other side of the lake, were responsible for the trick."

THE MARRIAGE FLIGHT.

"There seems to be no doubt," says the sociologist, Lester F. Ward, "that the wedding tour is a survival of the marriage flight following wife capture, made to escape the fury of the wife's relatives." Marriage being no longer accompanied by sandbagging, why simulate the fright of the fugitives or the fury of the relatives? In what respect is the so-called "honeymoon" following marriage any saner than the "horning" and "belling" and "shivering" and other tokens of a vanished "fury" with which a young couple are made to feel that they may have committed a mistake in becoming united in the holy bonds of matrimony?

That so many young people come out of the ordeal of a wedding tour still fond of each other and even bravely asserting that they have had a splendid time is evidence rather of the strength of their love than of the wisdom or charm of the convention to which they conformed. It is a tour without any object, taken under peculiarly exacting conditions. Both bride and groom are apt to be fatigued by their preparations for marriage. They are making a radical alteration in their way of life. They are exchanging the standpoint of the individual for that of the family. The first weeks of married life at best are something of a test. To spend them in going from hotel to hotel, or even in remaining at some one resort, is to undertake the test under the most unfavorable conditions.—[New York Mail.

STREET PROFANITY.

St. Louis is trying to stop profanity on the streets by drastic measures. The police have received orders from their chief to arrest every person heard using bad language. The outcome will be watched with interest and with slight hopefulness, for the same thing has been tried in other cities with poor success. A beginning seems to have been made at St. Louis in fining a member of the police force $90 for offending. This, on the principle that reform, like charity, begins at home, is a good start. It may urge the police officers to pursue the reform strenuously. Street swearing is a nuisance which ought to be curbed, and it is common in every city. If it can be stopped in St. Louis, then the attention of other cities must be attracted to the methods used there, and they must be given a wider trial. The swearing nuisance afflicts the ears of every woman shopper and of every other person whose sensibilities are at all delicate. Boston is no exception to the rule in this matter.—[Boston Advertiser.

WINDMILLS AS NEWSPAPERS.

In Holland, births, marriages and deaths instead of being recorded in newspapers, are indicated by windmills. When a miller gets married he stops his mill with the arms of the wheel in a slanting position and with the sails unfurled. His friends and guests frequently do likewise with their mills, in token of the ceremony. To indicate a birth the wheel is stopped with the arms in a slanting position, but at a more acute angle than for a marriage, and with the two upper sails unfurled. Should a miller die the sails of his mill are all furled, and the wheel is turned round until the arms form an upright cross, in which position they are left until after the funeral has taken place.—[London Tit-Bits.

THE CURSE OF SHIFTLESSNESS.

Whether shiftlessness is a vice that is incurable or a habit that can be overcome it is, anyhow, a condition that perplexes and irritates relieving officials. Shiftlessness is paying one's last 50 cents for a circus ticket without learning where tomorrow's breakfast is coming from. It is a refusal to repair the leak in the roof when the sun shines. It is killing the goose that lays the golden eggs. It takes no thought of the morrow. It never lays up anything for a rainy day. It always ignores opportunities. It prefers to rely on neighborhood bounty to hustling for itself. It won't work except under the pressure of necessity. It never gets ahead.—[Hartford (Conn.) Times.

BY SPECIAL FAVOR.

He was a young and smart-looking Scots clergyman, and was to preach a "trial" sermon in a strange church. Fearing that his hair might be disarranged or that he might have a smudge on his face, he quietly and significantly said to the beadle, there being no mirror in the vestry: "John, could you get me a glass?" John disappeared, and after a few minutes returned with something under his coat which, to the astonishment of the divine, he produced in the form of a bottle with a gill of whisky in it, saying: "Ye munna let on aboot it, meenister, for I got it as a special favor; and I wadna hae got it ava if I hadna told them it was for you."—[Tatler.

A sweet singer in Elk county, Kan., lifts up his voice in this wise: "The farmer sows his crop, his good wife sews his clothes, the farmer darns the winds and his good wife darns his hose. Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, AGRICULTURAL EDITOR.

FIELD NOTES.

Criticising at Random.

ONE agricultural journal published some 2000 miles from Los Angeles, finds fault with the Department of Agriculture for introducing scientific terms into the text of some of the Farmers' Bulletins. An "innocent public," especially every farmer who has the "ill fortune to have his name on file for all the bulletins," should be provided with anesthetics, according to this journal, to neutralize the effect of the scientific language used in some of the governmental publications. This same paper boasted recently that it printed more pages of information upon farm topics annually than the Department of Agriculture. There may be two extremes, namely, voluminous publication of commonplace matter, or ultrascientific lore, difficult to understand and valueless to the farmer. But I have never heard more extensive inquiry for agricultural bulletins than is now prevalent, and the farmers should determine whether the criticism of this paper is just, lest the Agricultural Department be persuaded to discontinue issuing scientific bulletins.

Science has just given the people of the United States a process of making mushroom spawn that has revolutionized the business of growing this great food. It has cut off the importation of hundreds of thousands of pounds of spawn from Europe, and kept money at home that formerly went out to foreign countries for mushroom "seed." The American who is principally responsible for this revolution is the author of a pamphlet, such as is complained of, the title of which is "The Principles of Mushroom Growing." It has many scientific terms and much plain English. For example, the author states that beans are a good media, or substratum for the production of sporophores of coprinus atramentarius, the process being accelerated by a solution of potassium lactophosphate at 25 degrees C. But the Boletus miniato-violaceus will produce no sporophores upon the bean media. Now these terms are the only ones that would be worth a pinch in the laboratory of hundreds of mushroom breeders throughout the country, yet such verbiage forms only a small portion of this Bulletin (No. 85) which is proving so valuable to the mushroom growers of Southern California. What has this bulletin other than scientific terms? Over 50 of the 60 pages contain the most simple, sensible, understandable text upon mushroom growing extant. Market conditions, germination studies, nutrition, temperature, moisture, preparation of compost, installation of mushroom beds, cave facilities for mushroom growing in the United States, a chapter showing the merits of California points for growing mushrooms, a treatise on home-made spawn—all these subjects are treated in the plainest terms so every one may have the benefit of the latest information upon this great industry. What harm in devoting a few pages to scientific terms when the main portion of the pamphlet is invaluable to the practical man? And this pamphlet is a sample of many that have come under the ban of the so-called practical farm journals. Trust the Department of Agriculture and you will not miss the best things for the farmer that can be found.

Nine Million Plows at Work.

IT'S plowing time, says an interesting and authoritative article in Farming for March. Two hundred million acres of land will be plowed this year in the United States, and about 9,000,000 plows are on the farms to do the work. The capital invested in plows alone represents $80,000,000. Such a multitude of types of plows and plowers can be found on this old continent that we can but name a few. In the great Southwest the Mohave with his three or four squaws starts for the planting ground. Each woman carries her digging stick, the most primitive of all plows, and the man stands guard all day while the "original farmers" of this country dig the land and plant their gourd seeds. In Canada but for the interference of the government we might see the Doukhobor women drawing the plow in exactly the same way that they have done for centuries. In New England the oxen are being yoked, and in the Middle West the four-horse teams are ready. In the South the negro sits on his plow stilt to watch the train go by.

In other parts of the country we find traction engines at work, plowing forty or more acres a day and requiring but two or three men to do it.

The plow stands for civilization, and all civilized nations plow. No savage ever thought of plowing as we understand it because it involves forethought and a preparation for the future.

Intervening Interests.

THE farm and the orchard produce the bulk of the tonnage handled by the railroads. The former are the producers and the latter the distributor. Their interests, in a measure are identical. The partnership of the two is so closely identified, one with the other, that the producer feels he should have some say as to the way his interests are protected by the distributor. Third parties have no right to step in and claim a portion of the revenue resulting from the labor and capital invested by the two parties interested. When such third, or outside party or companies do this, and secure for themselves a net revenue by such action, either the distributor or the producer or both are injured financially to an amount equal to the net revenue of such third companies.

Indirectly the producer is interested in the passenger, directly in the freight traffic. A few figures regarding the sleeping-car trust might make interesting reading in this connection. In the code of car-service rules of the "American Railway Association" the following rule regarding rates for the use of passenger equipment, that shall be in force, is found: "The rate for coaches, dining cars, chair cars, parlor cars, combined passenger cars and postal cars shall be 3 cents a mile of actual distance. These rates are to apply when the owners of the cars participate in the business." This rate applies when the equipment of one road passes over that of a connecting line. Is this standard unit of mileage charge for rental of passenger equipment the rental paid to the sleeping-car trust by the railroads for the use of their cars? It is safe to assume so.

According to "Poor's Manual of Railroads" for 1905 this trust company reports the following figures as the business done by them during the year ending July 31, 1904. Miles run, 408,234,382. This, at 3 cents a mile, gives that company a mileage revenue for that year of $12,247,031. This amount collected from the railroads for the use of the cars. They report passengers, 13,312,668. Beyond doubt most of them paid more or less into the trust's treasury. During the year this company paid in dividends $5,919,976, and then there was a surplus left for the year of $3,741,625. This, with a former surplus on hand of $14,275,750 enabled the company to commence the new year with $18,017,375 in cash. The total revenue for the year was $24,788,730, or about equal to the freight charges on 75,000 carloads of oranges from California to the East. Coming down to details a little more the following is shown: Estimating the cost of a sleeping car and equipment at $15,000, the interest on this amount for one month at 6 per cent. per annum is $75. Allowing the same per cent. for the deterioration of the car gives us another $75, or $150 for both. The car can make the run between Los Angeles and Chicago in four days, making four trips in a month which would be sixteen days on the road and fourteen days at the terminals. Average miles moved in one month, 9600. Mileage charges at 3 cents per mile, $288. Twelve sections in each car gives 24 berths. If two-thirds of them are occupied each trip that would make 64 sold each month at $14 each. The proceeds from the sale of berths each month on this car are $896. This, with the mileage charges, is $1184. Deducting interest on the cost of the car, depreciation of same salary of the porter, $40 per month, salary of sleeping-car conductor of train per car $20, makes a total of $210. This leaves $974 to pay the laundry bills and for cleaning the car four times each month.

With the tourist sleeping car, allowing the same amount for the cost of the car, for depreciation, for salaries of porter and conductor, the same mileage, the same number of berths and with two-thirds of them occupied each trip the following is shown: Revenue received from mileage, $288; sixty-four berths at $7 each, $488—a total of $736 less $210 for expenses. This leaves $526 as the earnings of one car in one month. In this statement the fact that many of the tourist sleeping cars have sixteen sections or thirty-two berths, is not taken into consideration.

If the railroads had furnished these cars to their patrons and charged for their use the cost of operating them, the producer and the distributor would have saved the amount this third or outside party paid in dividends, or $5,919,976, and the surplus claimed at the end of the year amounting to $3,741,625—a total of $9,661,601. This amount would just about pay the freight charges on the 30,000 carloads of citrus fruits shipped from California last season. This barnacle, while but indirectly affecting the farm and orchard producer, would directly affect him if this immense sum had gone into the treasury of the railroads. It would have increased the net earnings just that much, and the greater the net earnings of the roads, in the same proportion they can afford to reduce both the passenger and freight rates they charge their patrons. A fractional part of this sum, if it had been saved, might have been placed to the credit of our transcontinental roads and have been a small lever toward inducing them to lower their freight rates. How much better it would have been, had the distinguishing party of this combination given the producers the advantage of these earnings, taking into consideration how closely their mutual interests are allied. It should not have been given to an outside concern. The less the cost between the producer and the consumer the greater the consumption. This means more revenue for the distributor. As it is, neither party receives any revenue from it so far as is known by the public. Do the outside companies in connection with the railroads, interested in the movement of freight work for the advantage of the producers, or do they increase the cost of the commodity in taking it from the producer to the consumer?

Tanglefoot Successful.

H. K. SMITH of Riverside county was one of the first to experiment with preparations for keeping the ants from climbing the orchard trees to interfere with the work of parasites. The results of his work are given in a letter written to me a few days ago, as follows:

"Last June you kindly sent me a can of Tree Tanglefoot with which I wanted to experiment in applying the same to the trunks of fruit trees to prevent the ubiquitous ant from going up the scale-infected trees to protect their food supply, which the exudation of the [illegible] sects create, apparently with the help and [illegible] of the ants. This food supply which the [illegible] is called honey dew, on account of its [illegible] the fact that the bees gather it for honey. These into alcohol, to be denaturized so that used in beverages but could only be em as fuel for engines, for light, or for paints and similar purposes. If the enacted by Congress which repeals the on alcohol when denaturized, this start up. There is everything in fa mighty little that can be said against it. immense new market for potatoes at the alcohol would be so cheap for the above uses as to be a tremendous benefit to the public. You can do much to make possible this new industry by writing your Congressman and Senators at Washington to favor this bill. It aims to permit in this country the same policy toward potato alcohol that has long been of great value to the farmers and people of Germany, as our readers know who remember our exhaustive article three years ago on German agriculture.—[Orange Judd Farmer.

Seed Improvement.

TO scientific methods adopted in seed growing is to be attributed much of the improvement accomplished in many economic plants, the most careful selection being made from year to year of the mother plants for the next crop. This is true not only of truck and field crops, but also of flowers.

It is in California that most of the flower seeds are produced, including the bulk of the petunias, verbenas, nasturtiums and sweet peas.

In most European countries there are seed control stations, so called, at which seeds are tested by simple yet interesting methods, the work of sprouting them being done mainly by young girls. There are forty such stations in Germany, where they have created such a sentiment in favor of pure seeds, as opposed to the adulterated stuff, containing more or less weed seeds, commonly sold, that the best dealers are glad to submit samples of their merchandise for proof of quality, guarantees of which are returned by the stations after examination and trial.

The Department of Agriculture is anxious to establish a similar system of seed control in this country, if Congress can be persuaded to enact the requisite legislation.—[American Cultivator.

Pruning Tomatoes.

IN a late Massachusetts bulletin is given a summary of the results secured at the different experiment stations in this country with tomatoes as regards soils and fertilizers, transplanting, pollination, time required to grow crop, yield per square foot, pruning, etc., with the details of experiments by author on pruning tomatoes. Most of these experiments were conducted in greenhouses.

In one experiment, when a few of the lower leaves were removed from plants trained to a single stem, there was a gain of 32 per cent. in stem growth and 18 per cent. increase in the size of the fruits over unpruned plants. In three other experiments extending over one, two and three months, respectively, with plants trained to two stems, the removal of the lower half dozen or more leaves gradually decreases with time.

When the leaders were not cut back the smallest number of fruits per plant was obtained on the plants trained to a single stem. These fruits were of good size and the plants thus trained produced the earliest fruit of all the different methods of training. The yield also on equal amounts of trellis space was the greatest by this system of training.

The greatest average weight of individual fruit, as well as the greatest weight per plant, however, was given by the three-stem system where the leader was headed in, whereas in the average number of fruit per plant this system is lowest. There was only one experiment in which heading in was practiced. In general, however, these experiments show that if we wish to obtain large fruit with a tolerably good number per plant the single leader constitutes one of the best systems, with the two, three and 4-shoot systems following in tolerably uniform succession. No doubt the largest fruit and the greatest acceleration in maturity can be obtained by heading in the leader.—[California Cultivator.

Beneficent Bacteria.

I HAD a most successful experience with nitrogen-collecting bacteria last summer, the results of which have proved their usefulness to me for peas and beans. We planted one pint of peas (Burpee's Improved Senator) April 25, after duly inoculating them with nitrogen-collecting bacteria. From June 30 to July 15 we harvested twelve and a half pecks of green pods. No trellis was used. The plants were stronger, they blossomed two weeks earlier, they withstood the dry weather better and then matured more peas than plants not inoculated. On beans the chief advantage of inoculation was earliness —a difference of about ten days. When beans were ready to pick on the inoculated row they were just beginning to set on the other. On rich soil the uninoculated seed later matured almost as large a crop, says March Country Life in America.

Greenhouse Seedlings in a Living-Room.

"I HAVE successfully grown greenhouse plants from seed in common living-rooms," says a writer in the March Garden Magazine. "Plants procured in this way are doubly valuable to me because of having raised them myself through every stage of their growth. I do not hesitate to grow the most delicate sorts during the months of June and July, but the large-seeded sorts such as carnations, chrysanthemums, cyclamen, etc., may be sown earlier, as there is not so much danger of the young seedlings 'damping off' during cold, cloudy weather, and they require no more careful treatment than a garden annual. Gloxinias are about three, and cyclamen four weeks in making their appearance above ground, while cineraria will germinate in three days. I find that it is sometimes necessary to bore through the shell of Swainsona seed near the point where the sprout starts, with the point of a small knife, and then soak them in water until the sprout starts, before sowing them in the soil."

Spray or Die.

MOST people seem to have the cheerful notion that a tree once planted will go on producing its foliage, bloom and fruit without further attention. Perhaps it was so once, but the San José scale has changed all that. Prior to the advent of this insect, spraying was merely practiced in a very limited way by a few expert gardeners and commercial orchardists, in order to combat rust, smut and some insect pests, notably the scab and the codlin moth of the apple. But not until the Giver of all Good Things sent along the San José scale did the public awake to the fact that it was a case of spray or die. And now all over the country people are becoming acquainted with their trees and learning something of their habits and needs, thanks to a pesky little plant louse hiding under a shell-like tent, almost too small to be seen by the naked eye—so small that millions of them may be on a tree before being discovered, says Country Life in America.

Big Rocks Beautiful.

THE beauty of an abandoned farm in the hill country of New England is that it has plenty of big rocks bulging through the soil beneath the trees, so that if you are inclined to fill your wood lot with lovely wild flowers, the natural conditions are usually so perfect as to drive a member of the wild gardening fraternity to distraction. No two pockets of soil between the rocks are the same shape or size. In each one you can locate a colony of woodsy things after your own heart. To fill the pockets between the stones, you do not need to know botany. Bring in the plants you like from your own woods, and mass them here. Nature occasionally presents large continuous sheets of a single kind of wild flower, and you have a right to show nature at her best just as the portrait painter has a right to depict a human countenance at its best.—[March Country Life in America.

Government Whitewash.

SOME years ago the recipe for making whitewash, as recommended by the Agricultural Department at Washington was published in The Times. A later reference to this wash brought the request from E. A. B. of Glendale for a republication of the recipe. The whitewash is suitable for farm buildings, fences and stone work. It is made as follows:

Take half a bushel of unslaked lime, slack it with boiling water, cover during the process to keep in steam, strain the liquid through a fine sieve or strainer and add to it a peck of salt previously dissolved in warm water, three pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste and stirred in while hot, half a pound of powdered Spanish whiting and one pound clean glue previously dissolved by soaking in cold water and then hanging over a slow fire in a small pot hung within a larger one filled with water. Add five gallons hot water to the mixture, stir well and let it stand a few days, covered from dirt. It should be applied hot, for which purpose it can be kept in a kettle or a portable furnace. Coloring matter may be added as desired. For cream color add yellow ochre; pearl or lead, add lamp or ivory black; fawn, add proportionately four pounds of umber to one pound Indian red and one pound common lampblack; common stone color, add proportionately four pounds raw umber to two pounds lampblack. For interior work: Slake a peck of lime till it is thick and creamy. While it is hot mix with a pint of linseed oil and one-quarter pound of glue previously dissolved in water. Let the mixture stand several hours before applying it. A little lampblack dissolved in vinegar and mixed with whitewash gives a grayish tint, which may be preferable to pure white, a little umber gives fawn color and yellow ochre a cream tint. Very little coloring matter should be used, or the shade will be too dark.

MEN'S CLOTHES MADE OF WOOD.

"It will probably not be very long before we can go into one of the dry goods stores and say to a clerk, 'Let me see what you rave in the line of wooden suits,'" says Technical World Magazine for April. "He may reply, 'Hard or soft?' whereupon it will be our part to specify that we want a suit of 'good' pine, 'without any cheap sapwood.' Vests of this kind are already worn by the carding-room foremen in some of the woolen mills. The material resembles a stiff, thick cloth, and is apparently as durable as leather. It is not improbable that in the future cheap suits, costing about 50 cents and guaranteed to last for years, will be made of spruce or pine. Napkins, shirts, collars of the finest quality, have long been made from the fiber of hemp; and in using wood for heavier cloth, the process is equally simple. The wood is first ground into a soft pulp, and this pulp is pressed through holes in iron plates. It comes out in long ropes about one-half inch in diameter. These ropes, which are very easily broken at this stage, are dried, and then twisted tightly, till finally they become as small as threads. Part of the threads are used for the warp, and part for the filling, out of which a strong web of wooden cloth is woven."

Disinfecting Dwellings.

A WOMAN correspondent asks directions for thoroughly fumigating a house, that has been used by consumptives.

Let readers remember that the sun, the center of our system, is the great natural disinfector. Evil germs cannot live in the bright sunlight, but they flourish in the dark. Therefore, be sure that you let the sun shine full, for several hours daily, into every one of your rooms. Never mind the rugs and curtains—unless, indeed, you value them more than your health and that of your family.

In some cases, however, more strenuous methods are desirable, to purify an apartment, that has been polluted. The following directions for disinfecting dwelling-rooms are from the 'Home Handbook of Domestic Hygiene and Rational Medicine," by Dr. J. H. Kellogg, of Battle Creek..

"1. Open doors and windows as widely as possible, so as to allow the admission of the largest possible amount of light and the freest circulation of air.

"2. Remove the old paper from the walls, and burn it. Wash the bare walls with strong soapsuds, and then apply whitewash to the ceiling. Cleanse the woodwork with a solution of fresh chloride of lime, one pound to the gallon.

"3. Remove the carpet from the floor, the bedding from the bed, and every other fabric from the room, and thoroughly disinfect them before replacing.

"Ordinary scrubbing, whitewashing and ventilation are useful and necessary, but are not sufficient. Disinfection is required. One of the most convenient and effective means of disinfection is fumigation by the burning of common sulphur. The following is the best method of doing this:

"Into a tub or a large dishpan pour water to the depth of an inch. Place in the vessel two bricks, laid flatwise, and near together. Set upon the bricks an old iron kettle. Put into the kettle a proper quantity of flour of sulphur, mixed with an equal quantity of pounded charcoal. The amount required is four pounds for each one thousand cubic feet of air. Mix with the sulphur and charcoal a few pieces of newspaper. Before the sulphur is lighted, all clothing and other articles in the room should be so disposed as to allow the fumes of the sulphur to come in contact with them, to the fullest extent. The efficiency of the fumigation is also very greatly increased by saturating the walls, and everything the room contains, with steam. This may be readily done by boiling water vigorously upon a stove in the room for an hour or two previous to lighting the sulphur. Dry sulphur fumes will destroy growing germs, but not the dried spores which may be collected upon walls and in cracks and corners. When all is in readiness, light the sulphur, and leave the room as soon as it is evident that it is going to burn well. If the door of the room communicates with other rooms, the crack around the door must be tightly closed, by putting thinck paper over it. The room must be kept closed for twenty-four hours, at the end of which time it should be opened, and left to air for another twenty-four hours, when it may be considered thoroughly disinfected."

The following is an efficient method of room disinfection with formalin, a new and very powerful disinfectant, which is somewhat more convenient in use than is sulphur, and is also more efficient:

The disinfection of rooms with formaldehyde (the gas of the liquid formalin) is easy, inexpensive, thorough and quite preferable to other methods in private homes, as it does not decolorize nor injure the most delicate fabric.

The windows, doors, and cracks should be sealed by strips of paper made to adhere with starch paste. Books should be suspended by their covers; clothing, etc., being hung loosely on a line in the room.

To insure more thorough disinfection, the room may be saturated with steam before the introduction of the gas, by vigorously boiling an open pan of water in the room, and sprinkling with water the articles most infected. All vessels containing water should be removed from the room, however, before beginning the disinfection.

Five ounces of commercial formalin are required for the disinfection of 1000 cubic feet of air space. The amount required for the room can be easily determined by calculating the cubic contents by multiplying together the length, breadth, and height, and dividing by 1000. Allow five ounces for each 1000 cubic feet. Suppose, for example, the cubic contents of a room to be 3000 cubic feet; 15 ounces of formalin would be required. The process is facilitated by adding one-fourth drachm of borax to each ounce of formalin.

Formaldehyde may be produced by simply heating the formalin in the room, after having carefully pasted up the cracks around the windows and about the door, after closing it, so as to retain the disinfecting vapors as long as possible.

The liquid may be injected into the room by means of the ordinary Davidson's syringe. The liquid may be pumped directly from the bottle by passing into it the supply tube of the syringe. Care should be taken to avoid inhaling the fumes, as they are decidedly irritating, although not directly poisonous.

The best method of vaporizing formalin is the following: Place in the middle of the room a wide, thick board. Place on the board a half-inch layer of sand, and on this lay a couple of bricks which have been placed in the fire until quite hot. Pour the formalin quickly into a tin pan, set this upon the bricks, and quickly leave the room. Or the pan containing the formalin may be placed upon a lighted kerosene stove. An old pan is better for the purpose, if it does not leak, as the vessels used for evaporating the formalin will certainly be spoiled, since the heat will continue long after the formalin has evaporated, it being unsafe to enter the room to turn down or remove the kerosene stove. Close the door tightly, and paste up the cracks at once.

Special apparatus which has been suggested by Dr. F. G. Novy affords the most reliable results. This consists of a tin can, in which the formalin is boiled by means of a gas jet, kerosene lamp, or kerosene stove beneath it. This lamp is placed just outside the door of the room to be disinfected. A tube leading from the tin can is passed through the keyhole, so that as the formalin gas is generated, it is discharged into the room. A funnel tube placed at the side of the can passes into the can, and reaches within one-sixteenth of an inch of the bottom. This serves as a means of introducing the formalin (which may be obtained at any drug store) and at the same time as an indicator.

When the liquid within the can is nearly all evaporated, the formalin vapor begins to escape through the tube, thus calling attention to the fact, so that the heating flame may be extinguished, thus preventing damage to the can.

The room should be left closed for ten hours, after which the doors and windows should be opened. After airing for a few hours, the walls, floor and all furniture should be thoroughly scrubbed with strong, hot soapsuds. This is perhaps the best of all known methods of room disinfection.

Clothing which has been exposed to contamination by contagion, if of little value, should be destroyed. If more valuable, it may be disinfected in any one of several ways: "1. Heat in an oven as hot as possible without scorching, for an hour or two. A temperature of 250 degrees will do no harm.

"2. If the clothing is uncolored, or colored with mineral dyes, soak a few minutes in a solution of fresh chloride of lime, of the strength of one pound of the chloride to a pailful of water. Afterward boil.

"3. Boil for one hour in a saturated solution of common salt. The addition of salt will raise the temperature a few degrees above the boiling point, and insure the thorough destruction of germs and germ spores.

"4. Expose for several hours, in a closed box, to the fumes of burning sulphur. Air thoroughly afterward, and wash."

A Sensible Priest.

THE following dispatch from Chicago was recently printed in The Times:

"At the funeral this morning of Rev. Martin Van Delaar, a Roman Catholic priest of South Chicago, the body was borne to the burial ground on an electric street car. Behind were nineteen other trolleys, crowded with parishioners and church dignitaries. No sign of crepe marked the cars. It was at once the strangest and most impressive funeral South Chicago ever saw. It was planned by the priest when he lay hopelessly ill in the hospital, as an object lesson in economy."

This is in accordance with suggestions recently made in this department, under the heading "Care of the Dead Body."

Health Hints.

"THE White Magic Library of Health, Volume I," is not, as the name might suggest, an abstruse and mysterious treatise, but is a booklet containing some good sound suggestions in regard to the treatment of diphtheria, croup, spasms, etc. About half the booklet is devoted to extracts from Dr. Tilden's excellent magazine, "A Stuffed Club." The author gives the following example of a test, to show the danger of breathing foul air:

"I wish to call especial attention to a fact seldom appreciated, and that is that the breath exhaled from the lungs, laden with poison from the blood, is really just as foul and filthy as the waste thrown off by the bowels. Being in the form of vapor, and smelling it all the time, we are not conscious of its foulness, but any one who, on a hot day in summer, will take the trouble to breathe into a half-gallon Mason jar for a few minutes, and then screw the lid down tight on the rubber band, and let it stand for a couple of hours, and then suddenly remove the lid, and quickly apply his nose to the mouth of the jar, will have a realization of the truth of my assertion and one that he will not care to repeat."

In regard to feeding infants, he sensibly says:

"With rare exceptions, all the ills of babyhood and childhood are due to too rapid nursing, or eating and overeating, both of which interfere with perfect digestion and assimilation, and result in fermentation and the accumulation of poison in the system."

Here are some further sensible remarks in regard to the craze for "breakfast foods:"

"The nearer we can keep to Nature the better. The so-called breakfast foods are bad, for the reason that through which many poor women lost all they had. Yet, we are told that, on the day following the disclosure, her office was thronged—by fools.

Los Angeles is surely a headquarters for fools, fanatics and fakers. These victims deserve no sympathy. If they were not bled in that way, they would lose their money—and what little sense they have—in some other way. Perhaps they serve a good purpose, as a sort of human manure in the field of thought, thus stimulating mental growth. As to the fakers, they are "doing the best they can."

Too Many Doctors.

A RECENT dispatch from Peking states that the Emperor of China is ill, and that telegrams have been dispatched to the viceroys of China, asking them to send their best physicians to Peking. That ought to settle the unfortunate Emperor, although the doctors are likely to be as careful as they know how, because, in China, they have an unpleasant way of occasionally cutting off the heads of physicians, when their patients die, if the latter are influential. Whether or not this is a good idea—it must be admitted that it is somewhat radical—the Chinese plan of paying doctors by the year, as long as their patients are well, the pay ceasing while they are sick, is an excellent one. As the editor has frequently observed, it might with advantage be adopted in this country.

By the way, apropos of this subject, it is an indubitable fact that a poor man has a vastly greater chance of recovery from sickness than a wealthy man, who has high-priced doctors at his beck and call. In this case, at least, poverty is a blessing.

An Old Advertisement.

THAT the advertising of medical "specialists" is not by any means a new thing is shown by the following advertisement, which is found in the Herald, published at Circleville, Ohio, on April 27, 1849:

"A valuable scientific work, upon the subject of gestation and childbirth, by R. M. Weisselhoff, M.D., late of Paris, just published by the author. This work contains information upon subjects of the highest importance to married persons, or those contemplating marriage. It will be found of special value to those whose means, health or other circumstances do not permit them to increase the number of their family, without great inconvenience, suffering, or perhaps risk of life. A method of avoiding these dangers and troubles recently discovered by a French physician, will be fully communicated in this work, so that any person may avail himself of it at once. The means cost comparatively nothing, and are within the reach of all. The process is new, safe, infallible, convenient, simple, and cannot injure the most delicate. Nor does it curtail matrimonial privileges in the least. Copies of this work will be sent, in a closed envelope, at a single letter postage, to any part of the United States for $1, sent postpaid, to Dr. R. M. Weisselhoff, Box 2710, New York City. Copyright secured. No bookseller allowed to sell this work. Nov. 24, 1848—. Publication office, No. 258 Broadway, N.Y., opposite the park."

Anxious Eaters.

A WOMAN correspondent writes from Santa Ana as follows:

"I have been troubled with acidity of the stomach since early womanhood, and it increases with years. Am now 68 years old. Have for many years practiced dieting to a great extent, and now have to deny myself almost necessities. Eat no fats or meat, no fruit except a small amount of figs, prunes or raisins; no white bread except it be browned through; no sugar or other sweets; no vegetables except lettuce and turnips and occasionally a little sweet potato. Drink no coffee, but often take one cup of tea a day, but not during meals. I do eat some 'shorts' bread or crackers made with water or sweet milk and olive oil; just enough of the last to tender them so they can be eaten. Eat some of the prepared breakfast foods, and occasionally a few English walnuts, after cooking them in the oven or thoroughly heating. Do not take more than two or three articles at once meal, and then not in quantity to satisfy the craving of appetite.

"Am losing in flesh and strength all the time. I have for some time been an interested reader of "The Care of the Body" department of The Times, but have not found anything there that altogether meets my needs. Can you suggest a course of living that may benefit me and possibly some other readers similarly afflicted? I have many physical ills, but I believe the source of all is the stomach, and I despair of ever being helped by drugs."

This comes under the head of "personal inquiries," which,—as stated week after week at the head of this department—are not answered. It would be ignored, were it not for the fact that it can be used to "point a moral and adorn a tale."

This correspondent is typical of hundreds or thousands of those who have taken up the subject of food reform. She has worked her ration down gradually, until the digestive organs, having had scarcely any exercise, are unable to accomplish their task. They tell of a man who experimented with a horse, feeding it less and less, until just as the experiment promised to prove a grand success the animal died. So it is with many of these food reformers. You might as well tie your arm up in a sling, and expect it to remain strong, as to feed your stomach on predigested foods, that require little labor, and expect it to continue in commission. Throw out all the predigested foods. Take a fast of a few days—or even a Sunbrights California Food Company.

Gentlemen:—I feel it my duty to write a word of praise for Sunbrights Baby Food. I began its use when our baby boy was less than three months old. Having tried other foods with no success, and seeing what Sunbrights was doing for my neighbor's baby, I gave it a trial. Your nurse came out and so kindly showed me how to prepare the food that I had no trouble. My baby is now 6 months old, weighs 21 1-2 pounds, and has never had a sick day. His fat, rosy cheeks and bright eyes show what Sunbrights California Food has done for him. I can heartily recommend it to all mothers, since I have seen what it has done for other babies as well as my own. Very respectfully,

A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM
URICSOL CONTAINS NO ALCOHOL.
Any medicine, whether taken internally or applied, which attempts to overcome disease by combating effects, must necessarily fail. To reach and remove the cause is the first essential of a true remedy, and particularly is this true of that King of Pain, Rheumatism.
Uricsol begins with the first cause and assists overworked or diseased organs to perform their function of carrying poisons out of the body, thus preventing the further formation of uric acid. It tones and strengthens the entire system and enables it to do its work well unaided.

Care of the Body.

few weeks, if you have the will power—and work up a normal appetite for plain food by exercising and deep breathing of pure air night and day, with cool bathing of the body. Take a good massage and a good sweat occasionally. Then, when you begin to feel a natural appetite, if you are not prepared to go so far as to tackle pork and beans and Limberger cheese—and the editor surely won't suggest that you do—try a dish of thoroughly boiled and baked pink beans, with olive oil, and a little onion, or a rarebit, with tomato sauce, or scrambled eggs with thyme, sage, parsley or some other savory herb. Cooked walnuts are enough to give a hog dyspepsia. Don't drink anything with your meals, and never drink when you are not thirsty, but endeavor to create a normal thirst by exercising and breathing. You make a great mistake in not eating fresh fruits. Acid fruits are a great aid to digestion, but whatever you eat be sure to masticate thoroughly. Sometimes a term on a single-food diet is all that is needed. Read the following, by Dr. Tilden, in A Stuffed Club for March, on people who are always worrying about what is going to happen in their "innards," after they swallow food:

"I do not mean to say that when people begin to reason in this way that they must become maniacs on the subject; they will make the correction necessary and think no more about it, the same as one decides on a necktie, shoes or other wearing apparel for the day. When people talk and dream about what they shall eat or not eat, they are not possessed of vital knowledge, no, not even common sense; they are auto-hypnotized by one idea and are being driven in the line of insanity; they are not possessed of knowledge; they are being exorcised by an enthusiasm born of knowledge limitation. Fads and one ideas generally are noisy and clamorous, suspicious and fanatical. A working knowledge is always confident, courageous and self-possessed; it does the right thing at the right time and forgets it; always teachable, but not easily blown from one thing to another."

The Deadly Soda Fountain.

THE city health office is about to make a move against the soda fountains, where "fruit extracts" are mainly composed of poisonous dope, such as coal-tar products and sulphuric acid. One would suppose that, in a section where hundreds of carloads of cull lemons are left to rot every year, it would not be necessary to use anything but pure citric acid, where that is called for. Yet, as recently shown in these columns, even the "pure lemon drops," sold on the beach car lines, are doped with a dangerous mineral, so as to give them an attractive appearance. Again, to show the importance of this adulteration business, it is said that the Standard Oil Company is dickering for the control of the manufacture of bogus fruit extracts.

The public is mainly to blame for this, because Americans will be so foolish as to eat with their eyes. Any housewife knows, for instance, that tomatoes and strawberries turn a brownish color when cooked. Yet, most women insist on a bright red tomato catsup, or strawberry jam. Consequently, they are slowly but surely poisoned, which "serves 'em right," but their innocent children, whose young stomachs are susceptible, are to be pitied.

Once more, it should be remarked that, from a hygienic point of view, the ordinary American soda fountain is more dangerous than the saloon bar. In addition to the poisonous ingredients of the drinks, there is added the dangerously cold temperature at which the drinks are swallowed, causing much dyspepsia and kidney disease.

The health authorities also report having found many of the fountains in a filthy condition, some of the interiors abounding in decaying bits of fruit. The activity of the health office is much hampered by the lack of an effective pure food law. When will the people insist on a pure food law that will protect, and then see that it is rigorously enforced? The United States Senate has made a beginning. We shall see what it amounts to. Much depends on the interest or the indifference displayed by the people.

Secret of Long Life.

THE secret of longevity, according to Prof. Goldwin Smith, is to live abstemiously and in moderation—otherwise live pretty much as one likes.

That's good advice. To this should be added, however: "Don't worry." But how many people will live "abstemiously and in moderation?" Those that do so well live well, and will live long.

Fever and Foolishness.

A DISPATCH from New Orleans states that "hoping to obtain information of a possible recurrence of yellow fever, the local Board of Health has offered a reward of $5 for the first live stegomyia mosquito discovered in New Orleans."

What foolishness! Better offer a reward for information of people who don't keep their houses and surroundings in a cleanly condition.

Again, an article on "Extermination of the Mosquito," in the California Medical Surgical Reporter, for March, occurs the following:

"In the successful extermination of the several varieties of disease-bearing mosquitoes it is well to remember their favorite breeding places. Several varieties of culex select small pools of comparatively clean water to hatch their larvae. Anopheles, the malarial mosquito selects larger ponds of more stagnant water containing green surface scum. The high grass bordering such pools is found to be their resting place during the daytime. The stegomyia fasiata, on the other hand, requires more filthy water for its propagation. In each case one must be conversant with the life habits of these insect pests in order to proceed in an intelligent manner to exterminate them."

Did it never occur to this, and other able writers on the subject, that it is just possible the draining of stagnant ponds" and "filthy water" may, of itself, be sufficient to prevent and cure yellow fever, malaria and similar diseases, without regard to the mosquito superstition?

Bad Sunday Suggestions.

THE police have been trying to catch a firebug in Los Angeles. Perhaps he has been reading the "comic" supplements of the Sunday papers, where the smashing of people on the head, and the blowing up of houses, are depicted as huge jokes. Why don't some of these excruciatingly funny men work in the burning of hospitals at night, the wrecking of trains, and so forth? As it is the young certainly get plenty of wrong suggestions in these sheets. And you may be sure these suggestions bear fruit, in wrong actions. By the way, that series of colored illustrations, running in the Sunday Times, entitled "Little Nemo in Slumberland," is a revelation of what may be done in that line, without being vulgar or inartistic. It is high art, in the concept, the drawing, and the coloring.

In "Suggestion," Dr. Parkyn is running a series of articles, showing the evil suggestive effects of sensational newspaper reports of crime, which are almost invariably followed by others of a similar kind.

The Female Form Divine.

AN account of a convention of the "National Protective Dressmakers' Association," in Chicago, contains the following:

"Tonight was devoted to corset demonstration on living models. Men were rigidly excluded. It is said wonderful things were done, women with no waists being transformed into sylph-like creatures, and girls with spider waists being punched and kneaded into modern Venus de Milos, simply by the use of proper corsets."

That is almost as bad as "physical culture."

One sensible thing the National Protectives did, however. They recommended that women have pockets in their skirts. Yes, Pockets! Surely, the millinery millennium is coming.

Vegetarianism Booming Leather Prices.

A LONDON letter states that a leather salesman attributes the recent advance in the price of leather, in part, to the growth of vegetarianism, leather-making animals not being killed for their hides alone. In that case, look for a further and greater advance in the near future, for the people are rapidly learning that flesh foods are not only unnecessary, but injurious.

At the same time, let it once more be plainly stated that the mere dropping of flesh from the dietary may be, not a step forward, but a step backward, from a hygienic point of view.

By the way, leather is about the worst form of foot covering that could be conceived, being warm in summer and cold in winter. Health reformers are beginning to dispense with leather shoes. Then, as automobiles take the place of horses, harness will go, and there will be still less demand for the skins of beasts.

Glittering Generalities—The Theater.

A ST. LOUIS dispatch says:

"Archbishop Glennon has made a scathing attack on the stage, following Bernhardt's appearance, calling theater-going a sign of degeneracy, like Rome's. The genius of authors and playwrights is that which 'gilds the tomb,' he says."

Such "glittering generalities" as this, whether they emanate from an eminent cleric or a common "layman," are "incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial." As well say reading is a sign of degeneracy. There is as much difference between some plays and others as between the Bible and the Police Gazette. There are undoubtedly immoral plays, but, as a rule, modern plays are more distinguished by imbecility than by immorality.

The main objections to the theater, from a hygienic point of view—and the reasons why the editor seldom goes to such places—are, first, that they are, as a rule, poorly ventilated, so that you are inhaling, for several hours, emanations from hundreds of lungs, few of which are anything like clean. When you come out, you often catch a cold, not, as you may foolishly suppose, from the cold air on the outside, for that merely supplies the shock that aids nature to try to eliminate the impurities from your system depleted by lack of oxygen.

Second, if you attend a theater, and live in the suburbs, you cannot get to bed much before midnight. It would be a great improvement if performances were to begin at 7:30 and end at 10.

Pimples.

"A. S. D."—who doesn't give name or address, and whose communication should, therefore, by right, go into the waste basket—asks for a "remedy" for pimples and other skin eruptions.

Once more—there is no "remedy," for this or any other ailment, if you mean by that taking something out of a bottle, or a pill box, or rubbing something into the skin. You must find out the error—or errors—that caused the pimples, and correct it or them. To do that, it would be necessary to know your habits of life, and especially your diet.

In this connection the following has been received from George W. Patterson, of 535 San Julian street, who says it is "an experience from life:"

"And it came to pass in the land of Us that George,

Sour Milk.

A SENSATIONAL page article, in a sensational paper, recently told how you may live to be 180—why not 200?—if you drink sour milk. Because why? Because, firstly, Metchnikoff, who is Pasteur's successor, says so—or is said to say so—which "do settle it," and secondly, because, in Bulgaria, where the peasants live mainly on black bread and sour milk, many of them attain to great age.

Oh, yes! Doubtless, if you live the natural life of the Bulgarian peasants, with simple food, of any kind, you may attain to great age. No miracle there.

There's nothing new about this sour-milk or buttermilk "cure." Lactic acid, doubtless has good properties, like the acid of fruits, but remember that "lacto bacilli" swarm in the swill pail.

By the way, the Mazdaznan people make a pleasant sour-milk drink, by thoroughly beating up fresh milk—with the cream—and adding thereto, after beating, the juice of a lemon.

Some Things Surgeons Can't Do.

THE following sensible remarks are as radical as they refreshing, coming from a "regular." They are from a paper, read by Dr. L. G. Visscher, before the Southern California Medical Society:

"I say emphatically that you surgeons cannot cure enteroptosis, even not if you stitch up kidney, stomach, colon and liver at the same time. You can only help the repair of some of the sequelae, and that only at great risk. You surgeons can no more cure enteroptosis by stitching or anchoring than you can cure cirrhosis hepatis by tapping the abdomen or large white kidney by ankle incision, because you leave the essential causes unaltered, inheritance, malnutrition, wrong habits, nerve and muscle degeneration and lowered intra-abdominal tension. I will go even farther and accuse you, jokingly, be it said, in kindness and good fellowship, accuse you of aggravating enteroptosis, by letting your patients, after childbirth, pan-hysterectomy, removal of tumors, appendicitis, even minor pelvic operations, get up too soon, get home too soon, underfed, improperly fed, the abdomen full of wind, drained by saline purges and riddled by laxative pills.

"The treatment of enteroptosis means rebuilding of the organisms, that means blood and fat. We do that by air, exercise, rest, feeding, bandaging, electricity, drugs; during a long time; not by knife, thread and needle in a jiffy!"

Strong Animals.

THE following little skit, from the Boston Transcript, is funny, but of course untrue:

Vegetarian: Don't you know that the strongest animals are all vegetarians, the elephant being the most powerful?

Carnivorous Friend: That's all right. If they weren't so strong they never would be able to stand a vegetable diet.

ON THE SHEEP RANGE.

The journey of the past two days has been in the solemn still ness of the forest. Hardly has the soft twittering of a bird broken the unending silence. But now the voice of the distant flocks is the undertone that fills the air—it rises and falls in cadences, but is never still. There, under the shadow of the pines, is pitched the herder's tent. Company is scarce, and therefore valuable, and hardly have his dogs given warning of a stranger, than the one solitary figure is strolling slowly toward us. It is quite impossible to forecast the nationality, age, upbringing, or condition of this man. Shepherding is so often a refuge as an occupation. Wages are good, work there is none, food is found, responsibility sits very lightly; through six months of the year this outdoor life involves no hardship. If from one two-weeks' end to the next no living man is in sight to speak to—well, there is the less chance of quarreling, and the dogs are ever at hand, and good company for many hours out of the twenty-four.

But then, the ever-present sheep. To rise with the sun, get breakfast, and then follow the big flock as they slowly feed away from camp. To hear their everlasting ba-as, to smell the ever-present wooliness, to live, move, and have your being in an atmosphere of sheep—to walk when they walk, to stop when they feel disposed to rest, to so put in the slowly passing hours, to accompany them back to the neighborhood of camp, and, not until the flock has gone to bed for good, to feel a mment's freedom from their society. oN wonder that, as one sheepherding friend told me, he was ready to bless a wolf or two that broke in on the monotony of his day by trying to steal a sheep before his very eyes.s The sheep herder is well armed as well as well fed. And very often on these summer ranges he can so manage the day's march of his flock as to bring in the blessed trout stream, where the fish are rising at the summer flies. One man I know learned Spanish in the summer's herding. Another found a haven in higher mathematics. Several others used their pocket knives to carve ornaments and nicknacks. Books, magazines, and letters are always brought out with the supply of beans and bacon, coffee and flour, sugar and tobacco.—[Wallace Nash, in Pacific Monthly.

SHE WAS CAUTIOUS.

"So you have decided to break your engagement with him?"

"Yes," she returned thoughtfully, "but I don't think I shall do it till after my birthday, which comes next week."—[Royal Magazine.

OLD CROWNS

As the Gold Cap excludes all agents of decay it means the most permanent of all operations upon the teeth and the most satisfactory to the patient where the condition of the tooth necessitates its use. When the nerve is exposed it can be entirely removed, without pain, and the tooth left intact and crowned. By this process it can be readily seen that when decay has progressed so far that filling would not be practical, teeth may be restored to their natural usefulness and beauty. DEATH HERE ENDS LONG BANDIT HUNT.

Old Jose, Bloodthirsty Figure in Thrilling Drama of Mexican Border, Passes in Sonoratown, Escaping Vengeance of Rurales.

Thomas Botello

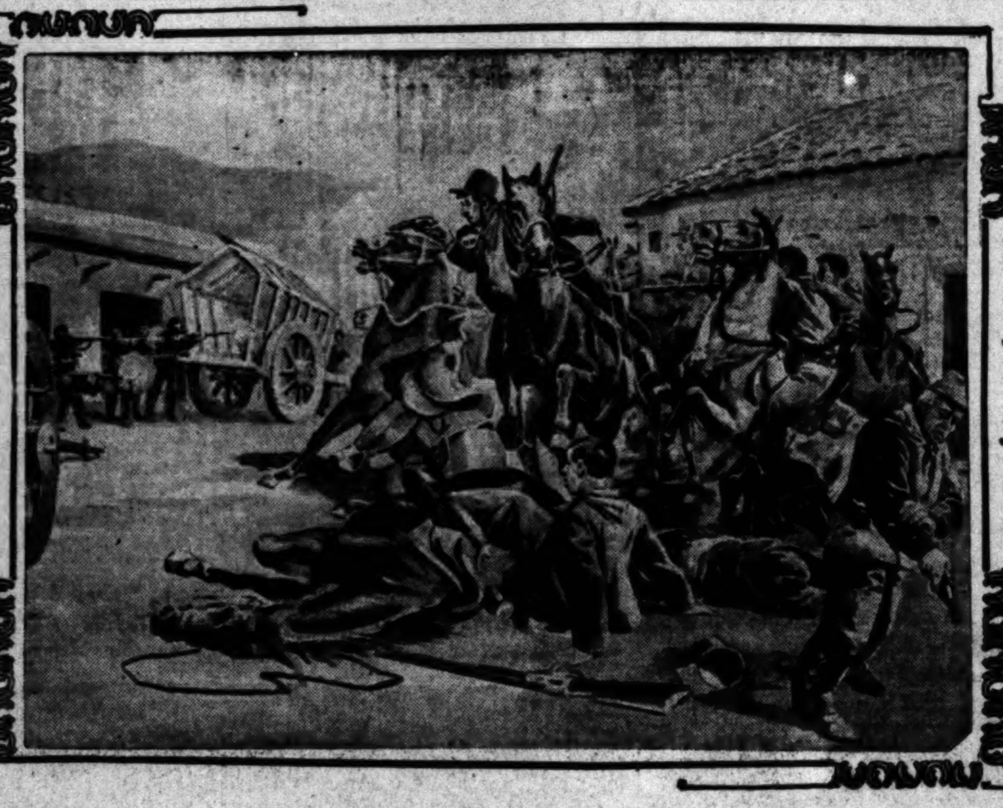
IF SOME BUILDER of melodramas chances to read of this—the dismal ending of old José in Los Angeles Sonoratown—then the old vagabond may not have lived and died in vain.

His death, a few days ago, was, in itself, a bit of sardonic humor. By dying, he cheated a pursuit of years.

Thomas Botello, now a private detective of this city, but formerly a catcher of wild Mexican bandits, was prying closely into José's lurid antecedents when the old fellow "up and died" out of spite. So ended the search.

Unless the scent was false, Botello and José have exchanged shots and fusillades in a picturesque border drama.

In cold print, it is tame enough. You must imagine the flash of Botello's dark Mexican eyes—the fiery grace of Latin gesticulations to make the story of this old Sonoratown vagabond a living reality.



The fight at Gen. Tarin's hacienda; mounted bandits fired on by the rurales concealed in the ramada where the women did the washing for the household. The leader of the bandits has just died in Los Angeles.

The shadows were growing long and streaky when the big Mexican diligencia plunged out of Villa Lerdo in the province of Durango, one April day in 1891.

It ran from the old Mexican town of Villa Lerdo to the station of that name on the line of the Mexican Central, five miles away.

The stage was drawn by four fiery half-tamed mules. There were only three occupants of the vehicle. One was the Wells-Fargo express messenger who guarded the treasure box with a sawed-off shotgun or "howitzer" across his knees; the driver, who was equipped with a remarkable vocabulary for driving mules, and the cargador, or porter, who belonged with the outfit.

The stage road skirted the banks of a great bayou, or arroyo, which was half-hidden behind a rank growth of tules and chaparral.

ATTACK OF THE BANDITS.

Without more warning than a quick leap of the panicky lead mules, the fringe of tule burst out in a livid sheet of flame, followed by single long spits of fire. The yells of the driver to the terror-stricken mules, who had whirled and tangled themselves in the harness, were lost in a roar of musketry.

Six or seven villainous-looking ruffians came bursting through the parted tules. In the words of the chairman of the evening, they "needed no introduction." An eighth bandit was holding their horses in the bayou.

The express messenger, with his receipt book tightly clutched under one arm, leaped from the wagon with his big howitzer. He had hardly hit the ground before a half-dozen Henry rifles blazed out at him and he fell.

The ruffians ran up to him as he lay on the ground, kicked the howitzer out of his hands, and fired several shots into his writhing body.

The blood gushed from a horrible, gaping wound in his breast, welling out with a blubbering sound.

The driver, seeing his chance, leaped from the wagon box and ran for his life, diving like a startled rabbit for the shelter of the tules. Just before he ducked out of sight one of the bandits turned and fired a shot into the seat of the tight "bell" trousers of the fugitive.

The cargador—a prudent man—crouched, cowering, in the bottom of the stage. They found him there when they drove the stage away, and shot him.

They untangled the mules and soon disappeared round the bend of the tules, leaving the express messenger for dead on the ground. The whole incident had occupied but a minute or two.

ACCIDENTAL HERO.

The messenger was not dead, however, although shot through the lungs. He was one of those accidental heroes who are found in every race.

Somehow he managed to staunch his wounds and check the terrible drain of blood. Various thrilling "rides" of various heroes have been celebrated in history and song; but the painful creep of this obscure express messenger, Espinosa, has been lost to records of human bravery.

Painfully, almost inch by inch, the dying man managed to drag himself nearly three miles until the sharp challenge of the sentry at the garrita before the town of Villa Lerdo told him the goal was gained.

In a dying whisper he gasped out the story of the stage hold-up and fainted. The spark of life lingered in him until that night at 11 o'clock, when he died.

It was as if an electric shock had jolted through the town. Hot haste, a messenger put off to the residence of the gefe politico, who ordered out the rurales.

Saddles were flung on the backs of plunging horses. Amid the clank of accoutrements, a cavalcade set out at gallop from the town before darkness had yet settled.

They found the looted stage standing in the road, not far from the scene of the robbery, the body of the cargador lying in it. The Wells-Fargo box had been opened. It contained only $300 (Mexican) and a sewing-machine top that had been sent away to be repaired. There also was a big bag of corn which the bandits had slit open with their knives, suspecting concealed treasure.

Detective Botello, now of this city, but who was then working for the Mexican Central as chief detective, was hurried to Villa Lerdo. Several days were spent in hunting down clews; but the bandits had scattered like quail.

PLOT BIGGER CRIME.

Finally the startling news leaked out that the bandits were plotting a bigger and more daring crime.

Several miles from Villa Lerdo was the magnificent hacienda of Gen. Refugio Tarin. He was paymaster for a force of some fifteen hundred men and had the coin in the house waiting for pay day. It was learned that the bandits had recruited their gang up to fifteen men and were planning to attack this place.

The attack was to be early in the morning, and it was far enough ahead to give the authorities brief time to prepare.

A messenger was sent, riding hot haste to the Tarin hacienda, bearing a warning letter. The general was requested to keep the warning a deadly secret from his own household for fear of spies. Couriers were then sent far and wide through the district to rouse the rurales.

An ingenious plan was adopted to get a force of rurales into the hacienda to defend it without rousing the suspicions of the household.

First, two men dropped in at the hacienda, asking lodgings for the night—like travelers. Then two more, on a similar petition. They kept dropping in thus until there were eight.

In a big Mexican establishment, eight casual guests for a day or two would not excite the slightest comment.

Finally the captain of the rurales and the detective—Botello—arrived with two rurales as their bodyguard.

SPRING A SURPRISE.

The attack was due to arrive the next morning. But the bandits—filled with impatience and aguardiente—decided to bring it off that night.

The hacienda consisted of several large adobe buildings, all surrounded by a large adobe wall. Entrance was through a huge double gate, always guarded by a sentinel.

Botello and el capitan were dining with Gen. Tarin that afternoon, and the rurales were having their dinner in a ramada back of the house, where the women servants did the washing for the household, when a little cavalcade of horsemen drew up at the hacienda gate.

They had the appearance of rurales. Walking in front of them were two sullen-looking men with their arms bound—like prisoners. Their horses were being led.

It was learned afterward that the bandits had cut down their sombreros to resemble rurales' caps. On the cap fronts they had fastened crossed strips

COWBOY CAVALCADE.

Plans Made for Striking New Feature in La Fiesta Parade—Cowgirls Will Appear.

A striking new feature for the Fiesta parade is shaping itself—a cowboy cavalcade. It will depict life on the cattle ranges of the great Southwest.

A special committee has charge, composed of J. S. Hendrickson, chairman, No. 701 West Twenty-third street; Dr. G. A. Scroggs, No. 326 South Hill street; Dr. George C. Sabichi and Dr. D. K. Dickinson, No. 518 Mason building; Dr. F. C. Shurtleff, No. 602 O. T. Johson building; John Schumacher and H. Keller, Santa Monica; Thomas Murry, San Fernando, and Paul Clover, Alhambra. Persons desiring to take part should communicate with any member.

There will be a large float, representing a scene on the range. As a guard of honor will come the San Fernando rangers.

This promises to be the most interesting parade of the kind ever given in the Southwest. Some of the finest bodies of horsemen ever mounted here will participate. It is probable that the famous Oxnard Rough Riders, who made such a hit at the time of the Knights of Columbus conclave in Los Angeles, will again appear.

There will be a "cowgirl" section, and already sixteen young ladies have volunteered to ride in costumes, which shall be "the real thing."

Dr. Scroggs has made arrangements for several fine horses to be shipped here from Phoenix for this parade, and bodies of men are to come from Arizona, New Mexico and Southern California, with horses and outfits fresh from the ranges. Some of the richest and most gorgeous horse trappings have been secured from old Mexican haciendas, and will be a striking feature.

GET TOGETHER ON DRUG LAW.

GROCERS AND PHARMACISTS FRAMING COMPROMISE.

Man Who Sells Food Staples, and Who Technically Violates Law in Many Instances by Sale of Vaseline, Borax and Such, Fixing Things Up With Mortar and Pestle People.

Have you ordered a bottle of vaseline from your grocer? Has he sold you a package of borax, sal soda, or a bit of paris green?

If so, do you know you have been been the cause of his violating a State statute, and that for each of these offenses the law says he is liable to a fine of $200, or 200 days' imprisonment, or both?

Beware of the grocers' "drugs"—provided you are within five miles of a drug store. Otherwise the grocers' drugs are all right—the State law says so!

But out of the peculiar muddle in which the last State Legislature and the State Board of Pharmacy have plunged the selling of drugs, there is likelihood of a satisfactory compromise. A compromise which possibly wouldn't stand if a legal fight were made on it, but one which will eliminate the more rankling prohibitions now in vogue for the grocer-drug seller.

A conference has been held by representatives of the Los Angeles Retail Grocers' Association and country merchants of Southern California on the one side and E. T. Off, a member of the State Board of Pharmacy, on the other. There was a general discussion of the inequalities of the new law and its apparent weakness. A schedule of the drugs usually handled by the general grocer was submitted, and a schedule was made as to the ones which Off, as a member of the Pharmacy Board, indicated would be allowed to remain in their stocks by the action of the board at its next meeting.

COMPROMISE MEASURE.

Off declared he did not speak officially; but it is understood his schedule doubtless will be adopted as a compromise measure at the meeting of the State Board of Pharmacy in Los Angeles on April 2.

There are some commendable things in the law passed by the last Legislature for the regulation of the practice of pharmacy and the sale of poisons in California. There are also some things that—well, the grocers do not speak of them in complimentary terms.

The pharmacy law lays down the general provisions under which drugs and medicines may be retailed by men holding certificates as registered pharmacists. Many and complicated are these provisions.

Then it goes ahead and declares that "The Board of Pharmacy may in its discretion issue a permit to general dealers in rural districts in which the conditions, in their judgment, do not justify the employment of a registered pharmacist and where the store of such general dealer is not less than five miles distant from the store of a registered pharmacist." For such privilege

The Marshal of Redondo and some of the other candidates for his job.

"GOOD morning. Have you announced your candidacy for a city office?"

This is the matutinal greeting of citizens of Redondo. No one knows what the new day may bring forth—only the certainty that it will bring to light some new candidates. It would be almost easier to give a list of citizens who are not standing for election than to say who are in the running.

Such a wave of patriotism! Never was it equaled in a village the size of Redondo Beach. Why, almost every other man wants to serve his town in an official capacity. They long for the sacrifice; they are willing to spend good money to secure the privilege of becoming servants of the people.

On April 9 Redondo is to elect two Trustees, one Marshal and one Clerk. In former years there was a scratching around to find men willing to accommodate the town by offering their services in these capacities. This year these offices are much-coveted honors.

A red-hot strife is on as to who shall be allowed to slide into the seats of honor.

Up to midnight last night there had been eight candidates announced for the office of City Marshal, with several skulking in the background. The position pays the munificent sum of $80 a month, and requires all of a man's time. The city Trustees are talking now of cutting this princely salary down to $65 a month.

But eight men are undeterred by this prospect. Each is determined to stay in the fight to the very last ballot. Every one of them is bound to win—their friends all say so!

DIVERSITY OF TALENT.

Included in the array of talent offered for the people to choose from are the incumbent and his predecessor, and a former deputy who claims to know the Marshal business as well as either of his former chiefs.

Carpenters, longshoremen, street-car conductor, real-estate operator and swimming teacher, all are ready to stand proudly before the people and receive the official "billy" and star of authority.

Here's a little list—select the winning man:

For City Marshal—J. K. Smith (incumbent;) Calvin Rice, Joseph F. S. Thomas, Prof. Maxey, J. M. Simpson, Samuel McB. Arthur, Al Moyon.

Maxey is swimming teacher at Ocean Park. He has been there for months, and when he came out as a candidate for the City Marshalship a shout went up that he was not a resident. Maxey triumphantly marched to an old sail loft, pulled forth a trunk, a pile of old shirts and soiled socks, and declared that these were his property, and this the proof of his place of residence. The citizenry meekly allowed him to file his petition as an independent candidate.

And then there is the City Trusteeship. Two offices of this character are to be filled—there are eleven candidates on the list so far. Others have the subject under consideration, or are "in the hands of their friends."

Here is the record to date:

For City Trustee—L. J. Woolley (incumbent;) Will J. Hess (incumbent;) J. I. Lechner, Frank A. Cleveland, William Usrey, G. Barnett, Andy J. Graham, Charles E. Riley, A. M. Harter, W. J. Cleghorn and Cornelius D. Knutsen.

Then, for the City Clerkship, Redondo voters may have a choice of three candidates: A. M. Harter (incumbent;) George Cate, and S. D. Barkley, who was for ten years in possession of this office, and who made way for Harter at the last election.

WHY IS A RUSH?

The real secret of all this rushing forward? Quien sabe?

Nobody professes to know. A desire to serve one's city must be floating about in the air, like the germs of the grip—and everybody seems to have "taken" the infection.

As a matter of fact, there are several important municipal enterprises on the tapis at Redondo. The town is preparing to make big strides forward, and it is but natural that much interest should center in the election of the City Trustees, who will supervise the expenditure of public moneys.

But as to the rush for the position of City Marshal—well, "we need the job" seems to be the favorite explanation.

There are three days yet before the nominations for city offices must close. Redondo citizens' favorite guessing contest is as to how many new candidates will have been announced by the time this limit expires.

Redondo has voted a bond issue of $80,000 for the construction of a septic outfall-sewer system. This election was held February 12, and was carried by a vote of 199 for the bonds, and there were only forty-seven votes against the proposition.

The system will provide sewers for about one-half of the townsite—all the thickly-settled portions—and the mains will be laid so that all other sections may be attached by laterals at a later period.

At the same bond election there was a proposition before the people to vote $20,000 bonds for building a City Hall. Some time ago the city had acquired a site on Emerald and Bonita avenues, a sloping hillside overlooking most of the town.

When the votes were counted it was found that the City Hall proposition had carried by 192 to 40. But investigation disclosed that this election was illegal, as it was held within six months of a previous election on the same question—the law demanding that fully six months must elapse before the second vote may be taken on one proposition.

This simply means the deferring of the City-Hall bond issue a few months later, and this time the city will be asked to make the amount $30,000, instead of $20,000.

Then Redondo has executed contracts for the expenditure of $26,000 on the improvement of 7000 feet of street on Dominguez avenue.

All of these public expenditures will come under the supervision of the new board of City Trustees. Besides these outlays of public money there will be expended $18,000 on the reconstruction of the old Chautauqua Auditorium, for the use of the Redondo Beach Union High School, but this will be done by the High School Union District board of directors.

Another important matter to come before the City Trustees during the ensuing years is the proposition to annex the village of Hermosa Beach. Hermosa is anxious for this, and many citizens of Redondo are in favor of it. Others believe the territory too extensive, and that the necessary street work would be a great burden to the older beach town.

THE LOCAL SCHOOLS.

HIGH SCHOOL'S BALLOT WEEK.

Student and Governing Bodies Name Officers.

Russian Mothers Brew Tea for Study Circle.

Picturesque People of Czar at Utah Street.

The past week was one of elections at the Los Angeles High School. The officers and directorate of the student body were chosen, popular Don Goodwin being elected president, with Henry Ayers, vice-president, Arthur Taylor, secretary and Mr. Van Cleve, treasurer. The board of directors includes, besides the above officers, Lester Finley, Paul Hammond, Linn Christopher, Albert Kidder, Mildred Miller, Oscar Patten and Samuel Camphouse.

The student body is the organization that controls most of the activities of school life, athletics, debates, lunch rooms, etc. Fully $1000 a month passes through the hands of this organization; sometimes the daily receipts from the lunch room alone amounts to $50. This department, it is estimated, clears about $10 a day. At the semi-annual meeting last week, the treasurer's report showed a balance of more than $270 on hand of which $175 is available for the different branches of athletics. The room treasurers are now collecting the dues for the second semester and the treasury will reap several hundred dollars from this source.

Some High School and other factors.

The self-governing committees were also elected during the past week. For the girls' committee, Miss Sarah Atsatt was chosen chairman, Jennie Heartt, first vice-chairman; May Stott, second vice-chairman; Grace Stevens, recorder; Miss Dozier, clerk and Miss Dickinson, sergeant-at-arms.

The self-governing board for the boys is composed of Harman Decius, chairman; William Newkirk, first vice-chairman; Walter English, second vice-chairman; Conrad Ohnemuller, clerk, and Harry Connor, sergeant-at-arms.

CHILD-STUDY CIRCLES.

The programme at the last meeting of the California-street Child-study Circle was exceptionally fine. A good deal of outside talent was drawn in to contribute to the entertainment of the sixty or more interested mothers who attended. Prof. Jacobson and Marco Kester played a violin duet and Hugh Callander and one of the teachers, Miss Abbott, sang beautifully, "Oh That We Two Were Maying." Misses King and Zimmerman of the Cumnock School recited and the city school nurse, Miss Thornton, gave a very instructive and helpful talk on "Diseases of Children" that was much appreciated.

The circle of the Utah-street school always has interesting sessions. Last week a number of the Russian mothers came and brought with them a magnificent, shining samovar—the real thing. After the programme was over tea was brewed and served in the Russian fashion and an abundance of cake passed by pretty, picturesque little Russian girls in gay magenta gowns with gorgeous headkerchiefs and elaborately cross-stitched and lace-trimmed aprons. A flock of twenty little Russian boys and girls—pupils in the school—sang several of their native songs and then added to their repertoire some of the English songs they have learned in school since coming to their new home in America. A tiny little chap, Master Herman Harrison, who is born of Russian and Polish parents, played a piano duet with his mother. This boy is a remarkable musical genius—so small that he stood beside his mother as he played and remarked in his droll way, "I always take the low tone," as he struck the bass notes. Later, he leaned lovingly over the piano and played a selection all by his small self. He can tell you all about the notes and explain clearly the whys and wherefores of musical mechanism in a way that is wonderful for such an infant. Herman is as bright in his books as in music and made a record for himself by shooting through one grade in three days and landing in the next, where are boys of foureen years. The Harrisons have lived in this country for years—long enough to become thoroughly Americanized. Herman was born in Oakland and is seven and a half years old, or, to be exact—as he says in his naive fashion, "In ninety days I shall be 8 years old," and then adds conscientiously—"tomorrow it will be eighty-nine days."

Mrs. Charles Squires, second vice-president of the California Congress of Mothers, addressed the circle on "Courage and Resourcefulness," giving some excellent hints on the management of children to develop these two necessary traits. Miss Himebaugh, one of the teachers, recited the amusing story of Mrs. Wiggs and her Sunday school and Miss Mona McHugh played several piano solos to the delight of every one. Little Mary Truitt sang a sweet solo entirely without accompaniment and Mrs. Edith Mitchell played the mandolin so fascinatingly that she was recalled several times. Mrs. Truitt, the president of this interesting circle, presided with charming dignity and Miss Cushing, the school principal, and her assistants made the mothers and guests most welcome with their happy hospitality.

The Second-street circle is planning an exhibit from March 21 to 24 of famous paintings from the Turner Art exhibit of Boston to raise funds for school decoration. School orchestras and glee clubs will furnish music and the exhibit will be open each afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock at the school building.

The Hoover-street circle, though one of the youngest in the city, is a very precocious infant. Within the past year it has paid $180 toward a piano for use in the halls. Its meetings are held regularly on the second Tuesday in each month with a goodly number in attendance and there is a most cordial, friendly feeling existing among the officers, mothers, and teachers. The officers are Mmes. Saunders, Sexton, Sprague and Owens. Last week the circle was entertained by Mrs. D. K. Trask who gave an interesting talk on "The Inner Circle."

At the Sixteenth-street school the pupils assembled in the halls Friday afternoon when an interesting programme of many numbers was carried out.

SIXTEENTH-STREET SCHOOL.

At the Sixteenth-street school on Arbor Day some mulberry trees were set in anticipation of the needs of the silk worms that are just now beginning to hatch. "Last year," says the principal, Miss Williams, "we had several hundred Italian worms, striped brown and white, which were a source of much interest to the children. Although the worms themselves were of this peculiar stripe, the cocoons we noticed were the same creamy white as those of the American worms and there was no dieffrence in the silk."

The children of this school have been investing their annual picture fund in some fine copies of famous paintings to further adorn their rooms. The 700 pupils of the Sixteenth-street school contributed $52.50—about the same amount as last year. One room has a fine copy of the Ruysdael windmill, another a magnificent picture of the lion in the court of the Alhambra and in one room where the study of the "Courtship of Miles Standish" had been a part of the course, the children bought a beautiful picture of Priscilla, the Puritan maiden. One of the girls in the school, Edna Lincoln, is a fine little artist and has copied one of Paul de Longpré's famous rose pieces in water colors and another girl, Crystal Wood, has done a pastel of one of the old missions. Both of these charming bits of color have been framed by the school and adorn the walls.

The three Igorrote boys who entered the school a few weeks ago have taken hold of their studies splendidly and are rapidly picking up the English language. A special permit from the Board of Education has been secured whereby the boys can take up Sloyd which they especially enjoy.

CADET ORGANIZATION.

The Los Angeles High School Cadets held their first yearly election Thursday. The seven highest in the examinations on drill tactics and practical tactics, were eligible to stand before the companies for election.

In the first company, Mr. Ayres was elected captain; S. O'Melveny, first lieutenant; H. Rogers, second lieutenant. Second company, L. Barr, captain; H. Decius, first lieutenant; T. Kellogg, second lieutenant. The closest election was that in which O'Melveny won in the eligibility contest. All the other candidates have had experience in the National Guard, but O'Melveny was especially strong on the practical tactics and won fourth on the list, without having the advantage of drilling with the militia.

Mr. Tracy was elected major of the two companies by the six commissioned officers. He has had much experience.

The examination for the non-commissioned officers will be held this week. The companies expect to enter the competitive drill contest in the Fiesta and have a date with Harvard school to decide the championship of Southern California interscholastic military drill.

PHIPPS FAMILY FEELS FAMINE.

SPRING APPETITE DEMANDS LUSCIOUS STRAWBERRIES.

But the Santa Barbara Fruiterers Fail to Find More Than Eight Boxes When Ten Are Desired, and There Is Like Unto a Panic in Household of Millionaire.

Wild and frantic telegrams received in this city indicate that Santa Barbara has been in a panic and that Millionaire Phipps has strawberries for dinner at his winter home.

Mr. Phipps is the former partner of Andrew Carnegie and has the snug little fortune of $250,000,000 to eat strawberries on. He is now tarrying in the millionaires' colony at Santa Barbara. He entertains extensively.

The burning tidings that Millionaire Phipps wanted strawberries for dinner last night threw local produce circles into a panic.

According to the accounts received by local berrymen. Mr. Phipps's housekeeper dropped casually into a Santa Barbara fruiterer's store and remarked:

"You can send us ten boxes of strawberries tonight."

"Please ma'am, we have dandy oranges," faltered the fruit man.

"We prefer strawberries," said the housekeeper, coldly.

The fruit man sank weakly into a chair.

"We haven't that many," he said.

"Send for some," she said.

"There isn't time to write."

"Telegraph them," she urged.

With that she walked calmly out. To save his life, the fruit man knew not the address of a strawberry and his heart was filed with a dull despair.

But there was no time for vain regrets. The Phipps grocery bill is said to amount to $28 a day. Goodness knows what the fruit bill is.

Then began a wild game of pursuit. Every strawberry of which skilled men could get a scent was relentlessly hunted to its lair.

Couriers dashed out to the fruit farms and the fear of death was put into them.

"Phipps wants strawberries for dinner," rang like the cry of a modern Paul Revere.

Toward the close of the day, the returns began to come in.

Weeping widows brought the strawberry that was their only heritage and laid it on the altar of the Phipps spring appetite.

Otherwise merciful money kings who owned mortgages on a strawberry were obliged to foreclose.

As dewy eve approached, the wagon which had collected the berries groaned up the street with lagging and reluctant steps.

The weeping teamster pointed to the load and turned away to hide his emotion.

There were only eight boxes of strawberries, where there should have been ten.

"Oh we need ten boxes," was all the unsympathetic housekeeper said.

A dash for the telegraph office. Into every quarter, hummed frantic messages. With tear-dimmed eyes, the fruiterer pleaded for strawberries.

All the replies he got were cold ones. Nothing doing.

Somebody in the Millionaire Phipps family had to say.

"No thanks—don't never eat strawberries," when they were passed that night.

DEATH CALLS MISSIONARY.

Passing at Pomona of Mrs. Regina Illg, Who Labored With Husband in West Africa.

POMONA, March 17.—The death of Mrs. Regina A. Illg occurred suddenly at her home corner Seventh and Louisa streets this noon, from heart failure. The daughter of the deceased, Miss Regina Illg, who is bookkeeper at the local Home Telephone Company's office, had just returned home for luncheon and found her mother sitting alone in the house. Scarcely had the daughter a chance to inquire how Mrs. Illg was feeling before the latter suffered a sinking spell and expired.

The deceased was 70 years old and was the widow of Rev. J. W. Illg, for some years pastor of the local German Lutheran Church. For some years she labored with her husband as a missionary on the west coast of Africa and her children were born there. Aside from Miss Regina Illg, residing here, Mrs. Illg is survived by another daughter, who was for several years governess in the family of Ex.-President Cleveland at Princeton, but is now a missionary in Africa. The arrangements for the funeral have not been made.

POMONA BRIEFS.

There is serious talk among one of the strong fraternal organizations here of erecting a new and commodious building of its own in which to hold lodge meetings.

The total rainfall for the season here is now over sixteen inches.

Startled, he ran up and read the inscription:

"Here lies the body of William Dooley "who came to his death from giving "Billy Paddock the damn lie. (Signed "by) Charlie Bigby and William Delaney."

The men whose names were signed were well known on the desert. The signboard had been cut with infinite pains out of redwood boards from the support of the water tank, then abandoned. There were the marks of where the body was carried up the hill, and the interment had evidently been made with great labor in this repellant soil.

All the men were shocked and surprised. The tragedy hung like a pall over them, and it was anything but a cheerful party that made its way finally to their proposed permanent camp, a few miles from that of Billy Paddock at the head of Goler Cañon in the Panamint Mountains.

In spite of a heavy snow, a blinding one, Slocum and Saddler started for Billy Paddock's camp next day. Half way up to the camp a man came running down, waving his hat frantically. It was Billy Paddock, pale, anxious, harassed. They shook hands and allowed him to precede them up the hills as he directed. He led them upward into the Stone Cabin of Black Mountain, famous since the silver excitement of the 60's as a place of refuge.

"Now, you're safe," he said, "and I suppose you think I owe you an explanation. The probabilities are that since you turned on this trail you have been covered by a 30-Winchester. Old Bill Dooley——"

"Who?" exclaimed his visitors.

Paddock nodded. "Old Bill Dooley has taken a violent dislike to "Doc." He thinks he is an officer from Arizona and it took me a long time to convince him that I was not going to give him up after you met him at the Steam Beer Club.

"The idea has haunted him until he is hardly sane. All the way he has talked nothing else, he has slept on his arms when he did sleep, and he has fought my leaving clews for you. The night we camped at Wingate Pass I went to sleep while he was whittling away on boards from the tank, and when I woke in the morning I found him standing at the grave there, to fake which he had done almost superhuman labor. He has been watching for you. I am practically sure he has had his gun on you all the way up."

BILL HANGS TO GUN.

Billy Paddock persuaded Bill Dooley to come in. He entered with his Winchester in the hollow of his arm. He took the hand of Slocum gingerly, and held on to his gun. Heartiness melted his caution not a whit. While the remainder of the party chatted, he sat on the bunk across the room with an ugly look on his face. The visitors rose to take leave. There was never a word from Bill Dooley, not good-by or a cuss word. And Billy Paddock covered the rear on the trail down the mountain for fear that grouchy person would take a pot shot at them.

Ned Saddler wanted to move at once across into Striped Butte Valley to camp. He thought it would come to a showdown between Slocum and Dooley, and it didn't suit him at all. Dooley plainly had a dangerous delusion and he was a desperate man. But in two days Billy Paddock came over.

"Some news for you," he announced. "Old Bill Dooley has vamoosed, and he has taken everything in camp. He has the teams and guns, and is heading for Funeral Range, across Death Valley. He didn't leave us a can of beans or a bacon rind, and I'll have to throw myself upon your hospitality for a few days."

That was nine years ago. Since then old Bill Dooley has not been heard of on the desert. The story of the lone grave spread among prospectors. Many of them were curious as to Bill Dooley's after movements. His claim on the King Midas property lapsed.

Somewhere on Death Valley's expanse his bones have gone to swell the number of unidentified dead, and the grave at Wingate Pass is the only one he ever had.

Catholics cross themselves at the emblem on the headboard on this mound of rock; the tenderfoot shudders at the hint of violent death on the unpoliced wilderness of sand; the hardened prospector muses upon the possibility that his bones may find such a dreary resting place.

But the fellow who was not afraid—he got the mine.

KNEW "POLLYWOG" CAPTAIN.

The Late Dr. Jeffries Was a Familiar Figure in Early Days in Santa Monica.

The death on Catalina Island Wednesday of Dr. E. P. Jeffries marked the passing of one of the pioneer and erratic figures of Los Angeles county. Up to about nine years ago Dr. Jeffries was a well-known resident of Santa Monica, having made his appearance in that city at about the date of the first sale of lots there, not far from the Centennial year.

During his palmy days at the seaside city he was highly successful as a practicing physician. He was a man of good address, scholarly and sociable to a degree.

When Col. Robert L. Baker established his historic "Pollywog" on the Ballona slough, Dr. Jeffries was assigned to its command, and on that old houseboat he entertained in lavish manner. Governors, Senators, Congressmen, and many of the then-prominent men of California, were entertained aboard the ship that never sailed, and whose ruins are still to be seen at low tide, peering over the waters of the lagoon.

It was located on the strand about midway between the present Playa del Rey and Venice, and was central to one of the finest hunting preserves in the country. Col. Baker provided guns, ammunition and accommodations for his invited guests, and Dr. Jeffries looked to their hospitable entertainment.

Before the days of the "Pollywog," Dr. Jeffries maintained bachelor quarters on Third street in Santa Monica, where the Columbia Hall has since been built. He had rich and influential relatives in Massachusetts, from whom he received monthly remittances. These were sent in trust to mutual friends, who would dole it out piecemeal to the jovial recluse, the object being to prevent his dissipation of the fund while gazing upon the wine in its redness.

Cow Pictures Worth Money

COW TALK

This week has been one of the very best in point of number of drawings received and good ones, too. The practice is telling in the quality of your work and to show that I appreciate the interest you take I am working on a plan to give a large list of prizes and to which every one of you will have a sure chance of winning. Now, I want you to write me telling what are some of the things that you would like to have put on the prize list. I will write to each explaining my plan but want to hear from all of you soon, telling what prizes you would like to work for. The sale of St. Charles Cream is booming and the more we can sell the more the firm will let me spend for prizes for my little friends. Don't forget to send me the names and addresses of 10 of your friends so I can help you get them to draw pictures too. $5 for first prize and $1 each for next five best. Send your drawings with your name, address, school you go to and be sure to send a label of St. Charles or Silver Cow Cream.

Mr. Roosevelt is a very busy man but not too busy to attend to a hurry up call from Algeciras.

The Pacific Coast will not only some day have the balance of trade but also the bulk of the nation's population.

Andy Hamilton is after the Phillistines with the jaw bone of an ass, and already he has lined up the highways with victims.

A bank cashier has gone wrong in Pennsylvania. It would be a relief to hear of something that has not gone wrong in Pennsylvania.

The President of one of the Chicago banks that failed loaned his cook $25,000. It was probably the only way he could get her to stay.

St. Patrick was not forgotten yesterday. His name, in the words of the poet, is "one of the few immortal names that were not born to die."

"Here's happy days," said the boys as they clinked their glasses filled with rye. The next morning the police judge gave them ten days each in jail.

It will be well for Arizona to still keep its weather eye on Uncle Joe Cannon. He has been beaten, but he is not one of the kind of men who stay that way.

Congressman Small of North Carolina asks the government for $3,500,000 to drain the Dismal Swamp. His name may be Small but his nerve is very large.

After a week's wetness we beg to remind J. Pluvius that this is the Sabbath Day and he ought to be good. Let old Sol now have a chance for his white alley.

A foreign Emperor and a Duke are having a quarrel. But what interests the people in this town a good deal more is the quarrel between the Mayor and the City Council.

When one considers the few laughs that come between all the cries, there would seem to be ample warrant for the conclusion that life is not much more than a big scare.

The "divine Sarah" recently disappointed 5000 people who had gathered to see her in Chattanooga. It was an open air affair and there was no way of charging an admission fee.

Either it is hard work railroading in Colorado or there are some mighty poor railroaders there. Its train record for death and disaster during the past years has been simply appalling.

Andrew Carnegie is improving. He has made a gift, without strings to it, of $50,000 to Drury College. The Laird of Skibo has been somewhat too prone to keep cases on the dollars he has given away.

We are too deeply steeped in prosperity at the present writing to listen to what it is that pessimists have to say. The year 1906 will be far and away the most prosperous year the United States has ever known.

A monument is to be erected in memory of Jefferson—not Thomas but Joe. Thomas was merely the man who wrote the Declaration of Independence, an old fashioned document regarded now in certain "advanced" quarters as in the nature of a joke.

We do not blame Sarah Bernhardt for declining to lay the corner-stone of a theater in Tennessee. She knows very well that it will be gobbled up by the trust as soon as it is completed, and that upon her next farewell tour she would be shut out from playing in it.

If Congress will agree to appropriate that $100,000 which Senator Flint asks for the Campo Indians at San Diego the money will go far toward loosening the hunger belt in the future. The Indians not only need the money, but they are also entitled to it. It is about time the United States government gave the red man a square deal.

A correspondent writes to ask if this play that had been on the boards in Los Angeles entitled "The Taming of The Shrew" has anything to do with the late City Hall incident in which the Mayor and Councilman Howton were the chief actors. We reply that it had not. The incident referred to would be more properly called "The Throwing Out of the Shrimp."

The next things we shall see along this sunlit coast of glory are the smelters, factories and other institutions of prosperity, thrift and enterprise that will dot the shore line, the inland valleys and the watching hills. The full dinner pail and the swelling bank accounts are the marks that, among others, will distinguish us as leaders among the greatest people on earth.

According to Representative Shakleford of Missouri, Uncle Joe Cannon, in his capacity as Speaker of the House, is an oligarchy and an unlimited monarchy combined, beside whom Peter the Great was a peewee and a piker. The next time Mr. Shakleford gets a chance to address the House while Uncle Joe occupies the chair the country will be a great deal older than it is now.

BUCK, MURDERER.

It would seem as if nothing could now interpose between Morris Buck, the murderer of Mrs. Canfield, and a fitting punishment for his crime, except it be a maudlin, unjustifiable and dangerous sentimentality. He has confessed that he killed Mrs. Canfield at the portal of her own home without any provocation or excuse. The experts, one and all, have pronounced him sane. His responsibility before the law cannot be disputed. His physical weakness at the present moment is due to recent causes and does not furnish the shadow of exculpation. The very fact that he has collapsed from fright and from the breaking of his nerves demonstrates that he is mentally competent. If he were insane he would be oblivious to the gravity of his situation. Buck has really presented no defense. His attorney has done all he could for him, but that has been nothing. The accused has had a fair and full trial, as impartial a hearing as if he were an innocent man. Now he is face to face with Justice.

PUBLIC SYMPATHY NOT WITH DESPOTS.

The officers of the United Mine Workers have suddenly come to a realization of the fact that they do not rule the whole country, and that if they attempt to do so, the contract will be greater than they can carry out. At Friday's session the policy of the national officers was outlined, in some degree, and it was made apparent that future action will be more conservative, unless the radical element should "break out" in some new place and carry all before it. This is one of the ever-present evils of trades-unionism—the rule of the mob element. It has wrecked many organizations which might have succeeded if they had been conducted on a conservative basis, with full respect for the rights of all men, and with some approximation to justice in their dealings. If John Mitchell and the association over which he presides have learned something from past experiences which will serve to guide them in the future, they will be the gainers and the general public will have less cause for complaint.

The report has come out of Indianapolis, where the United Mine Workers are holding their second convention, that "the leaders have felt that public sympathy has not been with them in the demands made by the January convention," and that "both in the East and in the West President Mitchell has found that a decided feeling eixsted that the miners were asking too much, and that the operators were fully justified in refusing their demands." It is now said that the one object of the miners is "to get the public on their side." This is an object that Mitchell and his fellows would have done well to have taken into consideration long ago. It is too late for them to pursue it now.

Often, in an industrial controversy, the issues are so clouded for a time that the public (by which term is meant the vast majority of intelligent, unprejudiced, thinking men and women) is unable to separate the right from the wrong. So long as the truth can be thus concealed, public opinion may be misled into a false sympathy for that which appears to be right, instead of for that which is right, in fact and in truth. But it is not possible to deceive the public permanently in a matter of this kind. "The truth is mighty, and will prevail." Not for long can wrong successfully masquerade as right. The American people have vastly keener perceptions and vastly better judgment than demagogues, fakers, walking delegates and other parasites upon the body industrial give them credit for. They (the people) are certain to discover the truth and the right in any labor controversy. Public sympathy will in the end surely be found on the side of right and justice, and it will as surely condemn wrong and injustice.

Whenever trades unions have kept the right on their side, they have also found the law on their side. When both the right and the law are on their side, success is practically assured to their cause, for public sympathy is never found permanently opposed to the right and the law. There have been numerous strikes in which the contentions of the strikers were eminently just. Invariably, such strikes have been won when the strikers had the courage and the wisdom to refrain from violating the laws or otherwise forfeiting the public esteem and sympathy by misdeeds which every just man must perforce detest. It is to the discredit of unionism, and to its own irreparable loss, that so few of its controversies have been of a kind to receive or to merit the support and sympathy of the public. The majority of strikes fail because they deserve to fail; because they are not based upon just demands, and are not conducted in accord with the law. Nothing will more quickly or more completely alienate the sympathy of the public than a resort to lawlessness.

In all great strikes, lawlessness begins almost as soon as the strike is declared. The people have made laws against violence, and have provided for the enforcement of the same. It is the sworn and bounden duty of every officer charged with the enforcement of the law to do his utmost, with fearlessness and impartiality, in all cases where he witnesses violation of the law, to prevent such violation. Hence the usual clash between constituted authority and organized violence in nearly all strikes. Hence the hatred for the law which is usually felt by strikers. Men who deliberately place themselves in the position of outlaws must be prepared to accept the law's punishment when they are caught redhanded in their lawlessness.

No class of men who habitually violate the laws of the land, as do the members of labor unions, can hope to receive public sympathy and support to any great extent. Labor-unionism is constantly growing more and more disreputable, and it has only itself to blame for this unmistakable tendency. It is constantly, and justly, associated in the public mind with violence, intolerance, and all forms of lawlessness which tend to subvert the guaranteed prerogatives of citizenship. If labor-unionism would become decent and respected, it will be obliged to mend its ways in this regard, and in many other important particulars. At the present time, it is justly regarded by the majority of the people as an enemy to the public peace and wellbeing.

AGAIN, REFORM OR REVOLUTION?

The Times is not unmindful of the evident and important fact that to the question treated editorially on Thursday morning, "Reform or Revolution," there are two sides. In the United States Senate on the same day that this editorial appeared, Senator Rayner brought out very clearly the other side of the controversy. He "advised the railroad magnates to accept the pending legislation, lest the people take the question into their own hands and form a political party that will be irresistible, and will in the end enact far more stringent provisions." This warning to the railroad managers is both timely and to the point. Reform is in the air, and resistance to necessary reform almost universally leads to revolution. The meaning in this instance is not that a violent uprising of the people is to be feared in the United States now or in the future. The American people are too intelligent, too patriotic, and too sane to tolerate for a moment anything of a violent nature. The revolution will be, as the Senator said, in the way of a party which will enact much more radical and sweeping legislation than that aimed at in the bill before Congress.

The warning is timely not only for railroad managers, but for insurance managers and great corporate interests universally. The point to be impressed upon the managers of these institutions is that they hold their charters under the government and by the will of the people. The power to create implies the power to control and regulate.

Now, the great trouble with these great corporations is that the inordinate greed of their managers has prompted a policy directly detrimental to the public welfare. This policy branches out in many ways. The most flagrant abuse in the management of these creatures of the government is in the way of inflated stocks and the issuance of bonds, from the proceeds of which these various enterprises are built up, established, and carried along at the expense of those who purchase the bonds, of those who invest in the stock, and of the public who make use of these various utilities. There is not a trunk line railroad in America which is not capitalized for several times more than the property cost. To pay enormous salaries to the officials, to maintain the use of luxuriant private cars, and to pay interest on inflated stocks, the public is charged more than is reasonable by common carriers as well as for insurance premiums and for all other uses on the part of the public of these semi-public utilities.

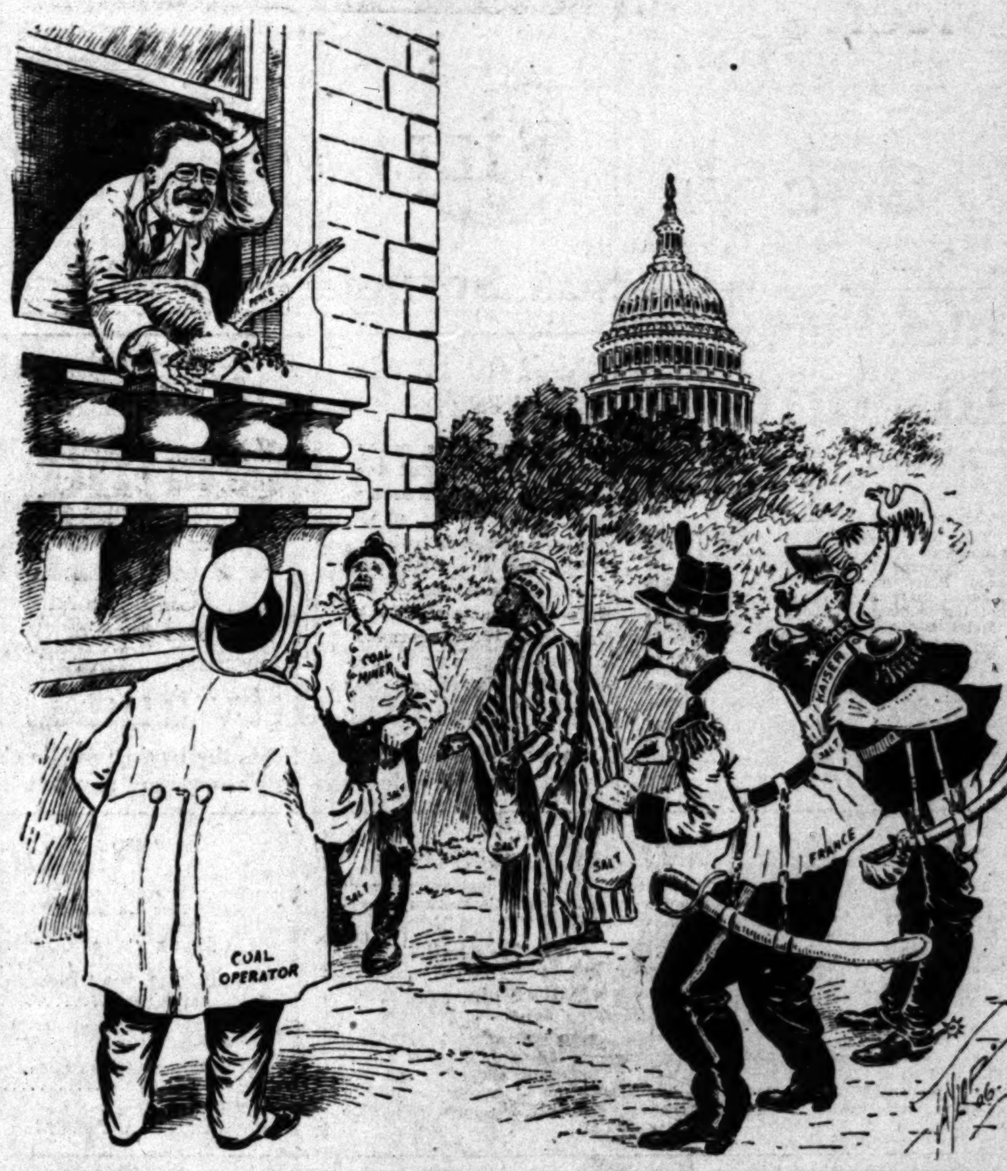
Another flagrant abuse is in the discrimination made by the managers of these creatures of the government, by which a few persons or given localities are favored to the general detriment of the great mass of the people and of perhaps a score, perhaps a hundred, rival cities.

The people have made up their mind that the power is vested in the government to do away with abuses of these kinds, to give a square deal, a fair field for all, and favors for none. They have made up their mind that this inflated-stock balloon must be punctured, the hot air let out, and the capitalization of these concerns reduced to a point near the absolute cost of establishment and maintenance. This done, the cost of service to the public may be very greatly reduced and the earnings will then pay a reasonable interest on the actual cost of these concerns, and the public will not be robbed.

Now, here is the gist of the whole matter. The King of France, in the day of his stupid pride, might say: "I am the state." He might also say: "After me the deluge." But in America in 1906 the sovereign people are the state, and their will is supreme. No man can say, "After me the deluge," because the deluge is too likely to come before any man's life ends and sweep him away in the wreck. No doubt the United States Senators who were found guilty of gross dishonesty before the regular courts of the country and before juries of their peers, may have chuckled and said, "After me the deluge." John A. McCall may have said, "After me the deluge." McCurdy may have thought, "After me the deluge." John R. Walsh may have looked with cynical eyes to a day after he had passed away when some deluge of reform would sweep over the land. Poor, broken-down Chauncey M. Depew, shrinking away in disgrace from the public eye, in his debonair hours a short year ago may have thought, "'After me the deluge' is the best joke ever perpetrated." But they were all caught in the great wave of reform which is sweeping over this land to overwhelm corruption, dishonesty, and all untrustworthy public servants. William M. Tweed, in his insolence, said: "What are you going to do about it?" The people did something about it, and Tweed got the worst of it. The people are doing something about this whole, nefarious business of corruption and dishonesty. They will keep doing things until the necessary reform is peacefully and gradually worked out to the end.

Now that the Atlantic fleet has been increased to twenty-five warships, it is to be hoped that "Fighting Bob" will be more careful than ever of mud banks should it become necessary for him to enter New York Harbor.

WHO WILL FIRST CATCH THE BIRD?



BARKING UP THE WRONG TREE.

That was a hard jolt which Congressman Shackleford of Missouri administered to Uncle Joe Cannon in the House on Friday, as a preface to his contemplated remarks on the Statehood bill. Mr. Shackleford "jumped with both feet" upon the Speaker, and in the brief time allowed him before he was shut off by an objection from Mr. Tawney, he took several falls out of Uncle Joe, figuratively speaking. He declared that the Speaker, in defiance of the Constitution, had made himself the master of the House, when he ought to have been its servant. "You sit," said Mr. Shackleford, somewhat tragically, "an enthroned despot, subjecting the rights and destinies of this great people to the dictates of your own unbridled will. Who stands, today," continued the now thoroughly aroused Congressman from the State of Folk, "between a progressive, enlightened people and the Statehood to which they are entitled? You, sir, only you; you crack your whip, and a majority of this House cowers at your feet. You turn your thumb down, and the House deals a death-blow to prostrate, bleeding Oklahoma!"

Without entering, at this time, into a discussion of the rights, needs and merits of prostrate, bleeding Oklahoma, it is pertinent to say that the Speaker of the House of Representatives is virtually what the House of Representatives chooses to make him. He possesses no power or authority, in and of himself. All his power is derived from the body over which he presides. He is primarily the creature of the House, and if the House, or a majority thereof, chooses to adopt rules of procedure which at times makes the creature greater in seeming than its creator, that is the business of the House. As a coördinate branch of our tripartite government, the House has a sovereign right to adopt such rules for its guidance as it sees fit.

The Speaker is not to be blamed too heavily for exercising the prerogatives which the House has placed in his hands with the express understanding that he shall exercise them. If the blame is to be placed anywhere, it should be upon the majority of the House, by whose vote the rules became the law of procedure. It is also to be remembered that the majority of the House, which adopted these rules, can also suspend them at any time, or repeal them altogether. Therefore, it is apparent that the majority is alone responsible for the conditions about which Mr. Shackleford complained so vociferously and so picturesquely. In heaping denunciation upon the devoted head of mild-mannered old Uncle Joe, Mr. Shackleford was barking up the wrong tree. He should have denounced the ruling majority of the House itself.

Yet Mr. Shackleford could hardly have done this with very good grace or ample consistency. These same "Reed Rules" of which the minority of the House now and then complain so pathetically and so bathetically, were adopted virtually without amendment when the present political minority of the House were in the majority, and the Democratic Speaker exercised the same "arbitrary" powers as are employed by the present Speaker. What is sauce for the goose certainly must be considered sauce for the male bird of the same species.

And there was plenty of reason for the adoption of the rules which gave rise to the playful sobriquet of "Czar Reed," as everybody knows whose memory runs back to the troublous days when the Democratic minority of the House planted itself squarely across the path of legislative progress. Before the adoption of these rules, the House was an impotent body, possessing legislative powers which it was unable to exercise. A small clique of members could, by dilatory tactics, stop all legislation at pleasure. They were able to play the role of the blackmailer or the highwayman, and to force compliance with their demands, however unreasonable, at the expense of the vital interests of the country. So often and so persistently did they resort to these dishonorable expedients, that the House was virtually obliged, in self-protection, and in protection of the people's interests, to adopt a system of cloture which would enable the House to do business, through limitation of debate, and conferring on the presiding officer the power to prevent dilatory tactics when in his estimation it became necessary so to do. The new rules at least made the House of Representatives an autonomous body, capable of governing its own procedure and of legislating for the people.

In the opinion of many members of the House, the existing rules are somewhat more peremptory or "arbitrary" than is actually necessary under ordinary conditions. But they are at least sufficient for extraordinary conditions, and it is not probable that they will be abandoned very soon. In all probability, if the Democrats should gain control of the House at the next Congressional election, they would, immediately upon organization, adopt the same rules as those now in force for the government of the House. These rules have proved a practical remedy for many of the serious evils which existed in the House prior to their adoption.

THE CARE OF THE ORPHAN.

Has it already come to pass that we need, in this "land of the free, and the home of the brave,"

"Where a man is a man, if he's willing to toil;
And the poorest may gather the fruits of the soil."

—has it already come to pass, in this land of boundless resources, and still more boundless ambitions, that there is a call for some one, gifted with the ability of a Dickens, to champion the cause of children who have been so unfortunate as to be bereft of their natural protectors, or are so still more unfortunate as to be at the mercy of parents or guardians who are not worthy of the name?

Only recently we have been told of the hard lot of little tots in the Southern States, who are made to toil for long hours after they should be in their beds, in cotton mills, often badly ventilated, and offering many obstacles to the proper physical, mental and moral development of these children.

More recently, a correspondent of The Times has described the sad lot of the orphan. It has been frequently stated that for every orphan child in the charitable institutions of California there are half a dozen persons anxious to adopt that child. Yes, but what sort of people are these benevolent individuals, and what are their objects in thus taking up what a majority of people would regard as a burden? The correspondent said:

"Parents who have lost a child by death sometimes seek to adopt another. A second and a somewhat larger class includes persons who are childless and who wish to adopt an orphan for what may be called show purposes. The child will be well treated, so long as it continues to please, but such persons as these are particular as to the kind of child they select. The child must have eyes of a certain color, hair of a certain texture and tint, and regular and well-shaped teeth.

"Sooner or later such a child will begin to show the less pleasing of childish traits. Like all other healthy children it will quickly show the absence of the moral training that is only conferred by the promptings of affection or of a strong sense of duty. Then it will be taken back to the institution, and its foster parents, in self-defense, will probably say that it is incorrigible.

"The third class is by far the largest of the three. It is made up of those who are looking for servants and who think that an orphan will be able to render services gratuitously that must otherwise be paid for. These people have little idea of doing anything for the child. They have a great idea that the child shall do something for them.

"Sometimes the child will get fair play, but there are plenty of persons who have no appreciation whatever of the rightful claims of the child for education, for the moral growth that comes from love and for the opportunities for self-development along childlike lines. And then it transpires that after all the child can do very little. If it be sent to school there is not much time left for work, and then, too, its clothes wear out and must be replaced, and so these children also find their way back to the institution. Sometimes they are brought back with their clothing in rags, as well as their characters."

It is true there are societies in this State whose aim is to take children from the orphanages and to place them in private homes. The secretary of the State Board of Examiners declares that these societies have not succeeded in winning the confidence of those in charge of the orphanages. So the problem grows greater, day by day, and as this correspondent says, it will continue to grow until the State more fully recognizes that it is, after all, the ultimate guardian of orphan life—of those who have nobody to care for them. In doing this the State would not be adopting a purely benevolent but rather a selfish policy, for it is easy to realize the fact that a child who is allowed to grow up wild, and perhaps become criminal, may easily cost the State a hundred times as large a sum as the amount necessary to make of him a prospective good citizen.

THE LILY HEDGE.

I would not wish thy life and mine to lie
As one lawn to another, naught between—
A straight monotony of earth and sky—
But let a hedge of lilies intervene:

The sweet reserve and courtesy of love,
(Still, thou art thou and I am I, to know)—
Yet while the lily-hedge divides above,
The roots are short, and we are one, below.

RUBY ARCHER.

THE CAPITAL OF THE STATE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, March 16.—The Alden-Anderson episode has produced a flurry in political circles. It was forced to the surface by the article written by Ray Stannard Baker for the February issue of McClure's Magazine. This article quotes the evidence of H. J. Steyckmans, formerly of the Armour Company, before the Interstate Commerce Commission to the effect that at the very time that Lieut.-Gov. Alden Anderson was publicly denying that he had received rebates he, Steyckmans, was engaged in drawing out Anderson's rebate lists in the Armour offices.

There are not many people who read McClure's Magazine in Sacramento, but the Star had the courage to reprint the paragraph and to interview Anderson as to its truth. The Lieutenant Governor was prompt with his reiterated denial. Whoever accused him taking rebates was "an unmitigated liar." The $7000 which James Watson, once president of Porter Brothers Company, admitted owing to him was not for rebates, but was an ordinary commercial debt, and much more of the same kind. Now we have Steyckmans returning to the fray with a letter direct to the editor of the Star. He repeats all that he said before and he adds something to it in the way of evidence as well as of invective. He points out that he gave his evidence under oath, that if he lied he can be prosecuted for perjury, that he was speaking of things that came within his personal knowledge, and so on to the extent of nearly a column of forcible English of which every sentence is a blow from the shoulder and delivered with a very hearty good will. He says that as a citizen of the United States he does not think that Anderson is fit to be a lawmaker and he suggests that before calling names he elevate himself "from the pool of iniquity in which he has been wallowing."

There was the same long tail to the Chicago Exposition Commission, and it finally became a public scandal. It is unfortunate that we cannot get officials who will serve the State as they would be compelled to serve a private employer."

The people of Southern California have spent their own funds, not money from the State treasury, to advertise their section, and they have found no difficulty in getting honest, efficient service for the salaries they have paid through the Chamber of Commerce and other non-political bodies. The business men composing the commercial organizations are private employers, and they get results because they hire men like Frank Wiggins to work for the public interests, and are not worked by political parasites bearing such singularly appropriate names as Filcher.

A Sardonic Jest.

The New York county committeeman who proposed a resolution calling upon the United States Senate to expel Platt and Depew, is a sardonic joker. Platt and Depew have done nothing to disqualify them for intimate official and personal association with the rest of the gang. True, Depew was "caught with the goods on him," but there are others liable to the same mishap at any moment, and this is the time for grafters to hang together, lest they be hanged separately. The only way to get Platt and Depew out of the Senate before the expiration of their terms is to transfer them to Sing Sing.

HAPPY LONG BEACH PLAN.

Modern Scheme for Attracting Young Men and Young Women Into Christian Associations.

Long Beach has heralded an innovation in connection with its work among the young women and young men of that thriving seaside city that is attracting wide attention, and which was fully noted in The Times.

The corner-stone was recently laid of a building, one side of which is to be used by the Young Men's Christian Association and the other side by the Young Women's Christian Association, and the combination suggests such common-sense utilitarianism that everybody is wondering why it has been so slow coming to the front.

"Cleveland's Young Men," a magazine published in the interest of the association at Cleveland, O., took up the circumstance in a recent issue and printed a wholesome bit of fun, "hitting off" the combination in good shape. The following excerpts are made:

"How nice! The membership of the associations under these conditions should very quickly include every young man and woman in the town. Think of how much more spirit and vim men will put into class work in the gymnasium and educational rooms, when spurred on with the thought of walking home with Mary after it is all over. Presumably Mary does better work as she thinks of meeting John at the front steps when it is time to go home.

"How slow we have been! Who can account for associations missing so many golden opportunities! What young man wouldn't join under such a combination? No more need of membership contests.

"In the account of the laying of the corner-stone the newspapers gave the whole thing away in glaring headlines. The service commenced with a selection by the young women's glee-club, 'Hold Thou My Hands.' Why certainly, girls; it's hard luck when the young men are so bashful that they have to be entreated in song to accommodate you. This is an age of progression, and if they are slow we are glad that some folks are not. All hail to the associations of Long Beach, California."

ART BUILDING—WHERE?

Mrs. Housh Says Majority Favors Site Selected by Southwest Society, and Would Join Forces.

A meeting of the joint committees from the Fine Arts Building Association and the Southwest Society of the Archaeological Institute of America was held on Friday afternoon, to discuss the situation regarding a union of forces on the great museum project.

No detail is made public, but it is understood prospects are for the coöperation of forces.

Mrs. W. H. Housh, president of the Ruskin Art Club, which originated the plan of establishing an art institute, and which subscribed $500 as a starter for the building fund, discussed the general project yesterday, with a Times reporter, and said:

"There has been a great deal of misunderstanding in regard to the plans and aims of the Fine Arts Building Association. I want to state positively that there has been no desire or inclination to force matters in any direction.

"The majority of the Fine Arts board have always been in favor of building with the Southwest Society of the Archaeological Institute of America. We have been waiting to have a minority report before taking final action.

"As yet, no better proposition has been offered than the one submitted by the Southwest Society. This society has been most courteous and generous to the Fine Arts Building Association. The majority of the Fine Arts board have believed that our people should unite in this one great enterprise—the art buildings to be a part of the museum group; and that the administration of each organization should then be independent of the other.

"The final outcome will depend on what is tendered as a substitute for the liberal offer made by the Southwest Society. We are all anxious to do what is best for the city and Southern California generally. I have no doubt that we shall find a way which will be satisfactory all around, and that the women of this great Southwest will work in harmony and happily together for this worthy enterprise. When these forces are united I believe they will build up an institution well worthy to be called their work."

DEATH OF MRS. GOETZ.

News has been received here of the sudden death of Mrs. Frances Goetz, wife of John W. Goetz, a glove merchant of South Broadway. Mrs. Goetz left Los Angeles last November for a visit with her sisters in Chicago and at the old home in New York. She was in fair health when she wrote to her husband only a few days before the death occurred, Monday last. She was with her sister, Mrs. Gus Bauer, at the Bauer Hotel, on Westchester avenue, the Bronx. The funeral took place on Thursday, the burial being at Woodlawn cemetetry, where the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Goetz was buried. Ten years ago Mr. and Mrs. Goetz lost their 18-year-old daughter and Mrs. Goetz continually grieved over this loss until her death. On account of his ill-health Mr. Goetz was unable to go back to New York for the funeral.

85c Silks 60 cents

Close to 50,000 Yards of the Famous Clifton Bond Taffetas in a Hundred Colorings

Inasmuch as we are the SOLE agents in Los Angeles for the celebrated BOND silks, and the fact that we are several hundred miles from the nearest city where they are extensively sold, WE have been elected the medium, and given the privilege, of disposing of this special lot of silks, the manufacturers believing that we can do so without disturbing the sale of their regular goods.

"Clifton Bond Taffeta," 19 inches wide, is sold throughout the United States at a fixed price of 85 cents a yard, a Bond insuring the wear being issued with every purchase. To maintain that extremely high standard of perfection throughout the makers are obliged to discard every piece of goods that is not absolutely perfect in every respect. What we offer in this sale are discarded pieces, and the name "Clifton Bond Taffeta"—which usually appears on the selvedge of the regular goods—has been removed. This lot represents the entire quantity of discarded pieces since the quality was first introduced to the trade.

The defects are not noticeable to the eye, and do not in the slightest degree affect the wearing qualities of the silks.

Our guarantee on every piece.

Fully a hundred of the most fashionable shades—some of which are displayed in our South Window—go on sale tomorrow at 60 cents a yard.

Highly desirable for street and evening gowns, drop skirts and linings.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Councilmen are quietly selecting timber for the next charter revision committee; fads and fancies in present document may be repealed.

A drastic amendment to the present civil service law, giving to department heads sole jurisdiction in dismissing employés, is advocated at the City Hall.

The Bainbridge estate has been in the Probate Court since 1896, and now one of the executors, G. C. Edwards, just missed going to jail for failing to turn over funds. Representaions have been made to the District Attorney.

J. Lopizich is seeking to bring F. Vigne, Sr., and J. C. Viole, carrying on business with him as the "Anyvo Company," into court to have the partnership dissolved, and to have an accounting.

Two duped ones have complained to the police of being tricked by M. Marin, who runs a place where cheap jewelry is auctioned, and the city prosecutor is now investigating. Prosecutions may follow.

Charles J. Gox, charged with embezzling $48 of his employers' money, pleaded guilty in the Police Court yesterday, and was sentenced to spend 180 days in jail.

AT THE CITY HALL.

COUNCIL FAVORS A NEW CHARTER.

TESTING TIMBER FOR REVISION COMMITTEE.

Pruning Knife May Remove Fads and Fancies from Present Document—Civil Service Only "Comparative Success"—Public Works Amendment Is Crude.

Councilmen and city officials generally are making a quiet poll of their friends, seeking suitable timber for the next charter revision committee.

This year has been selected as the one in which the charter revisionists shall be the precursors of a board of freeholders who are expected to prepare the draft of a brand new city charter.

But just as burnt children dread the fire so do over-ripe politicians and half-baked reformers alike dread further charter tinkering.

Some of the appendages tacked on to the present charter by overzealous revisionists have stung like Furies' fabled lash of scorpions. Conservative people have come to regard the present document as an awful example of municipal reform run mad. It contains about all the "advanced ideas" of every cult of reformers known in this country and Europe; together with a few side issues at present unidentified.

In the proposed new charter it has been suggested that we take our "advanced ideas" in homeopathic doses.

But no one has yet come forward with the temerity to advocate that the new-fangled shoots be lopped off and that in our new charter we go back to first principles.

Councilmen would like to secure a committee that would increase representation in the legislative branch from nine to fifteen members, together with a Councilmanic salary of $250 a month. They also favor a return to the original plan of permitting the Council to name the different commissions. Naturally they object to the present arrangement on account of the curtailment of legislative patronage, and, consequently, legislative influence.

Citizens in general appear to be tiring of the initiative, referendum and recall attachments. The opinion is gaining ground, however, that they will all be declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court before the board of freeholders may meet.

It is interesting to note that while these have been in effect from three years and have cost the city about $50,000 for special elections, they have accomplished just two things: illegally depriving a Councilman of his seat for three months, thus fostering an impostor on the city; and the opening of a new slaughter-house district, in a locality where the residents were a unit in their opposition to it.

The City Attorney's aids look forward with pleasant anticipations to the new charter; they hope that they can get rid of some of the burs in the present document. In its patched and mutilated condition our present charter is about as lucid and coherent as the platforms adopted by Democratic national conventions.

If about half the sections could be repealed and the remainder could be simplified and harmonized, the result would be a document which the City Attorney's office would not have to blush to defend.

Members of the Board of Public Works themselves agree that the amendment under which they are working is woefully defective. They admit that further amendments are necessary in order that the board may work without violating the charter.

To those who have been called upon to enforce its stipulations the civil service section is probably the most objectionable feature of our municipal law. The original amendment was reamended at the last general election, but the changes have not harmonized civil service conditions.

Many of the friends of the measure admit that this theoretically ideal regulation is of little or no practical value. It was formulated for the purpose of banishing petty ward politicians and place men from the City Hall.

The practical result of civil service has been just the opposite. All the place men and precinct bosses both in City Hall and Courthouse have managed to enroll themselves under the banner of civil service. They either were in the city's employ when the amendment was adopted or they have succeeded in passing the requisite examination to get on the eligible list; now they occupy reserved seats at the pie counter. There are probably more known politicians in the city's employ at the present time than ever before. And civil service is the bar to getting rid of them.

Members of the Board of Public Works have found civil service an effective barrier to the reforms they have in contemplation. After a careful inspection of the departments over which the Board has charge a commissioner recently expressed himself as follows:

"I am in favor of adopting the same rule in civil service here that the government has adopted. I refer to the one permitting the head of a department to discharge a man under him without the formality of a trial.

"This rule worked a needed reform in the government service. It came from the President, a distinguished and ardent advocate of civil service. If it is good enough for him it is good enough for us.

"I favor civil service in so far as it relates to the employment of men, but after they are employed I believe that the head of a department should have more discretion in their dismissal. I am not prepared to say that I shall advocate this amendment to the charter at the present time; but I am giving the question my careful consideration and my inclinations are in that direction.

"This much I will say; I do not regard civil service in its present form a positive success; at best it is only comparative."

The personnel of the charter revision committee will decide to a large extent the character of our new charter. It has been suggested that the civic and commercial bodies be requested to submit names for the committee. This suggestion has not as yet received the indorsement of the Council.

READY FOR TRIP.

WILL VISIT OWENS VALLEY.

To Owens River and back in nine days is the programme of the Board of Public Works. But for inclement weather the start would have been made yesterday. Confident that the rainstorm will be over by the middle of this week the board yesterday filed with the City Clerk a request of the Council for a fortnight's leave of absence.

They have the promise from Superintendent Mulholland to make the trip by a combination of steam cars and automobiles in nine days, provided of course they do not run afoul a cloud burst in Red Rock Cañon.

On Monday the board will act on the application of Hill street and Sunset boulevard property owners for combination city and railway tunnels connecting First and Hill street direct with Hill and Sunset. While the members are in the valley the Council and the property owners will have an opportunity to work out the details of the plan.

The board will be accompanied on its trip by members of the Water Commission. Mayor McAleer has not yet decided whether he will go or stay. If the Chief Executive is a member of the party a representative of the Council will probably be included. The legislators are apparently fearful that the Mayor might seduce the Board of Public Works.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

PERILOUS FIX OF EXECUTOR.

CHARGED WITH MAKING AWAY WITH TRUST FUNDS.

G. C. Edwards, Handling Estate of John B. Bainbridge of Pasadena, an Englishman Who Left His Property to Friend in London, Accused. Shortage of Four Thousand Dollars.

George C. Edwards, an Englishman and erstwhile resident of Pasadena, narrowly escaped being sent to jail by Judge Gibbs for contempt, and is to be called to account in a criminal proceeding inaugurated by the District Attorney.

Edwards has drifted into trouble by mixing up his own funds with those of a trust estate, which has been in court ever since 1896, when the late Judge Clark had the first whack at it. It was the estate of John B. Bainbridge, an English gentleman who had been living at Pasadena, and died there January 19, 1896.

Bainbridge had, so far as known, no living kinsmen, and in his will George C. Edwards and Charles Wooster were named as executors.

It was in Wooster's house that he died, and Bainbridge left $100 to the head of the family, and remembrances to Mrs. Wooster and the children out of his personal effects—jewelry and so on. The terms of the will were simple and explicit—that the real estate be sold, and the money in the bank, with that realized from the sale of the property, remitted to Robert Carr Selfe of Whitehall Place and Overton, London, Eng. The real estate consisted of unimproved land at La Cañada, property at Azusa, a lot at Pasadena, and also a lot in this city—altogether valued at about $16,000.

It was specifically set out in the will that the executors were to act unhandicapped by any court in their realizing upon the estate, and therein was again illustrated the mistake so often made by a testator in abandoning good business principles when dealing with friends.

There was so much trouble and bother over the estate that Wooster retired as executor in 1898, and Edwards held on alone for a time. Apparently there was no one to stir him up and so the administration of the estate dragged, until C. White Mortimer, British Vice-Consul, came upon the scene as attorney for Selfe. By that time things were pretty well mixed, and the chaotic condition continued until in the summer of last year Mortimer was appointed administrator with the will annexed. Things had reached a crisis, and just before the British Consul stepped to the front Edwards resigned his executorship. Mortimer was enabled to hold the appointment only by Selfe, in England, having transferred to him a one-hundredth share and interest in his bequest, thus making him, as a resident heir in Los Angeles, entitled to administer upon the estate.

An overhauling of the accounts developed that Edwards was short considerable. Property had been sold and the proceeds were not fully accounted for. The shortage as at present estimated is $4382.80. When Edwards realized just where he stood he consented to make good. In order to do so, however, he had to wait for the realizing of certain interests which he said he had in an estate in England. From time to time the matter was carried over to permit of the arrival of this English money. Last fall Edwards was cited to appear in the Probate Court, and since then the citation has been hanging over him.

Meantime the British Vice-Consul visited England and investigated the representations of Edwards. He found the probability of his receiving money from any estate whatever very remote and the chances of any of his relatives coming to his rescne were also very problematical. This is the report made to the court upon his return.

Now Edwards has come again before Judge Gibbs, and he stood confessed a defaulter. His excuses and procrastination had come to an end and he was up against the unpalatable truth that he had frittered away trust funds, a criminal offense, and was also in contempt of court for not having handed over the money in his possession. The court could have sent Edwards to jail on a contempt charge; but no one having interest in the estate desired that, and Judge Gibbs conceded that sending him to jail would not enable him to pay. He concluded that the merits of the case can be better reached by taking the matter to the District Attorney.

It is barely possible that even this criminal prosecution will not be begun as Mortimer and those he represents want their money, and have no interest and can derive no satifaction back in England in thinking that through their means someone is languishing in the State prison in California. But the public of this city and State have interest in the manipulation of trust funds by irresponsible men, and Judge Gibbs may insist upon action.

Mortimer while in England dug up a person named William Austin, of Fenny-Stratford, who claims interest in the Bainbridge estate, and so the case that Judges Clark, Shaw, Wilbur, Conrey and Gibbs have had a hack at may take a new lease of life—if there is anything left in the estate worth contesting for.

ENGINEER CRIPPLED.

NOW SUES CONTRACTOR.

When an Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé train ran off the rails in the alleyway close to Colorado street, Pasadena, on August 3, 1905, it was found that the accident had been brought about by a contractor engaged in building operations allowing loose earth and stones to lie on the track. George P. Luce, the engineer of the train, was injured. Yesterday Luce filed suit against Andrew Holloway to recover $10,000 as damages for alleged permanent disabilities, and for $300 expended for medical services through four months. He sets out that his toes and part of one foot were almost severed from his leg, and that besides suffering great pain, he is incapacitated from longer serving as a locomotive engineer.

PUFF POWDER FACTORY.

SUIT FOR ACCOUNTING.

Three old-time citizens are at loggerheads on account of attempting to embark in a business in which an "art name" and reputation of quality tell for more than the intrinsic merit of the article itself. John Lopizich, Fernand Vigne, Sr., and Jules C. Viole thought there was money to be made in the manufacture of cold cream, theatrical rouge-gras, and other preparations that come packed in sachet smelling packages from the East and from France, and command a price out of proportion to actual cost.

The trio agreed in April, 1900, to form a partnership under the name of the "Anyvo Company," Lopizich and Viole putting in $2000 each, and Vigne $1000, and each agreeing furthermore that he would give of his time and experience to make the manufacture of face preparations a financial and artistic success. But it was up-hill work, for it is hard to make purchasers believe that the fancy sweet-smelling packet from Paris is really not as good as the home product, though it costs about three times as much. In January, 1901, Vigne dropped out of the firm—that is, he didn't come around any more, and when the other two partners came to total up results it was found the partnership had lost about $1000. In making up this deficit, Vigne didn't come to time, and now Lopizich has brought suit against both Vigne and Viole to have the partnership dissolved, and for an accounting. He claims that there is about $300 coming to him.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

SULLIVAN SENTENCED.—John E. Sullivan was sentenced yesterday for burglarizing the place he was paid to watch. He was janitor of the hall of the Eagle Association on East Third street, and left the door open so that his two companions, Hoag and Pedan, could get in and rob. They did enter, broke the cash drawer, and took $201. Sullivan, a young man, was sent to Folsom for five years by Judge Smith. Pedan tied up the jury on his first trial, and is to be tried again. Hoag turned State's evidence and will probably get off lightly.

OUT OF CLASS.—Robert F. Tabb yesterday was allowed to plead guilty to the charge of petty instead of grand larceny, for having stolen a bicycle from J. E. Dunbar at Long Beach. The young man came here from Louisville, Ky., a few weeks before for his health, and also to establish himself in this city. His money ran out and he was in dire straits. Tabb comes of good family and made a gentlemanly appearance in court, stating the facts of the case with due modesty. The court sentenced him to 120 days in the County Jail.

"HOPPED" A BICYCLE.—F. W. Foley also pleaded guilty to petty larceny for having stolen a bicycle belonging to Robert T. Wilson. Foley was not so modest as his predecessor, for he maintained that he had bought the wheel, but none of his friends had been able to locate the man who sold it.

DENVERITES ACCUSED.

As a sequel to the prosecution and conviction of Manager Whitmore of the Hotel Alexandria on a charge of having game in his possession during the closed season, Sanderson Bros., commission merchants of Denver, Colo., who are alleged to have furnished the game to the hotel, may be prosecuted. The authorities here have notified the Denver authorities of the evidence in their possession, and are awaiting developments.

DOPED AND ROBBED, HE SAYS.

F. J. Green was arrested yesterday on complaint of William Aledria of No. 413 Lake Shore Drive, who charges that Green gave him "knockout" drops, and then robbed him of $50 and his watch. The detectives are investigating the case, and meantime Green is being held in jail.

SEEKS HER BROTHER.

Mary M. Dillon, of No. 132 Lake street, Chicago, appealed to the Los Angeles police yesterday by letter to aid her in locating her brother, Edward J. Dillon, who is known to be in this city. His mother and sister have not been able to hear from him for three years.

THE....
Pianola Piano

There can be no better time to come to a final decision as to the purchase of a piano than now. Think of how many occasions the piano will brighten, how your family, gathered together night after night, will enjoy the late popular songs, the light opera hits, as well as the old master pieces. It will prove an educational factor of wonderful merit, and any one can afford to own a PIANOLA PIANO, for we sell it on very moderate monthly payments.

The genuine Pianola is found only in the pianos made and controlled by the Aeolian Company.

Advertising a Bank

Our purpose in advertising is to advise the public concerning the kind and quality of service we render; the policy we have adopted and the methods we pursue in the conduct of our business, in order that an intelligent judgment may be formed concerning what services we are prepared to render, and with what accuracy, speed, convenience and reliability we render them. We are offering to the public the services of a highly organized Banking House, with its Banking and Trust Departments developed to a high degree of efficiency. We expect to receive the patronage of the public only in the degree in which we merit it. Therefore our endeavor is to maintain the highest degree of efficiency in every transaction.

In the statements which are to appear in this space from day to day, we shall attempt to state plainly and frankly what we do and how we do it, believing that the facilities and service of the Trust Company are valuable to many people, and that the Trust Company is a necessary and valuable factor in the financial development of the community.

Merchants Trust Company
Capital $350,000.00
209-211 SOUTH BROADWAY

The Pacific Purchasing Company Exposes a Deliberate Attempt to Deceive the Public.

Below is printed a portion of the introductory to a page advertisement of a local furniture dealer, which appeared in the Los Angeles "Times" Sunday, March 11th. A more deliberate or malicious attempt to deceive the public has never before come to the writer's notice. Talk about "Truthful Advertising!" It's a desecration of commercial ethics, a perversion of truth, a dastardly effort to fool the people!

In the name of Truth and Justice we entreat you to read the following—every word of it:

"Dealers Pledge Themselves to Uphold Prices."

Exact extract from a printed copy of bylaws of the California Furniture Dealers' Association, taken from Section VIII, Page 15.

"We further pledge ourselves not to sell or offer for sale any article at a lower price than that established by the association, nor in any manner whatsoever lower the association prices, either by gifts or by selling or offering for sale two or more articles at a lump price; but to sell each and every article upon which a price has been established at a separate and distinct price, and so bill the goods."

Now Read This: From another advertisement of the same dealer, which appeared in the "Express" March 13th:

"A Declaration of Independence"

"This store stands for free competition, free commercial intercourse and fair play. It stands for opposition to all organizations whose intent is to restrict commerce by unlawful and illegitimate methods.

"It stands for truthful advertising, clean methods and progress."

Ye Gods! What next? "Truthful Advertising"—"Clean Methods"—"Progress!" And people are expected to believe such bosh!

Here is the Naked Truth; Read It

The quotation—"We further pledge ourselves, etc."—was taken from a prospectus issued by a proposed Furniture Dealers' Association to be organized in San Francisco, and has no more bearing on the so-called local "Furniture Trust" than the Lord Mayor of London has on the City Council of Los Angeles. Yet it is plainly obvious that the advertisement was intended to mislead the public, making it appear that the extract was from the bylaws of the local organization.

And this is called "fair play," "truthful advertising," "clean methods," "progress." Would you consider it safe to trade at such an establishment? Well, hardly!

Our Methods-- In Contradistinction to Above

The Pacific Purchasing Company—formed by five of the largest furniture houses in Los Angeles—was organized one year ago, with a single purpose in view—of saving money for itself and its patrons. The experiment has proven successful—beyond the promoter's expectations. Following is a statement from Mr. W. A. Barker, president of the Pacific Purchasing Company:

"We find that we can save about ten per cent. on furniture—by buying for five stores instead of for one store. Formerly we went to Rockford for combination bookcases and desks; to Grand Rapids for another class of furniture—while some other point would be the center for something else.

"All these purchases had to be shipped to Chicago—or some other central point—to make up a car; which made extra handling and additional freight charges. Now we buy—through the Pacific Purchasing Company—everything in carload lots, shipping from all points to Los Angeles direct.

"And we save in other ways. Suppose five houses, each conducting its own buying organization, should send a furniture man, a carpet man and a drapery man East twice a year. This would mean thirty trips every year—at an approximate cost of Fifteen Thousand Dollars! The Pacific Purchasing Company sends three men, twice a year—six trips in all—to buy for Five Stores, at a cost of Three Thousand Dollars—a clean saving of Twelve Thousand Dollars in one item alone.

"Another great advantage: By pooling their purchases, and each of the five stores drawing from one common warehouse, the same volume of business can be done on considerably less stock. As an example: Office desks, for instance—in order to get best prices and lowest freight rates—must be handled in carload lots. Now suppose a single dealer orders a carload of desks—as soon as five or six of a certain price are sold the assortment is broken, and he must order another car—and being so far from market a dealer will sometimes have four or five carloads (about 300 desks) on hand at one time—making a total of fifteen hundred desks for five stores.

"The Pacific Purchasing Company—buying for five stores—carries from one to two cars of desks, each store having different styles (aside from staples,) insuring a better assortment, and from Twenty-five to Thirty Thousand Dollars less stock than the five stores would be compelled to carry if each bought independently of the others.

This proposition applies to everything of a staple nature—not only in Furniture, but Carpets and Draperies as well.

Less Money Invested; Less Insurance; Less Handling; Less Expense; Lower Prices.

"A large portion of the savings thus effected are passed on to our patrons, in the way of lowered prices. This fact has been forcibly illustrated by the large number of Reduction Sales conducted at the different so-called "Trust Stores" during the past year—events which have saved the Los Angeles public many thousands of dollars."

The furniture sale now being conducted at the Niles-Pease store, and the drapery sale at Barker Brothers, are striking examples of our ability and willingness to divide profits with our patrons. Don't buy blindly. Look about a bit. Find out things for yourself. Get posted. We invite comparison.

LEADS ALL IN WASH BILLS.

Los Angeles the Paradise of the Laundryman.

Cleanliness Before Godliness Here in a Way.

Women Get the Best Bargains, Men the Worst.

More money is expended for laundry work each week in Los Angeles, in proportion to its size, than in any other city of the United States.

Eliminating street railway systems and steam railroads, the laundry industry, in point of business transacted and men employed, leads all other enterprises in Los Angeles.

While cleanliness is generally accepted as being secondary to godliness, the amount of money expended here in one year for the washing of wearing apparel would rebuild all the one hundred and seventy-odd churches within the city. Forty thousand dollars each week is paid to the laundries by residents and tourists, or a total of over two million dollars each year.

The lead over other cities in these respects is accounted for in the vast number of tourists, the large number of people who reside permanently in hotels, and also to some extent to the incomparable climate.

The tourist who comes to Los Angeles has little choice in the manner in which his clothes are cleansed. The private washerwoman is hard to find and the steam laundry is on the spot. The hotel resident has no opportunity to give employment to the family laundress and his apparel finds its way inevitably to the steam or Chinese laundry.

ALWAYS SHIRTWAIST SEASON.

Warm weather brings out summer clothing, and much of woman's summer apparel is wash goods. Any woman knows that her laundry list is larger and represents more money in warm weather than in cold, and that in Los Angeles the shirtwaist season lasts the year round.

The $40,000 worth of laundry work done here each week is turned out by fifty-eight laundries. Of these nineteen are steam, employing white labor. The other thirty-nine are Chinese washhouses.

While in point of number the Chinese exceed the steam laundries, the number of their employés is much smaller.

The Chinese laundries employ approximately 500 persons and the steam laundries over fifteen hundred. As the Chinese do practically all their work by hand while the white laborers are aided by steam and machinery, the work performed by the Chinese represents only a small proportion of the work.

Of the thousands who patronize steam laundries few there are but believe they pay too much for the return given.

For every dollar paid out for laundry work, an average of about 30 cents goes to the driver who calls for and delivers the clothes. Ten cents more is expended in insuring him the return of all his garments, through the sorting and distributing of the garments according to the markings. About 10 cents goes to the owner of the laundry, and the other 50 cents pays wages, and for starch, soap, water, fuel, gas, insurance, depreciation of plant and other running expenses.

LOSS ON WOMEN'S WORK.

These are average figures given by a local laundryman. It is his assertion that at the rates charged the washing of women's apparel is absolutely profitless and oftentimes a source of loss. The profits in the business are in men's apparel, such as collars and cuffs.

"Take a woman's shirtwaist, for instance," says this man. "The woman, as a rule, thinks she pays an exorbitant price for laundering it when we charge her twenty cents—the minimum on waists. As a matter of fact we actually lose one to 2 cents on every shirtwaist laundered. It costs us 7½ cents simply to iron it. Six and one-half cents go to the driver and 2 cents for sorting and distributing, while the washing, drying, starching and other incidentals more than take up the remaining 4 cents. We should be well pleased if waists and many other kinds of women's garments did not come to the laundry at all."

According to the same authority, the prevalent idea that the mutilation of garments in a laundry is due to the use of acids in washing them is wholly wrong. Modern laundry methods absolutely exclude the use of this means of cleansing clothes. The clothes are washed in soapsuds having properties no more deleterious to fabrics than the soapsuds prepared by the ordinary washerwoman.

The rips and other damage noted in garments occur wholly in handling, and it is declared newer methods and modern machinery are rapidly eliminating these mutilations.

The steam laundry is a comparatively new institution. The first steam laundry in the West, it is said, was established in Chicago only thirty years ago.

ODDITIES OF BUSINESS.

The laundry business has a number of peculiarities, notably the manner in which business is obtained. The real customers of the average laundry are its drivers; not the people whose clothing it washes. A few laundries attempt to own their own wagons and pay their drivers salaries, but the generally adopted method is to pay the drivers a commission. The drivers own their own horses and wagons, and in fact own their "routes." It is often possible for a driver to quit working for one laundry, enter the employ of another and turn over all the business on his route to his new employer. It is possible to do this, too, without the average patron of the driver knowing the difference.

The purchaser pays for the horse and wagon and gives the driver a bonus for the route. Nothing is paid to the laundry. It was this feature of the business that resulted within the last year in the building up of what is now one of the leading laundries in Los Angeles. A combination of laundries was formed, one of its objects being the reducing of commissions paid to drivers.

A number of drivers took stock in a new concern in retaliation and took over their customers to the new laundry. As a result the threatened cut was only partly successful, and commissions have been maintained at from 30 to 33 1-3 per cent., although few of the drivers retained their stock in the institution they helped to found.

MARGHERITA WILL BE SAFE.

QUEEN OF ITALY NEED NOT FEAR RED-FLAG VIOLENCE.

Fear That Royal Automobilist May Be Prevented from Touring America Not Well Founded—Dr. Roversi Believes New Jersey and Illinois Anarchists Cannot Bluff Her.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Great interest was excited in Italian circles yesterday by the publication in the Tribune that proposed demonstrations by anarchists of Paterson, N. J., and Springfield, Ill., might prevent the Queen Dowager Margherita of Italy from making her automobile trip to this country.

Dr. Luigi Roversi, who was the private secretary of the late Gen. di Sesnola, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, is perhaps the only Italian in this city who has met the Queen Dowager. Regarding her keen interest in the United States, her strong determination to visit this country, and the proposed demonstrations of anarchists, Dr. Roversi said last evening to a Tribune reporter:

"In the summer of 1902, when I was in Turin as a delegate of the United States Commission to the International Exposition of Modern Decorative Art, I met Queen Margherita and had the honor of receiving and accompanying Her Majesty several times through the American section. On each occasion I remarked the enthusiastic admiration that the Queen showed for the American exhibits. She declared that the American section was an unexpected revelation to her. I was therefore not surprised when I read in the Tribune that Queen Margherita had decided to make the trip to the United States. She speaks English fluently and she has among her acquaintances in this country several who met her at court and enjoyed her friendship. It is well known that during the reign of King Humbert the Americans were the favorites at the Court of the Quirinal, as they are now.

"I do not believe the news of the proposed anarchist demonstrations will deter the Queen from visiting America. She has traveled by automobile through Spain and Holland and part of France. This traveling by automobile seems to be the only distraction the Queen can find since the assassination of King Humbert. She is accustomed to the fact that extremists are writing against her son, Victor Emmanuel, and realizes that these attacks are the price of royalty.

Queen Margherita is charitable, pious, liberal and democratic. Above all, she never took part during King Humbert's life in the politics of the kingdom. So I do not see why she should be made a target for anarchists. As to any personal violence to the Queen, if she should finally decide to come here. I firmly believe nothing of the kind would occur. I believe the acts of violence generally attributed to anarchists as a body as the result of a conspiracy are the work of individuals, who act on their own volition. I do not believe the anarchists of Paterson or elsewhere are responsible for the assassination of King Humbert on July 29, 1900. The act of Brescia has not been proved to be the result of a conspiracy."

SOCIAL NOTES OF WEEK END.

Farewell Functions for the Holes and Browns.

Friends Show Honors Prior to Foreign Travel.

Parties and Other Events of Belated Report.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hole of No. 1906 West Sixth street and Mr. and Mrs. Julius A. Brown are planning to go abroad soon. Mr. and Mrs. Brown will start April 1 for New York and the Holes will not start until some time in May. In honor of Mrs. Hole and Mrs. Brown a number of farewell compliments have been arranged.

Friday afternoon Mrs. Hole herself entertained with a charming luncheon for Mrs. Brown. The table was decked with pink and white sweet peas arranged in cloisonné vases and maidenhair ferns were scattered lightly over the table. Those who sat at the table were: Mmes. Julius Brown, Milbank Johnson, Valentine Peyton, A. J. Wallace, Perry Whiting, J. M. Walters, George Bayly, Frederick Fischer and Stedman.

Saturday Mrs. William Durham of Ingraham street entertained a company of women friends at luncheon in honor of Mrs. Hole and Mrs. Brown and on Thursday Mrs. George Bayly will give a luncheon, while Saturday Mrs. Frederick Fischer of South Bonnie Brae street will give a luncheon for these same two women.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinkle Here.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hinkle of Cincinnati, with their daughter, Miss Marie Theresa Hinkle, have arrived in Los Angeles from San Francisco, making the trip in their touring car. They are staying at the Hotel Alexandria, and will later go to Hotel Green, Pasadena, to remain a month or so, after which they will start for a tour abroad.

Gillelen Party.

One of the smart affairs of the week was the card party given on Friday afternoon by Mrs. George F. Gillelen of No. 1332 Arapahoe street in honor of Miss Stober of Shelby, O., and the Misses Black of Pittsburgh. The house was artistically decorated in smilax and sweet peas.

The first prize was won by Miss Ethylwin Walker, the second by Mrs. J. B. Rowe and the third by Miss Lillian Brown.

Guests at the pretty function were: Mmes. E. A. Featherstone, Signor, Burton, J. B. Shaw, Warren Gillelen, Frank Gillelen, J. B. Gwynne, George W. Walker, Addison Lysle, Jr., A. W. Gump, W. I. Hollingsworth, K. Malloy, Lillian Brown, A. W. Gump, W. M. Garnett, Lewis Williams, Harry Botsford, Frank Hudson, W. P. Story, Cecil Brock, Ernest Taylor, Warner Wolp, David Weh, Robert Kenney, Vivian, H. L. Westbrook, J. T. Stewart, S. M. Haskell, W. W. D. Turner, Charles Fife, P. B. Spears, C. W. Fish, W. W Beckett, McCrary, Charles Ingraham, Laura Coucg, Lillian Reynoldson, Flint, H. H. Cockley, J. B. Rowe, Bowman, G. D. Kimbles' Farewell.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Kimble, who recently eloped in a most romantic manner, gave a farewell dinner on Friday evening to a number of friends at the Hotel Lankershim. Scarlet carnations decked the table and covers were laid for: Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Story, Mr. and Mrs. Daring, Mrs. Arbuckle, Miss Ella Arnold, Dr. O'Leary and Cary Parsons.

St. Patrick's Party.

Miss Josehpine Kurry gave a St. Patrick's party Friday evening at No. 911 West Twentieth street. Smilax and green ribbons were decorations and about thirty guests were entertained with Irish stories and songs.

Wood's House Party.

Sam Wood entertained a number of friends recently at Alamitos Bay with a week end house party. Dancing, sailing and bathing made the days pass all too quickly. Guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Hacker of Denver, Mrs. Schleicher of Indiana; Mrs. Marsteller of Lafayette, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Hollister Sturgess, Mrs. Arbuckle, Mrs. Gundrey of Los Angeles, Mrs. Poindexter of Topeka, Kan.; Mrs. Chase, Philadelphia; Miss Ella Arnold of Montana, Miss Daisy Ryone of Los Angeles and Messrs. Schleicher, Roberts Ryone, Cary Parsons, Aldis, Harry Wood, Germain, Muzzy, Mervin and Master Richard Poindexter.

Six-and-Six.

Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Milligan of No. 1121 West Twentieth street entertained the Six-And-Six Whist Club Friday evening with a progressive whist party. The decorations, score cards and refreshments were very unique and suggested St. Patrick's Day. First prizes were awarded to Mrs. James F. Thompson and Mrs. J. B. Mitchel, while consolations were carried away by D. W. Field and Mrs. D. Wiebers. Members present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Mitchel, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Humphreys, Mr. and Mrs. D. Wiebers, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Field and Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Milligan.

The club will be entertained by Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Mitchel at their home No. 2104 South Vermont avenue in two weeks.

Married Merry Makers.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Thompson of No. 3912 San Pedro street entertained Saturday evening the members of the Married Merry Makers.

Those present were: Messrs. and Mmes. D. T. Mitchell, M. Milbach, H. Collins, J. R. Prevost, J. B. Mitchel, R. C. Flourney; Mrs. J. W. Alexander and Mr. Foulks.

For Sioux City Visitors.

Judge and Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. Charles Donovan and Mrs. Lianian Ayers of Sioux City, Iowa, who were living in Los Angeles two months, have been receiving much attention socially. A series of delightful afternoons at cards of old Sioux City friends was concluded at Mrs. C. E. Wilburs, No. 768 Ottawa street Thursday afternoon. The house was beautifully decorated with flowers, compliments of the hostess's mother of Pasadena. Light refreshments were served at the close of the game. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. Furgerson and Ada Webster.

Mrs. C. H. Kellogg of No. 1511 Bond street entertained at cards in honor of Mmes. Kennedy, Donovan and Ayers of Sioux City, Wednesday afternoon. Prizes were awarded Mrs. H. H. Case and Mrs. Lowry.

Complimentary to Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. Donovan and Mrs. Ayers of Sioux City and Mrs. Rufus Clark of Minneapolis, an informal afternoon at six handed eucher "the Sioux City game" was greatly enjoyed at Mrs. Harvey Furgerson's residence No. 416 Westlake avenue.

Judge and Mrs. Kennedy and daughter Ruth, Mrs. Charles Donovan, Mrs. Lillian B. Ayers left Saturday for San Francisco. They will visit Salt Lake, Denver and various places before returning to Sioux City, Iowa, May 1.

St. Patrick's Day Dinner.

Mrs. Frederick J. Cressey of No. 1644 Gramercy Place, entertained last evening, in honor of the well-known temperance lecturer, Francis Murphy, and his wife. Other guests were Rev. Dr. S. A. Northrup and wife, Rev. Charles C. Pierce and wife, and Mrs. A. M. Woodson of St. Joseph, Mo. The large dining-room was beautifully decorated in green, ribbons of which were artistically draped from chandelier to walls, while the lace curtains were profusely festooned in green. Each guest wore a boutonnier tied with green, while a bow of the same color ornamented the place cards, as also the table ware.

The honored guest was born in Ireland seventy years ago, and came to America at the age of 16. During the dinner hour he and Mrs. Murphy were the recipients of many compliments and cordial good wishes, to which he made a happy response, showing a full appreciation of all that had been said and done.

Poppy Wedding.

Wednesday was the day of one of Upland's novel and pretty weddings, that of Miss Olive Farlow and Thomas Smith at the home of the bride's parents, Nineteenth and Euclid avenue. The front veranda was a bower of date palms and golden poppies, while the steps and entrance were carpeted with Navajos. Immense banks of poppies inside made a soft golden glow about the living rooms. In the dining-room was the gift table, on which the most beautiful presents were found, among them a handsome silver table set and a Haviland dinner set, the gift of the bride's parents. At 2 o'clock, to the strains of Lohengrin's "Wedding March," played by Miss Daisy Persons, the bridal party met beneath a bell of solid wild poppies, suspended from a canopy of fan palms. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Gushee of Ontario Episcopal Church, the ring service being used. The bride wore a going-away gown of gray and carried a chatelaine bouquet of wild yellow violets. After the ceremony, a dainty bridal luncheon was served in the dining-room.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith left on the 3:14 o'clock Salt Lake train en route for an extended honeymoon in San Francisco and vicinity. They willy be at home to their friends after April 15, in their Upland home on second avenue. Those persent at the wedding were the relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Bisbitt, Mr. and Mrs. Potter and daughter, Catherine, Mrs. Persons and daughter, Daisy, of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Crawford and daughter, Alice, of Tustin. The groom's brother, Hampton Smith of Upland, Miss Vernie Hayden of Upland, and Miss Grayce Myers of Long Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Stilson have moved from West Twelfth street into their new cosy little bungalow at No. 2930 Hobart boulevard.

Mrs. J. F. Giles of No. 1627 Orange street entertained the "As You Like It" Club at a dainty luncheon, and drive whist Friday. Place cards were green ornamented with wee harps in gold, and score cards were gold harps and shamrocks. Both were the work of the guest of honor, Mrs. Agnes Dunn of Minneapolis.

Thackeberry Party.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Thackeberry entertained with a St. Patrick's party Friday evening. Games and music passed the evening, and the rooms were decorated with ferns, shamrocks and callas.

Notes and Personals.

Former Judge and Mrs. S. Goodwin of Chicago and Naperville, Ill., left Friday afternoon for home, after a four days' visit with Rev. Dr. W. R. Goodwin, No. 944 Valencia street, their father, who has been quite ill for the past two months.

Moore's Box Party.

William Moore entertained at the Mason Operahouse on Friday evening with a box party followed by a supper at the Angelus Grill. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Knapp, Miss Maude Lampman Sargent and Charles Stimson.

Miss Harvey's Parties.

Miss Emma I. Harvey of No. 1547 West Pico gave two very delightful "500" parties, one Wednesday evening and the other on Thursday afternoon. The decorations were entirely Japanese, being sprays of cherry and peach blossoms and handsome lanterns. Scores were kept on Japanese "post cartes." The handsome prizes also were of Japanese make. The fortunate winners in the evening were Miss Bessie Thaw, having highest score, received a beautiful bronze jardinere. Mrs. Samuel S. Sheppard, second honors, a brass vase. William J. Scholl won highest honors among the gentlemen, and received a dainty Japanese inlaid cribbage board and cards. Mr. Lewis Clarke Carlisle, second highest, won a dainty Japanese cup and saucer.

In the afternoon Mrs. Snediker won an exquisite Imaro Jardinere; Mrs. H. Greenfield carried off as second honors a beautiful Japanese brass vase. Both afternoon and evening, Mrs. J. M. Jones gave charming solos on the harp. The following were guests: Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clarke Carlisle, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Kinsey, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Sheppard, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Giles, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. P. Smith, Dr. and Mrs. Will Smith, Dr. and Mrs. A. M. McCollough, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Neuer, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Judd, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Scholl, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harding, Mr. and Mrs. George Pounder, Mr. and Mrs. George Noyes, Mr. and Mrs. George Ruddy, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Binford, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Nichols, Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Newton, Dr. Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Faulkner, Mrs. W. A. Ramsey, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Pease, Mrs. Laura Armstrong, Mr. Clarence Armstrong, Mr. Maurice Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Gilmore, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. McKeever, Dr. Helen Woodroffe, Mrs. Agnes Dunn, Miss Casement, Mrs. G. Dana, Miss Ellen H. Wheeler, Mrs. E. Barber, Mrs. B. M. Prescott, Miss Rose Prescott, Mrs. E. Snell, Mrs. Rollo Snell, Mrs. L. H. Dutton, Mrs. W. E. Dutton, Mrs. W. H. Brewer, Mrs. O. C. Sens, Mrs. Judy, Mrs. W. Burns, Mrs. H. Barry, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Carrie Turner, Mrs. Sanborn, Miss Francis Lawton, Mrs. M. M. Symmes, Mrs. H. Morris, Mrs. Carlos Salinas, Mrs. H. Greenfield, Mrs. Snediker, Mrs. Leighton, Miss Fletcher, Mrs. Mark Turnbull, Mrs. J. Sutcliff, Miss Rose Prescott, Miss Edith Gray, Miss Grace Helen Pease, Miss Minnie Knapp, and Mrs. William English.

Mrs. Moody Is Guest.

Mrs. Charles H. Moody of Chicago, who is visiting Mrs. Edward W. Cason of No. 1145 Elden avenue, was the complimented guest for whom Miss Lillian R. Moody entertained at luncheon yesterday at Hotel Hollywood.

The handsome dining-room was effectively decorated with palms and ferns, while the table was beautifully adorned with immense clusters of spring blossoms and sprays of asparagus ferns extended from a floral centerpiece to dainty little books decorated with a spray of carnations across the open page which marked the places of the twenty-five guests who were present.

THIEF'S CONSCIENCE HURT.

In order to keep his standing in the "pickpocket's union," the thief who robbed John P. Taylor, a blind man, of his watch and chain several days ago returned the property yesterday.

Taylor was making his way to the sidewalk from his room at No. 320 South Main street when he was stopped by some person who said: "I stole your watch and chain the other day but have not felt right about it since. Here it is, I couldn't sleep while I had it and am glad to be rid of it."

When he realized what was happening the blind man made an effort to seize the fellow, but the thief kept out of reach.

Indigestion!

Stomach trouble is not really a sickness, but a symptom. It is a symptom that a certain set of nerves is ailing. Not the voluntary nerves that enable you to walk and talk and act—but the AUTOMATIC STOMACH NERVES over which your mind has no control.

I have not room here to explain how these tender, tiny nerves control and operate the stomach. How worry breaks them down and causes indigestion. How misuse wears them out and causes dyspepsia. How neglect may bring on kidney, heart and other troubles through sympathy. I have not room to explain how these nerves may be reached and strengthened and vitalized and made stronger by a remedy I spent years in perfecting—now known by physicians and druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative (Tablets or Liquid.) I have not room to explain how this remedy, by removing the cause, usually puts a certain end to indigestion, belching, heartburn, insomnia, nervousness, dyspepsia. All of these things are fully explained in the book I will send you free when you write. Do not fail to send for the book. It tells how the solar plexus governs digestion and a hundred other things every one ought to know—for all of us, at some time or other, have indigestion. With the book I will send free my "Health Token," an intended passport to good health.

For the free book, and the "Health Token," you must address Dr. Shoop, Box 2970, Racine, Wis. State which book you want.

A walk through the various sections of our store will quickly impress you with the perplexing difficulties of such a tremendous stock. Is it any wonder we'd rather even lose money on such delicate wares, than convenience and expense of moving them all to our new location? We've thrown aside all regard for many cases for cost price, in our determined endeavor to reduce this stock to the limit—before our must now soon be.

charge of heavy buck and slugs thundering into the tiling of the ramada roof. Some of the rurales had a narrow escape from serious injury from the falling tiles.

The wounded bandit fell in a bubbling pool of his own blood. It was found that bullets had worked one of their singular freaks as they chugged into his body. Two entered the left side of the neck, one an inch above the other. Two more entered the left breast, one also an inch above the other.

DESPERADOES ESCAPE.

In the confusion he was left lying there for a time while the defenders of the hacienda rushed to the gate after the bandits. They, however, had disappeared into the chaparral. They were heard firing a little later; it proved afterward they were shooting at a courier who had been sent out to rouse the rurales.

When they came back to the wounded bandit, he was begging piteously for water. They withheld it for a time, trying to make him confess the names of the other bandits. He said his own name was Jesus Rodriguez, but he would not tell the names of his pals.

Finally an idea was hit on to drag a confession from him. Attached to the hacienda was a little parochia, or church, where priests' robes were kept in readiness for the occasional visits of a holy father.

Rodriguez was asked if he didn't want to make a last confession, and a son of Gen. Tarin was dressed in these priestly garments to receive it. He knelt by the side of the dying man and the bandit began his confession; but he suddenly started and rolled his eyes—wicked with the light of hatred—over at the supposed priest. Something had gone wrong in the procedure and he was warned.

Not another word could be dragged from him. He would moan for water.

He knew one of the rurales by name and addressed a pathetic appeal to him for just a tiny drop of water before he died. They couldn't resist this and passed a cup of water to his lips. He drank eagerly and died in a few minutes.

PURSUIT BEGINS.

Soon after the fight, rurales began galloping by squads and groups in response to the orders of the gefe politico.

By midnight eighty-five had gathered and the pursuit was started. They might as well have pursued rabbits in the thickness of the chaparral.

They came across an old man who had furnished a roan horse to the bandits and who was apparently in league with them. He didn't want to tell anything about them. But they strung him up by the thumbs and then he wanted to tell.

Twice they came across men who had evidently died of their wounds in the saddle and been abandoned. After following the trail at a heartbreaking pace for eleven days they were recalled by telegraph to act as escort for Gen. Treveno, who was coming through the district.

Several bandits were captured from first to last. None of them ever got back to Villa Lerdo to be tried. They "mysteriously disappeared."

When the rurales were asked about them, they shrugged their shoulders and said:

"They violated Article 33 of the Constitution." Which is a singular answer when you come to think of it, for article 33 only refers to escaping prisoners. The captured bandits were "lost" by the rurales.

José was never seen from that day in the corral until he was recognized in Sonoratown of Los Angeles.

GET TOGETHER.

the State Board of Pharmacy is to charge the general dealer the sum of $12 per annum.

But this is a sort of privilege which may be lost at any moment, no matter what trade the general dealer may have built up, or what the general topographical conditions may be in that five-mile circle. The law makes this provision:

FIVE-MILE LIMIT.

"Whenever a registered pharmacist shall establish a pharmacy within five miles by the shortest road from the place of business of a general dealer, no further license shall be granted, and the license already issued shall become void."

The State Board of Pharmacy has made its rulings, which simply put many family necessities off the shelves of the general grocery store, if it has the misfortune of being located within five miles of a drug store. The law provides a fine of not less than $50 or more than $200, or not more than 200 days' imprisonment, or both, for a violation of its provisions.

Grocers say the thing is absurd. They declare the rulings of the State Board of Pharmacy shut out of their stocks even vaseline, castor oil and epsom salts!

In order to fight the law on the grounds of unconstitutionality, the grocers of Southern California recently raised a special fund, and they have been preparing to bring about a test case. However, since the conference of last week, this may be dropped, and the compromise may be effected.

This, however, can only be called a temporary truce. It is evident that sooner or later conditions will arise where the grocers may be arrested for alleged violations of the pharmacy law, and the day of constitutional test is simply postponed.

GROCERS' LIST.

The grocers of Southern California have drawn up a list of the drugs generally kept in stock and which they think they ought to b allowed to sell as a matter of public convenience. Here it is:

All patent medicines, glauber salts, vaseline, Jamaica ginger, bay rum, condition powders, insect powders, turpentine, ammonia, camphor in all forms, glycerine, sheep dip, castor oil as a lubricant, cod liver oil, cream of tartar, eucalyptus oil, alum, sulphur, borax, washing soda, baking soda, iodine, quinine, laudanum, strychnine, wood alcohol, bisulphate of carbon, carbolic acid, formaldehyde, peroxide of hydrogen, calomel, corrosive sublimate, compound licorice powder and paris green.

The last thirteen articles of this list are objected to by Mr. Off of the State Board, and in the final discussion the merchants agreed to the elmination of all of these except iodine, quinine, wood alcohol, arnica and epsom salts. These are the points on which the compromise will hinge.

It is an open secret that the State Board of Pharmacists is not anxious to bring test cases under the new law. It is said the retail grocers of Southern California have been wishing such a case to be brought. They claim they could knock holes in the constitutionality of the whole thing.

Indications now are that the meeting of April 2 will bring about a harmonious conference between the grocers and the State Board and that the customers can get a bottle of vaseline or a dose of epsom salts without endangering the liberty and pocketbook of his tradesman.

GET JEWELS IN ASHES.

Debris from a Burned Hotel Proves Profitable to the Little Brown Men.

SAN BERNARDINO, March 17.—Ashes from the Broadway Van Nuys Hotel of Los Angeles are being used as fertilizer on an orange ranch at Rialto, and reports received from there indicate they are proving a regular gold and diamond mine to Japs who are employed on the place.

One of the little brown men is said to have found a $200 diamond ring, the stone being uninjured by fire. Frequently bits of melted jewelry have been picked up.

Great Educational Contest.

The San Francisco Chronicle is at the present time conducting an educational contest in which the grand capital prize is $1000 in cash which may be used to pay expenses in attending any school, college or university that may best suit the winner's convenience. The prize list also contains a large number of scholarships in some of the best schools and colleges in the State, and ranging in value from $100 up to $650; also five Weber pianola pianos worth $1000 each. The contest is under the management of W. S. Livengood, for many years a member of The Times news staff and who so successfully conducted The Times scholarship contests of 1902, 1903 and 1904. There is a fine opportunity for some ambitious youngster south of the Tehachepi to enter the Chronicle's contest and annex that $1000 prize to Southern California. Some of "Professor" Livengood's old pupils should get in communication with him at once. Address Contest Editor, room 50, Chronicle Building, San Francisco, Cal.

Bullis-Alameda Street Tract

This property is but 15 minutes' ride from Sixth and Main streets—nearer the business center of Los Angeles than many tracts within the city limits. Located on the Pacific Electric Railway, Santa Ana Line, at the junction on the Southern Pacific Motor Line to Long Beach—there are two methods of transit direct to the tract. The property is well improved. Streets are graded and oiled. Plenty of good artesian water. Lots all level—fertile soil. Nothing like this anywhere at the price. No greater opening in Southern California for men and women now paying rent—who want to put up a little home that their rent money will pay for. Reasonable building restrictions. Remember, this property is in a district that is fast becoming a manufacturing center; is on the direct line to Long Beach and San Pedro—two deep-water harbors. Property so situated will increase in value rapidly. For investment, or for a home, there is a handsome profit for buyers in this tract.

[illegible] OUR LEMONS.

[illegible] has been the [illegible] than oranges [illegible] which has just passed. [illegible] for California lem- [illegible], by the way, [illegible] and more insistent. [illegible] as many could be [illegible] and they bring rela- [illegible] than foreign fruit. [illegible] asking for foreign [illegible] as they did last [illegible] with two or [illegible] the difference is very [illegible] though there has [illegible] in the past two [illegible] has been nothing like what there will be in the years to come. It won't be long, at the present rate of increase in popularity, when the California lemon will wipe the foreign fruit out of existence so far as commercial imports are concerned.

The California lemon arrives here in better condition. It has a better color and its flavor is more satisfactory. Foreign lemons must necessarily be picked long before they are ripe and the long journey over the ocean, often in unventilated holds of slow vessels, doesn't do them any good. They are flavorless, in many instances, and they will not keep long after they arrive in retail stores. This last fact makes them expensive and reduces demand, when it is possible to buy some other fruit.

The lemon trade of New York has declined. Not alone the import trade, which has suffered because imports have been scattered among other ports, but there isn't the retail demand for lemons there was a few years ago. Whether the gradual increase in the quantity of oranges available at low prices, or whether the fact that oranges are more generally consumed now has caused a reduction in the demand for lemoms cannot be said, but the fact seems to be well authenticated that there is less retail demand than formerly for lemons. It is impossible to find anything definite that can explain away this apparent incongruity.

It seems, however, that the free arrival of Californias partially overcomes this and that sales are steadily increasing wherever it is possible to obtain Californias in sufficient quantities to fill all requests for them. The lemon is a healthful article of food and if there is any reduction in consumption it will be injurious for consumers. They supply certain acids to the system which can be obtained in no other way and which are very essential for the preservation of health.

ACIDS REDUCE SALES.

It might be pointed out in passing that the wholesale introduction of artificial acids for summer drinks and other purposes in the past few years has had considerable influence in reducing demand for lemons. If something which flavors various articles in the same way can be obtained for a fraction of what lemons cost there is no room for doubt as to which a certain class of consumers will buy. Something has been done toward eliminating this evil but the effectiveness of the work has been so small that it is very doubtful whether it has really amounted to anything or not. The effect upon the trade has not been noticeable, at any rate.

There ought to be a vigorous demand for the use of pure fruit juices and California's representatives in Congress could do their State a good service if they secured the insertion in the pure food bill of a clause which would compel the using of lemon juice for flavoring where the lemon flavor is wanted. That would help in recreating the market for lemons upon what was once a profitable basis, but which is now more or less precarious.

GRAPE FRUIT SELLS WELL.

Grape fruit has sold at high prices during the week. Sales have been as high as $8.87½, which is the high record for the season. Sometimes they sell as high as $15, but that is exceptional and is seldom reached. In recent years, while grape fruit has been plentiful, there has been a continued increase in demand for it. The result is that business has been upon a much steadier basis and it has paid, in more cases, to send grape fruit to this market. The high price is readily paid by those who want good fruit and business has improved accordingly.

The early arrivals of that sort of fruit met a cold reception in this market, and not for years was it possible to secure much recognition for it. But steadily it is winning its way and each year there is more handled in this city than there was the year before. These increased sales have brought correspondingly increased profits until today dealers find it one of the most profitable of the citrus fruits.

In outlying territory its popularity is increasing. There is a growing demand in the suburbs which is helping New York receivers dispose of their goods. All this is excellent and indicates that there will be something still better in the years to come. California grape fruit is a favorite here and there is never half enough to fill orders. This market doesn't care particularly for the large sizes, but on the contrary wants the medium sizes which are heavy and full of juice. The large ones are dry and more or less shriveled when they reach here.

WHOSE ARE THE SOCKS? THE FLOOR-WALKER AS UMPIRE.

"Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble;" and here in Los Angeles is a class of men who rise to trouble in the morning, wade knee deep through it all day, and dream perchance of it at night.

They are the floor walkers in our department stores. And woman, lovely woman, is the source that trouble springs from. Mere man, when he invades the precincts sacred to the lingerie that ladies wear, and other things that daze the timid bachelor, goes tiptoe, modest-eyed, gets what he wants or what he thinks he wants and steals away.

The floor walker is argus-eyed. He must be everywhere, and see all ways at once. He is responsible for the discipline of the help, must settle all disputes between the patient clerks and heedless customers, and always he must smile and smile, and still be willing to smile once more when tired nature has almost smiled her last.

The ordinary troubles of a floorwalker are ample to develop his humility, and when some lady brings in a piece of filmed, white fabric that she has bought and worn and soiled, but wishes to exchange, he bottles up his wrath and purrs to her in gentle tones his willingness to please her if he could, but proves his inability to do so and speeds her on her way without offending her. He is a Chesterfield and diplomat wrapped up in one.

"One morning in a bargain rush," a Broadway floor walker remarked," we had some fine lace remnants in the show window to advertise our sale, and when the counter stock was gone, three ladies bent on getting what they wanted without losing time, not saying by your leave or if you please, climbed out into the window and engaged in a struggle for the possession of the lace. All three had hold of one piece that was especially fine and neither would give it up. I was called in as judge and heard their stories, and from what I heard I found that each of them had seized it first, and neither one of them would waive her right to it, so being very far from Solomon, I took the lace away from them and kept it in the store. They were all offended, but I could do nothing else.

"On bargain days it is not in the least unusual to find two women quarreling over some article which each one claims, and I have seen them wrought up so that they resorted to violence and actually pulled hair about a remnant worth only a few cents. Once two ladies had a piece of lace four or five yards in length, and each was pulling at it, as if salvation depended on her getting it. I saw an easy way to settle matters, walked up quietly and cut the lace in two and then neither woman wanted it, and each of them eyed me as if I had insulted her. Ive seen the best of ladies, women that you wouldn't for a moment think capable of such a thing, switch prices on remnants in a sale and put the cheapest tag upon the finest piece and then with utter innocence attempt to buy it. And they very often do succeed in getting things that way.

THE SHOPLIFTERS.

"We have to watch for pilfering, too," he said. "We have a store detective to prevent it but he can't be every place at once and all our employés are instructed to watch their customers. A woman with an ample cloak or cape is watched most carefully, for cloaks and capes afford great opportunities for concealment. You would be surprised indeed to know the class of women who steal things from us, little trifles that they are amply able to buy. Wives of prominent lawyers, bankers, financiers and women socially the leaders of the town forget themselves and yield to just a moment's overpowering temptation only to regret it afterward. One lady came in here the other day and bought a pair of gloves. "I took these gloves," she said, "because I couldn't get a clerk to wait on me. I waited until I couldn't spare a moment, so I just walked out, and now I've come to pay for them." Another lady wrote a letter, sending in some money but not signing any name. She said she'd yielded to the devil just one moment and stolen a cheap handkerchief because she saw that nobody was watching her, and that, since stealing it she hadn't had a moment's rest or sleep and wanted to pay for it, and wound up by saying that she would never commit another sin, for this one had robbed her of her self-respect.

"We have to treat these people carefully, for notoriety is very often hurtful to our store, and many cases are never heard of, for we send the women to the superintendent who talks to them and then releases them unless they are professionals, in which case we always prosecute."

THE MEN HAVE CAUGHT THE DISEASE.

A floor walker of another store made quite a startling statement. "The bargain rush," he said, "is deemed peculiarly a fancy feminine, but among my customers I have fifteen or twenty bargain-hunting men. At last he has arrived, but in his method he is different from the ladies. They all play the Rugby game while he steals around softly hunting bargains, judging quality correctly and knowing when a thing is cheap. If I look at him very hard he seems embarrassed and gets sheepish looking, but he is here to stay, for more and more men join the little army that has entered into the peculiarly feminine pastime of Rugby bargain rush. The average man is far from being at home in a department store. He comes in timidly, sent by his wife to get a thing that he is ignorant about, and nine times out of ten he sidles up to me and holds a sample out and asks where 'this' is kept. Some men come in and look around and then start out and I must go and rescue them and comfort them and help them out, so you can see that trouble comes to me from every place. And then the girls chew gum. Our rules do not permit it, but chew gum they will, and now and then I see one reveling in stolen luxury, but when I go to her, the gum has disappeared. She's swallowed it and 'No, sir, I don't chew gum at all,' she says.

"Our girls and all the saleswomen in all department stores call money back to customers. A lady buys some goods and offers a five dollar bill in payment. 'Five dollars,' says the girl, and then she marks the amount on the ticket and the cashier o. k.'s it. This is to prevent wrangles over change. Very often a woman will buy a thing and pay for it with a quarter, and then declare that she had given the salesgirl fifty cents. These troubles come to me, and I must argue, reason, plead and do my best to settle it without offending the customer.

HAS TO SMILE.

"I have to see that all the help is here by 8 o'clock and ready to begin. And sometimes when we have a bargain sale, there is a crowd of women waiting for the doors to open, and when they do the women pour in like a flock of sheep and rush and pull the bargain things about and quarrel with each other, and appeal to me until I nearly lose my mind, but still I have to smile. One lady in a bargain store, some time ago, resolved herself into a flying wedge to buck a bargain counter jam, and broke a rib. That seems unusual, but it isn't, for they're very often hurt and then more troubles come to me."

Another floor walker says that most of his troubles come from bridal veils and mourning goods. "A woman will come in and buy a bridal veil," he says, "and then when she has used it and mussed it up, she'll bring it back and ask me to exchange it for something else. Of course, I can't, but I must treat her with the greatest courtesy and keep her friendship for the house. With mourning goods it's just about the same. Worn once they are not needed and are brought back here soiled. I wish you'd come in here and see our 'pit'" he said. "You've seen the rush and roar and whirl on 'change, perhaps. Well some time when there's something doing in our store, come in and look around and then you will not ask if a floor walker has troubles. The ladies rush and wrangle, pull and haul. They grab and quarrel over trifling remnants and seem entirely forgetful of all nicety or refinement, in their rush to pick up something cheap. And while I'm walking up and down the floor I have a thousand questions asked me, 'Where's this?' 'Where's that?' 'My wife wants some of this stuff'—from a man.

"The other day a lady came to me and said that she had given one of the clerks 45 cents in payment for a purchase. I asked the girl about it and she denied that she had made the sale. The customer was positive; so was the girl. And while we were discussing it another floor walker came up and took part in the talk. Seeing him willing to take up the matter, I modestly withdrew and he soon settled it by giving the woman 45 cents out of his own pocket.

"I didn't know what I was getting into," he said, "I'd have been willing to give her more than that if she had claimed it, for she was a terror." And she was.

MUSCULAR PHILANTHROPY.

"I have to watch the salesgirls very closely, to see that they are always perfectly polite. I have to watch the little cash boys and cash girls to see that they don't cut-up too much. The other day I caught two of them shooting pins around the store. I have to watch the ladies pull and push and tug around the counters where the cheap things are, and altogether, from opening time until the day is done and doors are shut, I live in trouble.

And so the floor walker has troubles all the time; but if you are a man and tiptoe in among the ladies, half-afraid, and tell him that your wife has sent you for "some of this stuff" showing him a bedraggled fragment of mysterious weave, he smiles at you, and with a pleasant voice forgets all troubles, strips you of your own, and says: "Two aisles down this way and—ask the saleslady for 'silkaline.'"

He is a wonder of self-control; he is the umpire of the bargain rush. He must be omnipresent, and see everything. And if the law of compensation be not fallacy, he gets rewarded in the ultimate by being kept so busy listening to the troubles of other people that he hasn't time to gather any troubles of his own.

LEXIBLE RUBBER PLATES

Have many advantages over the old, thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates, and even over gold plates, being much lighter and thinner. These plates are flexible, only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere better to the roof of the mouth. Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any others and will not break, as they will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process and made ONLY by us. A perfect fit guaranteed in every case of plate work.

Persons having trouble with their plates or in having them fitted are invited to call and consult us.

Dr. Schiffman has extracted ten teeth for me, and I never felt the least annoyance, the operation being absolutely painless. He has made me a set of teeth that are highly satisfactory. They fit perfectly and feel fine.

I cheerfully recommend the doctor as a conscientious, efficient, painstaking dentist to any and all that require his services.
MRS. W. L. EWING,
1142 E. Thirty-eighth st.

Dr. Schiffman extracted eight teeth for me without a particle of pain, and afterwards made me a full upper flexible plate, which fits me perfectly.

I have given them a good test, as it has been a year and a half since they were made. I gladly recommend the doctor to all who are in need of dental services.
MRS. EMMA BIRKLE,
430 South Moline avenue.

I am pleased to state that Dr. Schiffman fitted me with both upper and lower bridge work, which I have worn for over a year with perfect ease and satisfaction.
MRS. CHAS. E. PACKMAN,
1215 Berendo st.

After having six plates made, all of which were very UNsatisfactory, I decided to try Dr. Schiffman's methods, and am pleased to say that I am now having solid comfort for the first time in over four years, for the teeth that Dr. Schiffman made for me are more than satisfactory in every way.

$1,000 REWARD TO WEAK MEN

A MESSAGE TO MEN WHO WANT STRENGTH

I have perfected a new Belt, better and stronger than I have ever made before, a Belt which will transform the weakest, puniest specimen of "half man" into a perfect cyclone of strength, and I want every weak man to use it. I want a test case. Therefore I offer $1000 in gold to any weak man who will use this Belt under my direction for four months and then show by examination of any reputable physician that he is not cured, sound and well.

This is especially directed to men who have doctored for years without benefit. I want men with Rheumatism, Pains in the Back, Weak Kidneys, Sciatica, Lumbago, Varicocele, Prostatic Trouble, Nervousness, Weakness, Torpid Liver, Indigestion and Dyspepsia. All of these troubles in chronic form I can cure with this new Belt, even after all other treatments have failed. To every weak, debilitated man who wears this new Belt I give my SELL SEASHORE CITY BONDS.

Ocean Park Securities Are Taken by Los Angeles Buyers at Par Value.

OCEAN PARK, March 17.—The City Trustees have accepted the bid of the Adams-Phillips Company of Los Angeles for the $50,000 budget of bonds recently authorized. The offer is to accept the bonds at par, the buyer agreeing to pay accrued interest at 5 per cent. since February 1.

Of these bonds the sum of $20,000 is to be used for sewerage and septic-tank purposes; $10,000 for a garbage incinerator, $5000 for the fire department's uses, a like sum for a City Hall and other public buildings, and $10,000 for a public-building site.

SEEK IRON THIEF.

The police officers are searching for the man—or there must be more than one of him—who stole 400 pounds of heavy link iron chain. It was taken from the ocean front, where the builders are engaged on the bulkhead. Suspicion points to the Hercules who recently took a cord of wood from the sands, and when detected in the act was excused when he pleaded his belief that he was taking only driftwood.

LOCAL "BETSY ROSS."

Mrs. Arcadia de Baker, Who Helped Make a Historic Flag, to Take Part in Coming Celebration.

When the sixtieth anniversary of the first planting of the Stars and Stripes on California soil is celebrated during the present summer, the demonstration will be participated in by one who as a young girl assisted in the manufacture of the flag that was raised at San Diego by Commodore Stockton.

That person is Mrs. Arcadia Bandini de Baker, the daughter of Señor Juan Bandini, whose father, Almirante Jose Bandini, commanded the Spanish man-of-war Nimfa in the battle of Trafalgar in 1805.

Señor Bandini was a prominent resident of the San Diegan pueblo when Stockton sailed into San Diego Bay in August, 1846, and took possession in the name of the United States, San Diego being at that time in possession of Mexico. Having no national colors suitable for hoisting on so auspicious an occasion, Commodore Stockton visited the home of Señor Bandini and to him related the circumstances of his predicament.

Bandini promptly called to Stockton's aid his three daughters, to whom he confided the secret. It was but a few moments until their nimble fingers were busy with the task of making the flag that passed into history as the first to float the national colors over San Diego Bay. With red and blue flannel and common white muslin sheets they constructed the stars and stripes and bars that were hoisted by Stockton. It was by that act that the authority of the United States government was established in California.

This historic flag is preserved in the archives of the government at the city of Washington, and beside it are the names of the three pioneer daughters of California. Their names are also at Washington, bound into history with Commodore Stockton's official report of the act. The three misses were: Josefa, who later became Mrs. Cave J. de Couts, and died several years ago highly respected; Ysabela, who married P. C. Carrillo, one of the members of California's first Legislature. She also is dead.

The third, and the only living one, is Arcadia, who at the age of 15 married Abel Stearns. He came to Monterey from Boston in 1829 and drifting south was a few years later the owner of Santa Catalina Island. He died at San Francisco in 1871, in his seventy-third year. In 1877 Mrs. Stearns was married to Col. Robert L. Baker and by his death in 1890 she again became a widow. She has since made her home at Santa Monica, on Ocean avenue, and also maintains a residence in Los Angeles.

The anniversary of the flag raising will be celebrated all along the line in California, and will be participated in by the several patriotic orders, including California Pioneers, Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West, Veterans of the Mexican War and Sloat Monument Fund Association. The date of observance at Los Angeles will fall on August 13, but preceding that will come a grand reunion at the Santa Monica Soldiers' Home of the veterans of all wars of the United States.

ARE THEY ALL GETTING RICH?

One Would Think so from the Goldfield Tales.

Promoters Busy Floating Stock Companies.

Hot Air Selling at Five to Fifty Cents "Per."

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD, (Nev.) March 14.—D. H. Peery and Henry McCormick, the Salt Lake City capitalists, visited Goldfield this week and purchased from Judge S. E. Vermilyea and associates the control of the Manhattan Gold Hill Mining Company, owner of the famous Stray Dog claim in the new camp. Judge Vermilyea turned over 290,000 shares at 50 cents per share, and L. M. Sullivan turned in something over 200,000 shares which he had been buying in recently at 12½ cents per share, it is stated. The facts about the amount paid Sullivan have not been announced but it is believed that the price could not have been less than the amount stated. The deal also includes Indian Camp claim and Mayflower both also on Gold Hill among the growing list of producers. It is presumed now that Stray Dog, Mayflower and Indian Camp will be consolidated into one company.

This is the most important transaction that has taken place in Manhattan properties. The deal also throws a side light on fortune making in Nevada. It was only last fall that the local papers were telling the story of how Judge Vermilyea bought the Stray Dog claim for $16,000. It now sells for nearly $200,000. It was one of the first properties incorporated in Manhattan. A block of 50,000 shares of treasury stock was advertised for sale last week and was largely over-subscribed at 25 cents. Five lessees working on Stray Dog claim are hoisting ore.

The initial price of this stock was 5 cents, but little was sold at that price. More was sold at 10 cents, and the price has now been advanced to 15 cents, and application for listing has been made on the San Francisco exchange. Local people have been heavy purchasers of this stock. The Manhattan Company and Williams Company have been back of the Little Joe and Chipmunk company. The Little Joe has a four-foot vein of ore. It was floated at 5 cents and has been selling at 15 cents on the San Francisco exchange. Chipmunk is being floated at 25 cents and no certificates are being issued in less than 1000 share lots. The stock is about to be listed. The Nevada Brokerage Company, F. H. Lathrop, secretary, and A. H. Mayne, the prominent Sandstorm lessee, are back of Manhattan Gold King Mining Company, just being floated at 20 cents. This company owns the Uno claim on Gold Hill near the Annie Laurie and other producers. January Jones of Goldfield, and B. H. Scheftels & Co., of Chicago, are back of the Manhattan Wonder Gold Mining Company owning the Prairie Dog group, and other claims making an immense territory of 125 acres. Some of this group lies between the Seyler Humphrey and the great Consolidated grounds and is very valuable. This stock is being sold now at 20 cents.

G. S. Johnson, the young man who has made an enviable reputation during the past year in Goldfield is the active man back of the Manhattan Whale Company, the stock of which is now being sold at 15 cents, and is shortly to be listed. This company owns the St. George and Virginia claims adjoining the Stray Dog and in the midst of all the choice claims on Gold Hill. There is no better property in the new camp and if the company fails to make good it will be surprising. There are a few others mentioned elsewhere. They are all prominent in the Nevada camps and the fact that they are such clean, promising propositions is a matter of congratulation among business men who have the reputation of the State at heart.

More ore has been uncovered on Commonwealth and that part of the district is attracting more and more attention.

There is much interest in the Red Top Extension Company which was recently floated, the stock having been in demand at from 6 to 9 cents. The property includes a fraction of two acres of ground on Columbia Mountain.

INVESTIGATING AUCTION FAKES.

SELLERS OF CHEAP JEWELRY MAY BE PROSECUTED.

M. Marin on Rack for Alleged Dealing in Worthless Watches—Two of Duped Ones Anxious to Swear to Complaints — Charles Fox Gets Heavy Sentence.

Finding that he had bought a watch, the works of which are of the key winding variety, but placed in a stem winding case, Milo Brock, accompanied by L. B. Potter, sought a patrolman Friday night and after telling the officer his troubles, led the way to the cheap auction shop run by M. Marin at No. 534 South Main street, where he said he had bought the alleged timepiece.

At Marin's place they found Raymond Still, a young man who recently came to this city from Tempe, Ariz., wrangling with the proprietor and demanding his money back, claiming he had been duped.

Still told the officer he had been attracted to the place by the shouting of the auctioneer about a watch, which was loudly proclaimed to be a fine timepiece, Waltham 17-jewel movement in a gold case. Still bid on the watch and finally bought it in for $6. When the watch was turned over to him Still immediately saw that it was neither a Waltham nor was it in a good case. He refused to accept it and demanded his money back.

Marin, his capper, Joseph Kennedy, and the auctioneer, Harry Williams, were taken into custody and they were "sweated" by the detectives and then released as no complaint had been issued against them. Yesterday morning Still, Brock and Potter called on the City Prosecutor and told their story. No complaint was issued and Mr. Frederickson has taken the question under advisement, and if he believes it possible to prosecute the auction fakers will issue a complaint tomorrow. Meanwhile Brock has a worthless watch and Still is out $6.

FOX PLEADS GUILTY.

Charles J. Fox was arraigned before Justice Chambers in the Police Court yesterday morning on a charge of embezzlement and immediately pleaded guilty. He was sentenced to pay $300 fine or serve 180 days in the City Jail. Fox is taking the days.

Formerly Fox was a collector of the Parmelee-Dohrmann Company and was a trusted employé. The company discovered that Fox was neglecting to turn in some of his collections and had him arrested. He was charged with embezzling $48, but his employers say he also appropriated several other small bills to his own use. Fox had absolutely no explanation to make and refused to tell what he had done with the money.

The Beautiful REDONDO VILLA TRACT The Beautiful

Only $90 Per Lot, $4 Down, $4 Per Month. No Interest, No Taxes

[illegible] level lots, 50x150 feet. Rich Soil, pure Water, Fine Climate. All lots, including [illegible] price—$90 per lot—no more, no less. You know what you have to pay—[illegible] higher. Our tract is immediately adjoining the city limits of Redondo, where over $2,000,000 have already been expended in grand and substantial improvements. The beautiful Redondo Villa Tract is on the Camino Real (King's Highway) boulevard, connecting Redondo with Los Angeles. We have just bought this beautiful tract for $145,000, and, believing in the principle that it pays to let our customers make a profit, hence we have decided on this grand profit sharing plan. We will make a profit and all our purchasers are guaranteed a profit of 25 per cent. within one year, as per our written agreement.

Mr. H. E. Huntington Is Expending Over a Million Dollars Around Redondo in Substantial Improvements.

[illegible] to Redondo and see for yourself. At Jefferson street and Grand avenue see [illegible] stacks of heavy steel rails for the double-tracking of the present two [illegible] lines of the Los Angeles & Redondo Railway company. The rails are ar[illegible] daily. Dirt will soon fly. Better buy now. Then there's the Los Angeles-[illegible] Railway company's electric line to Redondo, the broad gauging of which will [illegible]. And in addition to the above three electric lines now running to Re[illegible] is the great Santa Fe steam railroad. With four lines of transportation, it would seem as if same would be sufficient, but surveyors are in the field laying out the shortest line of all to connect Los Angeles with its choicest seashore suburb—Redondo. Mr. Huntington has let the contract for the building at Redondo of the largest electric power house on the Pacific Coast to cost $800,000. A suburban local electric railroad is now nearing completion at Redondo. The grand three-story business block of Mr. W. M. Garland at Redondo will be finished in about two weeks. Follow successful men like Mr. Huntington and Mr. Garland—they know that Redondo is substantial and a safe place to invest in. Buy anywhere around Redondo and you are sure to make large profits. Three commercial wharves. A safe harbor by twenty years' practical test. Redondo is permanent and has just begun to grow. Then, again, referring to successful men, we notice that the following have bought to the north of Redondo: Mr. Edwin Chambers, the far-sighted general freight agent of the Santa Fe; Mr. George H. Peck, the successful banker of San Pedro; Mr. John J. Byrne, the capable general passenger agent of the Santa Fe, and Dan Murphy, the millionaire oil operator of Los Angeles.

[illegible] that your purchase is made with the distinct [illegible] that we will refund all money paid us, with 6 per [illegible] interest added, if after visiting the Redondo [illegible] it is found that we have misrepresented our proposition [illegible] particular.

25 Per Cent. Guaranteed Increase.

[illegible] down and $4 per month until paid for we will sell [illegible] "Redondo Villa Tract" lot for $90, subject to the fol[illegible] guarantee from us: If at the expiration of one year [illegible] purchase this $90 lot is not worth $112.50—or 25 per [illegible] increase—based on the price at which our corps of [illegible] will then be selling similar lots, we will refund all [illegible] money you have paid us, with 6 per cent. interest ad[illegible]. If you should die at any time before payments [illegible] completed we will give to your heirs a deed to [illegible] without further cost. If you should lose employment [illegible] you will not forfeit the land, but as each written [illegible] of sickness or non-employment is received month[illegible] your time for payment will be extended another month.

Our Restrictions.

[illegible] saloons, no shanties, no factories. Purchasers are not [illegible] to build, but if they do, then they must erect at[illegible] looking houses, there being no "dollar limit." We [illegible] it to each purchaser to build a pretty looking house, [illegible] must be neatly painted, as we know that for a mod[illegible] sum one can build a very pretty bungalow. BOLSA CHICA RELICS.

Archeologists Will Look Over Finds Made in That Region by Huntington Beach Man.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, March 17.—Dr. F. M. Palmer, curator of the Southwest Society of the Archeological Institute of America, will visit A. M. Schoule of Huntington Beach within the next day or two to inquire into the finding of relics in the Bolsa Chica region, that date back to the days of prehistoric inhabitants. Mortars, pestles, arrowheads, crude tools and other relics have been picked up on the ground.

MUCH STREET WORK.

From Eleventh to Twenty-third streets the sidewalks and curbing have been put in, with the exception of a few feet, where the ground has been too wet. The last of the trees are being planted on Twenty-second street. The grading teams and crews are working on Acacia avenue at present, and as soon as possible the streets will be cleaned, stripped of grass and weeds and graded and leveled in readiness for a coat of oil.

INSTITUTE OFFICERS.

The Sunday-school Institute held at Wintersburg recently resulted in the election of the following officers for the coming year: J. T. Shaffer, president; Eugene Griset, vice-president; Miss H. S. Hazeltine, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. R. E. Larter, superintendent primary department; Mrs. U. Sid Lemon, superintendent of home department.

Read What A Few Say About Us:

I have had a tooth crowned at the People's Dental Parlors and am delighted with the work.
A. JOHNSON, 1390 Newton st.

Have had some plate work done by the People's Dentists and am perfectly satisfied with the work and can recommend them very highly
J. E. WYCKOFF, 4th and San Pedro sts.

For most thorough, painstaking dental work I cheerfully recommend the Peoples' Dentists.
MRS. C. N. ANDERSON, 1400 Downey ave.

I have had some extracting and bridge work done at the People's Dental Parlors, also a plate made to my entire satisfaction, and so reasonably that I cheerfully recommend them to all my friends.
MRS. A. A. HURON, 2634 Humboldt st.

I have had some bridge work done at the People's Dental Parlors very satisfactorily, and I will gladly recommend them to my friends.
W. H. BENT, 431 Temple street.

I have had one swing bridge and two fillings put in at the People's Dental Parlors, which could not be done any better.
G. W. COOK, 637½ S. Olive.

I have had some bridge work done by the People's Dentists, and gladly recommend them.
G. PHILLIPPS, 121 S. Hill st.

I have had most careful treatment by the People's Dentists, and their work has given me great satisfaction.
MRS. LINA M. COTINS, 2115 Griffith ave.

I have had some very satisfactory work done by the People's Dentists, and I highly recommend them.
LOUIS SKERO, 116 Commercial st.

I have had work done by the People's Dentists which has proved most satisfactory. For painless, thorough work I can recommend them very highly.
MRS. EVA LAIRD, 538 Crocker st.

I have had quite a good deal of work done at the People's Dental Parlors for both my wife and myself, and to our entire satisfaction. This speaks for itself.
C. W. JACOBY, Hemet, Cal.

I had two teeth extracted absolutely without pain at the People's Dental Parlors. I recommend them very highly.
MRS. M. ROSENBLEM, 3667 Trinity st.

I wish to state that I have had great trouble with my teeth for the last 15 years, have tried to get satisfactory work on them from four different dentists, without success, and was recommended to the People's Dental Parlors; they have made me a bridge and other work that is not only a comfortable fit, but is done so well that no one can tell they are not my own.

HE BLAMES M'CARTHY.

'FRISCO'S TOTEM MAYOR ALSO DRAGGED INTO SCHEME.

Deposed Superintendent of Sewers Claims the Pin-Head Union Municipal Bosses Have Been Violating Civil Service—A Wheel Within a Wheel, and Other Wheels.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—"When thieves fall out honest men get their dues," is a trite old platitude that sometimes holds good. Whether or not there are any "honest" men figuring in Frisco's latest political scandal remains to be proved; but anyway, the late-deposed Superintendent of Sewers is out with a tomahawk, on the war-path, in quest of some good brand of vengeance. He incidentally makes a few grim hints of something deep, dark and dubious in the Schmitz-McCarthy jungles of administration. It has long been known, from the odors wafted from the totemites' Denmark, that there is something rotten there, and that 'Frisco's City Hall had become an abattoir of many red political plots and perplexing deeds, but when the head of E. J. Brandon went into the Mayor's guillotine waste basket, it developed that the wrong head had dropped. In other words, it is secretly believed that Brandon knows too much of the "inner circle" of this Western Federation of Municipal Grafters, and that an exposure may follow. Speaking of Brandon's removal, the Bulletin very conservatively says:

Strong in the belief that he can win in court, E. J. Brandon, who was removed by the Board of Public Works from the position of Superintendent of Sewers, will fight for reinstatement. He will allege a palpable violation of civil service rules governing municipal appointments, and demand that he be restored to his office.

Not only was Brandon deposed as Superintendent of Sewers, but he was removed entirely from the service of the city. The board of works accomplished its purpose by abolishing the office he held, and creating instead a position named "Overseer of Sewers," to which E. L. Nolan was appointed. Nolan had previously served as assistant to Brandon.

The ex-superintendent attributes his removal by the board to P. H. McCarthy. The Building Trades president, he says, went to the Mayor. Then Schmitz, he is convinced, yielded to McCarthy and passed the order along to the Board of Public Works.

Brandon and McCarthy have for several years been on bad terms. The beginning of their enmity dates back to the time McCarthy advocated the election of Crocker as Mayor and the defeat of Schmitz. At least, so avers Brandon. He states that both were members of the board of directors of the Organized Labor Publishing Company, and while serving in that capacity quarreled over politics, McCarthy charging that Brandon was working in the interest of Mayor Schmitz.

The two never made peace. According to the statement of Brandon, McCarthy vowed vengeance after one stormy meeting of the labor paper's board. The dismissed superintendent thinks he set about encompassing his humiliation immediately after the election of Schmitz for the third term.

"I was removed from office to satisfy a demand of P. H. McCarthy," said Brandon this morning. "McCarthy, who formerly fought Mayor Schmitz, but who now is friendly with him, went to the Mayor and demanded that I be ousted. The Mayor gave the order to the Board of Public Works, and I had to go. McCarthy said he would get me. We have been on unfriendly terms ever since he supported Crocker for Mayor. He has succeeded at last as far as the action of the Board of Public Works yesterday is concerned, but I held my office as a bona-fide civil service appointee, and was illegally removed. I think I have a good case and will go into court. The abolition of one office and the immediate creation of another with the same duties merely to accomplish my removal was unlawful, and I think I can prove so in court."

Brandon has an excellent civil service record. He ranked first in the examination for the selection of eligibles for the position of Superintendent of Sewers, and was appointed to the office several years ago. Nolan never qualified for assistant superintendent before he was given that place, a year ago. At the time of his appointment under Brandon he was third on the eligible list of bricklayers. Brandon is third vice-president of the International Bricklayers' Union. Nolan is interested in a saloon near the Building Trades headquarters on Mission street, and is also one of the backers of the Manhattan Athletic Club.

That Brandon will go into court is certain. He belongs to the Municipal Service Association, of which Judge Slack is attorney.

The Board of Public Works yesterday dismissed J. B. Cowden from the service of the city. Cowden was Superintendent of Street Cleaning last year, and for several years before, but (for some petty offense) incurred the displeasure of the board of works, and was reduced to the rank of a field deputy in the City Engineer's office. Recently the City Engineer notified the board that he had no need for a field deputy, so a resolution was adopted yesterday abolishing the position, which carried with it the ousting of Cowden.
